GAS ON STOMACH AND BELCHING OF GAS

I have spoken before of a famous hockey player who suffered so much with "gas" pressure in the stomach during the first period of the game that he felt that he could not go back to play the second or third periods. The trainer gave him a magnesia tablet or a little baking soda and he would go out on the ice—belching a little—but able to play his usual game.

The club physician then talked to him, pointing out that it was not gas from indigestion that was causing his stomach symptoms but air that he swallowed due to his nervousness; that, fermentation of food in the stomach was really uncommon.

In Handbook of Therapy, (Oliver, Cabot, Philebrick), published by the American Medical Association, indigestion who think that it is the fermentation of food that causes belching are advised not to try to drink beverages that will reduce the amount of which is normal) by the use of bicarbonate of soda.

"In the majority of cases the gas present in the stomach has been swallowed," says Dr. Alvarez. "Air swallowing is a frequent habit. Nervous persons are apt to do it. Treatment consists in explanation to the patient of the true cause of his symptoms, in nerve sedatives, the giving of mild medicines to quiet the irritation in the stomach and in which distress is produced by gas or belching, there may be relief from the use of bismuth. The Birth Of Paper

In any given day in the 1787's, one hard-working valmen could turn out 3 or 3 reams of paper (depending on size and weight) by hand. In any given day in 1937, one machine can produce 25 tons of paper.

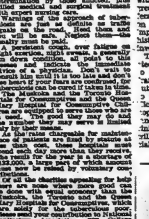
The revolutionary machine, which made such progress possible was the invention of a Frenchman named Nicholas Robert, in Holland in the age of paper-making and the printing press. Gangs of that of John (movable type) Gutenberg.

One morning in 1798, Nicholas Louis Robert, of the industry ry announcing the "discovery of a machine which will make paper without fire, by means of machines, sheets of paper of large size, even twelve feet wide and fifty feet long."

At this France had an expensive employee on the civic lists. A chap named Napoleon, and he was busy with all and sundry and incurring bills could not see their way clear to. The fact that times were hard in the Continent contributed to an unfavorable reception of Robert's invention. The early history of the new paper-making is full as 4-79 feet per minute.

The French government appreciated the value of Robert's invention to the extent of a grant of 8,000 ance and a patent for fifteen years he could not see their way clear to financing a working model. So Nicholas Louis Robert, one of the special partners travelled to England, where they found the Fourdrinier brothers, wealthy stationers, drilling and able to supply the financial backing for the machine which

DON'T TAKE CHANCES



When tuberculosis catches, there is no uncertainty as to the result if it is neglected. But in the early stages there is preventable—it is curable if taken in time.

It is unfortunate that so many of those who are afflicted with tuberculosis do not carry on the proper medical treatment or, obliged by family ties, refuse to carry on. Thus they prolong their chance of recovery and endangering the lives of those around them.

A recent article in the Ontario Medical Association Journal by Dr. Gordon Bates, Medical Officer of Health of the Toronto association between parents and children, and the danger of contact, stressed the importance of fatal disease by the child from the parent. Dr. Bates stated that in many cases the disease is unrecognized and uncared for. Such cases, he says, are a real danger to the community, demanding the abandonment of all opportunities for carry on. Instead of apprehension by those affected, plus the recommendation by those officials, plus with expert nursing care.

Dr. Bates says that much of unfounded fears as facts as details in the case of Dr. Bates' article, voluntary confinement to bed.

For all the charities appealing for help this Christmas season, none has a better claim than the Christmas Seal campaign of the National Association, Many lives are saved each year through the care, solely for the tuberculous people. MAKE THE OTHER PERSON FEEL IMPORTANT

HOW TO WIN FRIENDS AND INFLUENCE PEOPLE

By DALE CARNEGIE — Author of the famous book of this name

"There is one very important law of human conduct which, if obeyed, will bring us friends and happiness. The law is this: Always make the other person feel important—and do it sincerely.

"The greatest teacher of all time summed it up in these words: 'Do unto others as you would have others do unto you'."

"But how? When? Where? The answer is all the time, everywhere.

"Almost every person you meet feels superior to you in some way. Then let these people feel that you appreciate their importance in their respective ways. But remember, flattery is useless. You must be sincere."

"Considerate little phrases such as 'I'm sorry to trouble you,' 'Won't you please,' 'Would you mind,' used throughout the day will make the people with whom you come in contact feel that you look upon them as fellow human beings, and recognize their individual importance. And don't forget to give praise whenever you can."

"There is no better place for you to begin applying this magic formula than right in your own home. Your wife must have many good points. Let her know you see at once or you wouldn't have married her. But how long has it been since you told her how much you appreciate her? How long?"

Congenial gifts for feminine friends. Even how, when stingy economy don't enter into it, they still ponder their cases and clothe shiny noses at "practical" gifts.

At Christmas, if ever, is a necessity for every woman and carried in the purse of every man, a fountain pen or a gift just gets tired of her old one. And anyhow, she probably has three already, but does not have one for each handbag, her automobile, and another for the office.

This new compact has a dial. A turn of the dial and you get the right amount of powder, comes out—never too much. Clean the dial when you have used your lipstick and it is fresh and clean.

White spreads are very smart, with black trim, and black with gold. Then there are attractive compacts, gold, silver and enamel, in every conceivable shape, young women's purses are chock full of gadgets compartments and without. The prices range from less than one dollar up to many dollars.

FACTS AND FANCIES
Ways to Vary Meat Loaf

Pack meat loaf mixture firmly into a ring mold and bake. When done, should onto a large chop plate, fill centre with creamed vegetables and decorate with parsley. Or if the meat loaf is to be served hot as a buffet supper, fill the centre with a crisp vegetable salad.

Meat loaf pan with bacon slices before packing in mixture. When unmolded, it looks attractive and as garnish, as desired, place the loaf in the brother oven for a few minutes before unmolding. The bacon slices add an attractive appearance, and also a delightful flavor to the loaf.

Pack the meat loaf mixture into the bottom of greased ring pan and well up around the edges. Place a savory bread dressing on top as a filling and bring edges of meat toward centre. Lay bacon slices on top of dressing. When baked and covered by meat and bake until done, about one hour.

Pack the meat loaf mixture into the shape of a loaf. Place it on a wooden plank, and lay bacon slices on the top. Bake in a moderate oven. Remove from oven, arrange around it halves sprinkled with cheese, and cooked cauliflower flowerets around the meat loaf. Cauliflower with butter and return to the oven to finish baking the loaf and to thoroughly heat the vegetables. A variety of vegetables and fruits may be used in this combination, such as baked potatoes, squash, green beans, pineapple and cherries, halves, etc. The potatoes and squash are baked for their entire cooking time in the oven with the loaf.

Thank-You Letters

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have just had an operation and have been home from the hospital for a week. While I was in the hospital I received many beautiful gifts. Since I am home I have received a great many cards and more presents. Many of them have come from two people who had chipped together.

Now will you please tell me how I should word my letter of thanks to these people when there so kind and thoughtful to me?

23—Should I also write and thank the people who sent me cards?

2—I would like to send a letter of thanks to each one individually, but were so kind to me while I was in the hospital. Is this all right?

3—Should I write to Jane and thank my doctor? His bill has been paid in full but I would like to write and thank him.

I want you to know how much you have helped me and I certainly enjoy reading your column.

Jane.

Thank you for your kind and appreciative words and for your thoughtfully friendly and delightful letter.

As I read your letter, I can well understand why you have so many devoted friends! And I am glad that you are taking the time to thank all of your appreciation of their goodness to you.

Your letter is full of thanks might read somewhat like this:

Dear Betty,

What a friend you are . . . always so thoughtful and kind. I am planning to bring them happiness. Thank you, with all my heart, for your goodness to me while I was in the hospital. The beautiful rose you sent me were a shining joy . . . really an "abiding" joy, for they seemed to know how much I loved them and cherished them, and they remained lovingly with me for many days. They brought great happiness and comfort to me, as your friendship always does.

I am hungry to see you, and I do hope that, now I am at home, you will run in to see me soon. With joy, dearest Betty!

Devoted love to you, and always deep thanks.

Affectionately,

2—It would be appropriate for you to write a brief note, a sentence or two, of thanks for these friendly gifts.

Dear Dorothy,

I thank you for your kind and friendly message to me while I was in the hospital. Your good deeds were such a comfort to me, such a delight.

I hope I am to see you very soon.

May 17

Affectionately,

3—Yes, these letters would show your graciousness.

Each of which means write a note of appreciation to your doctor, appreciation of his kindness to you, of his skill in the saving of your life and skill. It will make him happy and proud that you are such an appreciative and grateful patient.

And may I add that the best wishes for your quick and complete recuperation.

Shower For Bride

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A very dear friend of mine is to be married soon and I would like to have a shower for her. This is the problem: she is to be married in the rectory and is to have no celebration at all . . . not even a dinner except for the immediate families. Of course she will send out announcements after she is married. Is it proper in such a case to have a shower for her?

F.

Indeed it is proper for you to have a shower gor this friend. And it is all the more friendly and generous of you, since you will be giving her and her friends a chance to have a gala party that she apparently is not able to plan to have after the wedding.

After the business had been disposed of Mrs. E. Farnsworth led the devotional period on "Taking Stock and Making Plans."

Advice to the Lovelorn

Seeks to Regain Love of Indifferent Husband

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been married for five years to a man eight years my senior. I am 32. At first he was just lovely to me, but in the last year or so he has grown cold and seems to be trying to get away from me. I'm at broken up about it. Then when I ask him to take me to a dance or party, or anywhere in fact, he will just laugh and say: "Go if you want to. If you don't like it you know what you can do."

Do you think it's all right for me to go to dances and parties with friends who are also friends of my husband's, or should I just stay at home? I want to bring back the love my husband had for me in the beginning—but how? You can see he does not go out with other women. Sincerely,

Can you think of anything that could have brought about this change in your husband's feeling toward you? Was he jealous or is he jealous now, and pretending to be indifferent? Are you extravagant, or does he imagine you are? You do not say whether you have children—if not, could that be a disappointment to him? Your letter does not tell me enough.

If you really want to win back love, I should say you should be free to go out with the friends you speak of, until you've had a chance to talk everything over about doing so. Why not ask him right out what's wrong? Sometimes a straightforward question clears up a great deal of unhappiness. Don't become discouraged yet—and you have my deepest sympathy.

Here's Another Unhappy Married Miss

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I graduated from high school last June, and am 18 years of age. I met a man with whom I've fallen deeply in love, but he is married and there's been seeing each other twice a week and sometimes oftener. I told him the other day that we'd have to stop going together, for some people were going to talk if they found it out. It has been three days now and I miss him so that I can hardly get along without him.

He and his wife don't get along at all, but as they have a little girl, he doesn't want to leave her. Please help me, Miss Fairfax, and tell me a way to make him leave her or help me forget.

L. M. S.

The only sensible thing to do, when you find yourself in love with a married man is to quit. That may sound unsympathetic, but it will only save trouble in the end. You say this one doesn't love his wife, and wife on account of the child, thereby you do not wish to be the cause of a little girl being deprived of her home and her father's care. The world is full of fine, attractive young men who are as lonely as you are. Out out married men, keep your eyes open and you'll find a real, half the time, these men who tell you they're unhappy at home don't mean it at all.

Tabu! Heart Never Won Fair Lady"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm in love with a certain girl who works in the same office with me. We don't see much of each other, because she's not the easy kind, and I like her all the more for that. We happened to meet at the home of a friend, and I escorted her home. After that I took her out to dinner twice, and that's as far as it has gone.

I met her in the elevator the other day, and in my embarrassment I said "What are you doing this evening?" She just answered "Nothing in particular", and I thought she acted sort of high-hat. So I didn't say any more.

Since then we haven't seen each other at all, and there is a coolness between us, for some reason or other. Now I'm unhappy. What do you think should be my next move?

Puzzled

Don't waste any more time. When you asked the girl what she was doing that evening, she expected you to invite her out when she answered "Nothing in particular". When you didn't ask her, she naturally felt left up in the air. Just ask her again if she will go out to a show, dinner, movie or what have you whenever you feel like seeing her. "Faint heart never won fair lady."

Is He Really to Love With Her?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a daily reader of your column, and because of that you will have helped others, I'm placing my problem before you.

When a girl is supposed to expect when a boy tells her that she is the only one and that he can't see enough of her, and then he accepts an invitation to escort another girl to a party? Does this show that the boy is fickle, or only that he is afraid for a good time, but still loves the girl just as much?

Don't you think if he cared for the first girl as much as he says, he would refuse to go unless he could take her along? I should like to know the correct and polite form of the true lover's point of view—concerning real love.

Puzzled

Since you have asked me the true lover's point of view, I must say that I think a man who is very deeply in love with one girl would probably not care to accept invitations from other girls, but then, her. However, as you are not really engaged to the young man, it is perfectly proper for him to go with other girls.

I would advise you to see as much as possible of your other friends—both boys and girls. Invite little groups to your home, including this young man, but do not let him know that you feel hurt because he sees other girls occasionally.

Their Platonic Friendship

By JESSIE DOUGLAS
Modern Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service

"Have you ever been in love?" Virginia Fellows looked at the young man who occupied the other end of the divan.

She studied his straight nose and the line of his chin, his crisp light hair, the way his collar set and peculiar cast of his tweed suit before she answered.

"Yes."

He scrutinized her face, sharply for a moment.

"Why I never thought you—"

"You didn't expect me to wear the willow, Blackard," Virginia said scornfully. "Of course I've been in love. With a man—a real man."

Blackard Masters was watching her with a new interest.

Virginia's eyes were vivid and gleaming, and she pushed back her hair with a little excited gesture.

"What was he like?" Jimmy asked with nothing but curiosity behind his voice.

"Like? He was dark and tall and not handsome, perhaps, but unforgettable. He had a scar across one eye brow, and a mustache that I never could forget him.

"And what became of this wonderful Jimmy asked with sarcastic intent.

"Laugh at me!" Virginia said sternly. "It's just like you to laugh at me!"

"I'm not laughing." he said apologetically. "It's just that you haven't ever been friends long enough.

"Oh, yes—friends. Have you ever been in love?" she put the question with a little of the combativeness that had used.

Blackard Masters shoved his hands into his pockets and stretched on his feet. He eyed the toes of his perforated leather with interest.

"Rather."

"What became of her?" Virginia asked in turn, and her voice was not quite so nonchalant.

"Didn't care anything for me. Never will. Don't suppose I ever do."

"Oh!"

The clock on the mantel chimed 11 and Jimmy rose to his feet.

"Thanks for a jolly evening. Suppose you'll take the 'Eight to Bed' off?"

She nodded as she gave him her hand and smiled that frank generous smile of warmth that had attracted Jimmy some six months back.

Still smiling she stood there with her hand in his until the door had closed after him.

Then with a little sob she flung herself down among the pillows and lay there choking with her tears. She threw off her rumpling her dress. She knew she would be late for work in the morning—but she didn't care.

When she had cried until her head ached she twisted her wet handkerchief into a little ball and tried to dry her face with it.

"You're a poor old idiot!" she told herself, sitting up straight; "of course Jimmy Masters was never in love with you! That you could have thought he was for one instant!—she choked back a sob.

Then she looked at the queerness of life.

Next day she, Virginia Fellows the secretary of Professor Blacheve, the world's best of all the other office workers. She was the memory of the scraps of information she noted for her efficiency.

Efficiency! Disgusting word! It made her think of a starched blue and white nurse, cool and capable and hurried.

"Efficiency! I hate the very sound of it." And Virginia flung herself back among the pillows.

That was the way Jimmy always thought of her when she wasn't being cheerful and friendly and calm.

"I say, I'm really sorry—" Jimmy Masters stood there stammering, with his hat in my gloves and I came back and saw the door was open. I didn't think you were here. I wouldn't have—"

Virginia's face was tear-stained and her hair was frankly mussed, her voice had a queer, uncertain sound that startled at first.

"You—just go—"

"Ginny, it isn't anything—that I'm afraid you're not thinking of him!"

"No! no! no," she said in a stifled voice. She raised her head and one cheek was scarlet where it showed beneath her fingers.

"I never knew you were like this. I always thought you were so superior; didn't have feelings like the rest of us fellows."

Virginia gave a queer, uncertain laugh and looked up at him.

"I never knew you cared at me. But that girl I told you about—it's friendship gal!"

How to Keep Ankles Trim

By HELEN FOLLETT

It is easy enough to keep the ankles trim. Make it a practice to walk briskly, with spring in the knees, and stress slightly on the heel. The muscles of ankles, feet and lower legs will keep strong and resilient. Pe, ca'ka, think lazy people, can't endure activity. Skip around on your toes and they'll go off and die.

The ankle should be straight and slender like those of the lass and feet strong and flexible. There should be a delicate curve from the ankle to the calf of the leg, then a gradual inward line toward the knee. A pair of pretty legs is a source of satisfaction to any girl who is chasing beauty laurels.

Stockings, garters and the heels fitted. That helps to keep the legs in form. See that the tops on shoe heels are level. When heels run over, the weight of the foot is thrown on the outer surface and the ankles are weakened.

Choose your ankles neatly. Select flattering colors when buying stocking and keep the stockings nicely harnessed and the seams at the back straight. Men have a lot to say about crooked stocking seams.

The physical condition is often reflected by the condition of the complexion.

Constipation and digestive disturbances cause eruptions. A liver that is not functioning properly will give a yellow cast to the skin. Sleeplessness and nervousness etch wrinkles in the face.

We might as well get down to brass tacks, understand that the foundation of the temple of beauty is health, and health laws should not be disregarded.

Evening coiffures are picking up, so much so that it isn't a bad idea to buy some ornamental comb and coils. They fill in the odd spots and look dressy.

A simple braid is a convenience. If the finger wave has gone limp, straighten the hair, do the braid smoothly and add your braid.

There are all sorts of arrangements. You can take it around your head, pinning the home-grown ends under. You can place it on one side, have artificial flowers on the other. Oh, yes, hair ornaments are coming back.

A blister on the heel, any wound of the foot, should have immediate attention. Wearing a shoe means that one can't even get to the abrasion to give it it's healing effects. You can put on place it and add antiseptic. Use a protective pad. Keep a sharp watch for signs of pus. When that appears, real trouble is on the way.

Cold, Damp Hard On The Skin

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

Winter cold and dampness are hard on the skin. It is the time of scaffled and cracked hands and toes, of blistered noses and skin, and of chilblains and other skin complaints. The skin is not exposed enough to the air and sunshine so it is in the summer. The circulation is pinched away from it. The lubricating glands do not work as well in cold weather.

Elderly people are liable to complain of itching during this season. And usually this is due to too conscientious a spirit of cleanliness. The skin of an elderly person is atrophied, just as every other part of the body is atrophied at this age. It does not need so much bathing, and especially the use of soap, removes from this natural guard the glands secrets, and leaves it harsh and dry and uncomfortable. Whatever your habits about bathing, reduce the number of them, and reduce the use of it especially in the winter time. It has been the habit in most American households since the bathtub became a national institution, to take a bath once a day. This is entirely too often for most people except the very young and for those over 60 years old one Saturday night routine is plenty often enough.

For chapped hands and cheeks take some apricot kernels. Part of this is due to too much degreasing with soap and water and then getting out in the cold and damp. The use of creams — not vanishing creams which are more like soap, but ordinary cold cream—is good both for treatment and prevention.

Use of Almond Meal

I am frequently asked about almond meal as a skin balm. It is just as good as a cream or an oil. Grind oil and almond oil are both good for soothing and cleansing purposes. Almond meal is simply the seals from which almond oil is made.

Massage creams are usually made up from a formula based on milk secretion, cocoanut oil, petrolatum, alkalis besides— sodium borate, alum, soften, bicarbonate, and lium benzoate, boric acid, perfume and coloring. They are supposed to be rubbed into the skin and roll out again with dirt which they have acquired in the pores. Certainly in the winter they are more sensible as a cleaning agent than soap.

Tissue creams are not really skin foods, in the sense that they add to the nourishment of the skin. What comes from within from the blood, is the only thing which can soften the surface of the skin. They may do good, however, in the application a good massage of the skin is necessary. Most of them contain mineral oil, white wax, lanolin, boric acid, perfume, spermaceti, and colored rubber.

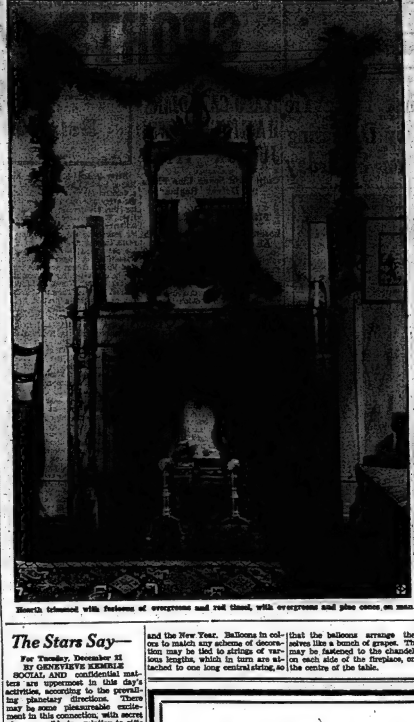
DRESSING HOME FOR CHRISTMAS

Doorway with garland of assorted evergreens and pine cones; wreath of planned cryptus with cones, berries and bow.

Holiday Spirit Expressed In Decorations

By MRS. BERT R. McDONALD
Central Press Flower Stylist

Let's set the stage for the happiest, merriest feast of all the year — Christmas. Let's put showmanship into it and make our home glow with the Yuletide spirit. For it is the observance of traditional ceremonies, and the warmth and hospitality, that pervades our homes during this season that makes us look forward to it with such eagerness.



Holly, fir, mistletoe, pine, balsam, flaming poinsettias, the glow of tapers, the warmth of an open fire, the scintillating Christmas tree — these are your "props" for the Christmas scene. And, now is the time to begin planning for the effect you wish to create. Your florist is always glad to help you with decorative problems of this kind.

The front door is the place to begin. Here is the gateway to your hospitality, and it should fulfill the Christmas spirit in every detail within. Here is shown a colonial doorway simply but tastefully decorated. A garland of assorted evergreens is festooned around it. Clusters of natural pine cones fasten it to the jambs and lintel. A solid wreath of plumed cryptus decorated with cones, lice berries and a red ribbon bow crowns the door proper.

Hearth Dressed For Christmas

As the hearth is the axis around which Christmas festivities revolve, it certainly deserves a Christmas dress all its own. It is best to keep these decorations on the side of simplicity. If they are too gaudy they will detract from the room's general decorative scheme. Festoons of evergreen, with here and there a touch of red or the glitter of tinsel are in good taste. The quaint sentiments exactly fireplace shown here does not lose any of its traditional beauty because of the decorations. Have the motif of evergreen and pine cones is repeated. The mantel shelf bears a large white pottery bowl of white pine sprigs and cones. This is flanked with a pair of parchment scrolls with silver ribbons, tied in light shades.

And here's a hint for your own personal decorative Christmas scheme: When you are holiday shopping or on a round of calls, be sure to wear a sprig of holly or mistletoe as a boutonniere or shoulder bouquet. It will put you in a gay holiday mood.

Jealousy Conquered By Faith

By VIRGINIA LEE

Many times in this column I have tried to help people who were exceedingly jealous and suffered intensely in consequence. I have striven to show them that distrust of themselves was at the root of their trouble. But I always wonder if they have been helped, as I hoped.

Now comes a letter from one who has suffered from jealousy and found the way to help herself. I am giving you her letter as she wrote it and sent it to me.

"DEAR MISS LEE: In reading your article on the poor jealous person, I wish to give my experience. I had suffered for 20 years of my married life battling with the green eyed monster, and within ourselves we can do nothing. I found the cure and for seven years I have had peace.

"I was a Christian, and felt I could overcome my jealousy with my strong will power, but I failed. I prayed and failed. We chastised. It was hell on earth." Finally I heard the preacher say, 'Perfect love casteth out fear.' I began to study on this line and I wondered how I could trust my husband when I would see him do certain things that bothered me. At last the perfect love came.

"Don't just trust your lover. Rest trust in God and you will find rest.

"If you are jealous of your lover and he is your perfect love, try this: When you see your lover with another woman, say to one who has caused you worry, just stop and be silent, and if you can feel his love in your heart, then let nothing disturb you. Why worry who he is with as long as you have his love? It may take time to reach this goal, but it is well worth it. This is a true experience. Hoping it may help someone to be happier.

SILENT SLAVE"

I hope this is clear, till is another way of building up confidence, having faith that your love—which is like God's perfect love—can cast out fear. When you have learned and that awful jealous rage comes over you, stop, be quiet a moment, and be sure that your love and trust in God will cast out your fear, and give you faith and peace. Thank you, Silent Slave. Your letter will, indeed, help some tortured souls, I know.

DOWNHEARTED FLO: Write to each other, you and the boy friend, of course, Flo. In time probably can get together in the summer time or something, and if your feeling for each other is not just young love, it will last.

How College Students Act When Home for Holidays

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

Several hundred thousand students return home from college for several days during the Christmas season, again at Easter time and finally for the summer vacation.

The parents who have financed these students, and often at great self-denials, usually look forward to the return of son or daughter. To many a mother it will mean hours and day and labor — washing, baking, scrubbing, ironing, repairing—in preparation, and added hours of work during the child's stay. And if a chum is brought along, especially if neither child nor guest helps to do the work, in a home with no servants!

Often I have wondered how a college student could be so selfish and insensible to human justice as to make of himself a pestering parasite at vacation time. If I were a college preacher, I would deliver at least one sermon a semester on some phase of what students owe their parents; and if I had a prayer in college chapel—a few still do—I would get a word in occasionally, by way of suggestion, not so much to the Lord as to the audience, for the folks at home.

Even if the home-visiting student failed to help bear the added burdens which his coming home has imposed, these burdens might be borne more cheerfully if the son or daughter would spend considerable time with dad and mother, and tell them about the things—even if much of it had to be censored. It's the conversation from which most parents crave, and so seldom get, those of us are grateful for the fine exceptions.

Goes Out for Pleasure

After a few words of greeting as do sumptuous meal, off the typical college student will go for social pleasure elsewhere until late in the night, and then will sleep all next day, for the following evening is of more pleasure. Essentials, and going-out-ills seem to be the chief ambition, anyway, of modern youths.

Perhaps dad and mother do have the privilege of driving the departing student off at the railway station, or of driving him back to college, or of digging up some extra cash to finance the car he came home in.

Have you ever heard of anything organized in college classes designed to induce in students a feeling of obligation toward the parents who make their education possible? I do not think you have.

Though students act and feel toward their parents about as they had learned in earlier years to act and feel toward them, one might hope that higher education would lead, even some badly-spoiled youths to work out an idealism and sportsmanship that transcend those they acquired at home. Maybe that is expecting too much. What do you think? Why not let the editor of this paper know what you think?

FAITH

Better trust all and be deceived,
And weep that trust and that deceiving,
Than doubt one heart that, if believed,
Had blessed one's life with true believing.

Better be cheated to the last
Than lose the blessed hope of truth.

Those whose birthday is may find their social employment and serious matters rather irksome, but should find excitement and interest in social, artistic, romantic or domestic concerns.

A child born on this day may have a very happy and sociable disposition with regard toward art, literature, social or humanitarian vocations rather than the more commonplace. It may be gifted in poetry, music or mystery writings.

If Reducer's Face Looks Drawn Something is Wrong With Diet

By GLADYS GLAD
"America's Most Famous Beauty"

Many girls, I've found, place themselves definitely out of the attractive class by adopting a harmful reducing method when they find themselves overweight. They try to secure figure beauty at the sacrifice of facial loveliness, and there is no necessity to sacrifice the fresh, youthful contours when trying to lose weight. But the reducing method employed must be a good one.

A well-balanced reducing course should not have any such effect. It is when too-quick reduction is effected that the face becomes thin and drawn, for the skin, which had stretched to accommodate the fat beneath it, does not have time to adjust itself to the change of contour when the fat is dissolved too quickly, and so it sags in wrinkles.

Reduce Sensibly

When a sensible, well-planned reducing course is followed, of course, this does not result. For such a course gives the skin time for sufficient shrinkage to adapt itself to the loss of facial contours. As the face grows thinner, the skin tightens and the face consequently retains its youthful appearance.

Always make sure, therefore, if you desire to preserve the youthful appearance of your face while you are reducing, that your reducing routine is a well directed one. Then if you obey several wise and sensible injunctions, you should not find yourself losing facial beauty as well as pounds.

The injunctions that I refer to are very simple indeed. First, do not starve on your daily water "intake during your reducing period. Be sure to drink at least eight to ten glasses of water each day. This will prevent your tissues from shrivelling up through lack of sufficient fluid.

IVA STEWART
Young, slim and lovely

Next, use a good, rich tissue cream on your face nightly before you retire, and massage it to remain on over night. Such a cream patted into the skin will help to nourish the tissues and round out the facial contours. The frequent use of a good, bracing astringent also is advisable, in order to tone up the skin and keep it firm and youthful.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Hand Lotion

Virginia: An effective hand lotion can be made of three parts of rosewater and one part of glycerine. Equal parts of rosewater and glycerine also form an excellent hand lotion.

Teeth

Mary: I'd suggest that you have your teeth cleaned and polished by a competent dentist, in order to remove all tartar and calcareous matter. Proper brushing will then keep them white and sparkling.

Wrinkles

Patty: Frowning usually causes such wrinkles. You must cure yourself of this habit. The nightly use of lanolin or a rich cream will then nourish the sensitive tissues and help to dim the lines.

CHRISTMAS TABLE DECORATION

Following is the way a clever housewife suggests for decorating the Christmas table. Suspend Christmas tree balls in a variety of colors from the chandelier, using black treads of different lengths. In centre of table place a mirror, on which heap a pile of the usual colored balls. The effect is of bubbles floating down.

Balloons are a new medium for decorating the house for Christmas and the New Year. Balloons in colors to match any scheme of decoration may be tied to strings of various lengths, which in turn are attached to one long central string, so that the balloons arrange themselves like a bunch of grapes. These may be fastened to the chandelier, on each side of the fireplace, or in the centre of the table.

'Tis The Week Before Christmas

If the week before Christmas you find you forgot
About old Uncle Charlie, or dear Cousin Dot;
Don't sit in a trance wondering what to do next,
But pick up the paper and turn to the text
Where the merchants and makers of gifts by the score
Give a host of suggestions you're not seen before.
To the last-minute shopper, when Christmas is near,
The advertisements carry a message of cheer.
Spread them out on your knee, light the fire at your feet,
Then leisurely shop—page by page, sheet by sheet.
Picking presents thus half-marked by each maker's name
Adds considerable joy to the tone of the game.
For in advertised products, it's clearly been shown
Every gift bears the mark of a name that is known.
When next morning you shop you'll know just where to go;
You'll save time, cash and energy—all at one throw.
Use your newspaper now if your shopping time's dear;
Better yet use it daily throughout the New Year!

Detroit Loses Twelfth Game in Sixteen Starts This Season

By The Canadian Press

Boston Bruins have been kicking around the National Hockey League title too long to be bothered greatly by intruders from downstairs. Eventually Art Ross, like every other manager, will have to take extraordinary measures to cope with New York Rangers. Excellent scoring system, but right now his Bruins won't fire in pastic just the same the blueheads have come.

Shortly after arrived at Bruins' threadbold last week and captured first place over Chicago Black Hawks here Thursday with their fifth straight victory.

Bruins advanced on Montreal Saturday and regained the top with a hashing 3-1 triumph over Maroons. They stepped over to Detroit Sunday and slapped down Red Wings 6-0 to extend their margin as Rangers got nothing better than 3-3 tie with Montreal Canadiens in New York.

The American division's first-place fight became strictly a duel, for New York Rangers dropped two games over Black Hawks at Chicago and Bruins' margin over rangers was left at two points after receiving the handsome aid of Canadiens in the latter's return engagement. They stepped over to Detroit Sunday and slapped down Red Wings 6-0 to extend their margin as Rangers got nothing better than 3-3 tie with Montreal Canadiens in New York.

Johnny Sorrells, well known pro, who won the $10,000 Miami-Biltmore golf title with a total of 282 strokes. He scored 68, 69, 72 and 73.

The Leafs, Canadiens and Rangers have a far superior defensive team, however, than threatened seriously after a first-quarter scoring splurge. Toronto Leafs lead Tom Cowan's Montreal Canadiens with a point-for-point attempt that was partially blocked but rolled over the Habs line.

Leafs Pete Used to Score

Stiz of Hamilton's line plays were the only ones to score consistently after Dales fumbled first on their two-yard line, the men their four. Harvey Jackson, Leafs' veteran, got the first major score and George Hainsworth, Habs' third time threats at the Regina centre.

Before and after that three plays Dales gave the ball to George Hainsworth whenever they got possession and the big Hamilton half kicked on first down everytime. And with the wet ball, Sihn was superb with distance and height that enabled him outkick to smear Regina's fleet backs.

Under the prevailing conditions Hamilton's game was the only one to play. But Dales disregarded the national. Danger to wide-open football and went after yardage with dizzy lateral sweeps. The yardage picked up was more than lost in the scoring chances then added this season.

All four Dale touchdowns, one in each quarter, came on Regina fumbles or misplays. George Blanchard got one after a Sihn was blocked and Sihn dribbled the ball 25 yards over the line. Mob Mackey fell on a fumble behind the Regina line for the other touchdown.

ITALO-CANADIANS HAMILTON, WIN JUNIOR TITLE

Losers Threw Fizzkin With Abandon And Lost Valuable Yardage

By Sydney Grant

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 20.—(CP)—Picture a Canadian Championship football team which didn't throw a pass, made a first down and only only seven line plays to win the title. That's the way Hamilton Italo-Canadians did it.

Grabbing the opportunity presented by the Regina Dales, the Dales completed an unbeaten and untied season by defeating the western champions 27-2 in a game generally recognized as for the Canadian Junior title thereon, but with no recognition from the Canadian Rugby Union.

It was the first defeat in 17 starts for the Dales. They were first from disgrace as they discarded a water-logged field and took wide-open chances that gave 3,000 fans the only thrills.

The Italo-Canadians end and Bales were a far superior defensive team, however, they threatened seriously after a first-quarter scoring splurge. Tom Cowan's lead Tom Cowan's Montreal Canadiens with a point-for-point attempt that was partially blocked but rolled over the Italo line.

Stiz of Hamilton's line plays were the only ones to score consistently after Dales fumbled first on their two-yard line, the men their four. Harvey Jackson, Leafs' veteran, got the first major score and George Hainsworth, Habs' third time threats at the Regina centre.

Before and after that three plays Dales gave the ball to George Sihn whenever they got possession and the big Hamilton half kicked on first down everytime. And with the wet ball, Sihn was superb with distance and height that enabled his outkicks to smear Regina's fleet backs.

Under the prevailing conditions Hamilton's game was the only one to play. But Dales disregarded the national. Danger to wide-open football and went after yardage with dizzy lateral sweeps. The yardage picked up was more than lost in the scoring chances then added this season.

All four Dale touchdowns, one in each quarter, came on Regina fumbles or misplays. George Blanchard got one after a Sihn was blocked and Sihn dribbled the ball 25 yards over the line. Mob Mackey fell on a fumble behind the Regina line for the other touchdown.

Between the Lines

with Ken L. Calling

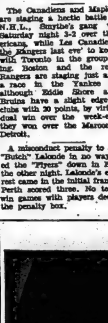
Never in the history of major league baseball has there been such a demand for new faces and talent. On every side the clubs are scouring the countryside for potential stars. The Province of Ontario has delivered more talent to the two big leagues in the past couple of years than during any period in the past. Stan George Selkirk, the Hunterville boy, went up with the New York Yankees and was put in the hole left by the retirement of "Babe" Ruth. "Goody" Rosen, product of the Toronto sandlots, was more recently drafted by the Brooklyn Dodgers from the American Association, while the latest Canadian diamond sensation is none other than Joe Krakauskas, a native of Hamilton. Krakauskas went up from Trenton, of the Eastern League, to the Washington Senators and today is being heralded as a second Walter Johnson. ("Steve" Hamilton, please note).

Joe Krakauskas was born on March 28th, 1917, at Hamilton, which will make him just about 21 when he reports at the Senators' training camp next spring. He is a left-hander who throws the N.Y.P. way, how a chap "Alex" Kellner known as the former Athletics' manager enjoyed by Selkirk, Rosen and Krakauskas in their domain. Kellner's method of thoroughly encourage baseball-minded kids all over this province and Canada. Kellner's figures are at last being recognized as splendid and they prove that even the diamond pastime should be over-run with home-grown boys. Byrne is the first case in point of failure. You can't beat the pay or the breaks in baseball and anybody baseball can be termed as a half-serious effort.

Getting back to Krakauskas, however. The Habs at Trenton did not know how to pronounce his name, so tacked the monicker of "Farkyakarkiak" upon him and it seems to have stuck. As a minor league baseball player Krakauskas is fly unbeatable for seven innings but once the 8th inning rolled around Krakauskas developed an inferior pitching complex and could not locate the plate regardless as to how hard he tried. Even when he did hits rang off the bats of his opponents in such a degree that he had to be replaced. It remained for Lou Boudreau, of Shanoy of Trenton, to finally solve Krakauskas' pitching inner complex. "You'll finish every game you start, if you get beaten 20 to 0," bawled Boudreau to the latter one day. The former Canadian, incomdumb soon got able to finish complete games and on the right side of the ledger, with the result he's in the league today.

Krakauskas possesses a world of speed and wasted unheralded late fame in the Yankee chain. The New York Yankees decidedly has fall in one of his starts. He was one of the bewilderers of the Bronx Bombers pitching staff in the dying days of the American League baseball schedule. A rather odd story is related about the game. When it was he reported to Mel Murphy, baseball manager of the Trenton Club at the Milner Hotel in Trenton. "Here's your control and arm, Joe!" asked Murphy, knowing Krakauskas' weakness for wildness. Murphy had a bee in baseball under his cap at the time. "Let me see one of those fast ones," replied Krakauskas. Murphy handed the big blonde a baseball and Krakauskas promptly wound up his old flinging arm, brought his right leg up and let the pellet fly with plenty of speed. The result was gapping hole in the wall in Krakauskas' hotel room. Pinster fell over the floor. A women screamed "murder" in the next room and Murphy shouted—"That's the kind we want here." A bit for six bucks was later received by the Trenton club for the damage to the room. Joe had to show him my arm was O.K." was Joe's only comment.



The success enjoyed by Selkirk, Rosen and Krakauskas can also be enjoyed by other Ontario baseball players, if they are willing to work for that success. After all in every venture it takes boosts upon boosts of hard efforts to attain success, regardless as to the line of work chosen. Baseball is no exception Ontario has produced some splendid minor league baseball players in recent years and the future looks more brilliant for those who are inclined to favour the diamond pastime. Who knows, we may have a future big league star right here in Belleville, but unless that player is given an opportunity to develop his talents, those talents will go for naught.

The current cry throughout Central Ontario is for "baseball for urbane next summer." Last week the Prescott-Brockville Club held its annual meeting with Vern Downes elected as president. Many other leadership centers in the Littlest City was represented at the meeting with business men taking baseball executive positions. Too had the same feeling was not in evidence in Belleville, especially now that we have definite hopes of a good baseball game keeps the youth of any city out of pool halls, dens and other mischief. Give it a thought. —

"Steve" Hamilton, manager of the Capitol Theatre, made us cat humble pie today when he gave us one of those well-known Hamilton-ian ribbings. You see the Hamilton Italo-Canadian gridders won the two Dominion titles the west "HARRY" can and let us tell you, the Hamilton Tigers can still turn out football stars," haughtily replied Steve as he handed us the old raspberry.

The Canadiens and Maple Leafs are staging a home-and-home N.H.L., Smythe's gang winning Saturday night 3-2 over the Habitants, while the Canadiens tied the Rangers last eve' to keep even with Toronto in the group standing. Boston and the revamped Rangers are staging just a battle royal in the rinkers section, although Eddie Shore and his Bruins have a few to say in the clubs with 20 points, by virtue of a total win over the week-end, as they were over the Maroons and Detroit.

A misconduct penalty to Johnnie Patrick" Lalonde in no way assisted the "Flyers" down in Kingston on other night. Lalonde's extended rest came in the initial frame when Perth scored three. No team can win games with players decorating the penalty box.

SYRACUSE STARS CAN EARN BONUS

Promised Extra Pay if They Make 21 Points by Christmas

By The Canadian Press

It's going to take some hustling, but Syracuse Stars still have a chance to cop the money and are heading the International-American hockey league's western section, will have to win 10 in next two games. The first is Against Providence Reds Tuesday night and second falls on Christmas night against Philadelphia Ramblers.

Stars picked up two points towards their 21 when they whipped New Haven Eagles, 4-0, last night. They dropped a Saturday clash, however, to Pittsburgh Hornets, 4-3. Providence made the greatest gain, winning 4-3, against Springfield Indians and then coming back Sunday to down a win over Cleveland Barons. Barons dropped Saturday contest to Ramblers, 7-4.

Reds in picking up four points, climbed into first place in the standings section, going a full game ahead of Ramblers. The race is tightest, however, in the western groupings where Syracuse, Pittsburgh and Cleveland come in that order with 18, 17, and 16 points respectively.

After an 18-month layoff, and next June he can still take it and hand it out. Joe, the action photo here, Harry Mizzle is seen right, taking one of Thomas' hard uppercuts from, on the chin. From the expression on the latter's face the parent the punch was not of the gentle variety.

SANTA CLAUS P.O. REPORTS BOOM IN BUSINESS

Santa Claus, Ind., Dec. 20 (AP) —"The world's full of cheer this Christmas—brought a big boom in business to this northern Indiana hamlet's one-room post office and Postmaster Dexter L. Phillips today predicted a record season for his magic postmark.

"We'll handle right close to a million pieces of mail, a new record, if the boom keeps up," said Phillips.

PRIME MINISTER

substantiate the Ontario Premier's charges of United States influence. Publication of such letters, Mr. Hepburn said Saturday, would "brand King as the prize fool with respect to this controversy."

His letters had been marked "confidential." Prime Minister King declared in a statement last night, because they concerned "another government" and were state documents. Mr. Hepburn had similarly marked some of his communications on this subject "confidential."

He would table these letters in the House of Commons, the Prime Minister said in a telegram sent Mr. Hepburn last night in reply to a wire asking for permission to make them public. He suggested Mr. Hepburn table a similar return in the Ontario legislature.

Only Asked Attitude.

The prime minister denied Mr. Hepburn's statement of Saturday that when Mr. Mackenzie King was en route to Washington last spring he had "spent an hour in my office in a futile effort to persuade me to accede to the Roosevelt request regarding proceeding with the St. Lawrence project."

He had only asked Mr. Hepburn's attitude toward the project so that the high enemy in to President Roosevelt if the question were asked, the prime minister said. At no time did he ask Mr. Hepburn to persuade any provincial minister to support the project. At the proper time he would tell parliament all that was said in his meeting with Mr. Hepburn, and what he himself said to Mr. Roosevelt, he added.

Mr. Mackenzie King also denied Mr. Hepburn's charge that in conversation on this subject he "intimated to me that unless we did (support the St. Lawrence project) Roosevelt might retaliate with trade barriers. The question of trade barriers was never even mentioned, the prime minister said.

Customs Charges.

Finance Minister Dunning and Revenue Minister Ilsley also issued statements denying Mr. Hepburn's charge the Federal government was designing to get control of Ontario's succession duty collections, and had failed to co-operate by furnishing information from income tax returns in cases where fraud was suspected.

It was expected here the Christmas season would bring a lull in this controversy and that its next appearance would be in parliament which meets Jan. 27.

Cabinet council is called for Tuesday, probably the last time before the holidays. Already a large section of the cabinet has left for Florida and others will join in the Christmas exodus which customarily leaves few but the prime minister in the capital.

Ski-ing Across Canada

Pleasure and competitive skiing now rank high among the major winter sports throughout Canada. The keen sunshiny winter days call thousands to the trails, from the Maritime Provinces in the east to British Columbia in the west. The Canadian Pacific Railway is contributing in large measure to the development of ski areas, both in the east and in the west. From Montreal and eastern United States thousands travel on the "Ski Specials" to the Laurentians each week-end, and on the prairies and in British Columbia other thousands visit Banff, Sunshine Valley and other Canadian Pacific resorts for the winter season. Layout shows, upper left, the ski club on Grouse Mountain, Vancouver; upper right, skiers halting for a breather on a high pass above Sunshine Valley, Canadian Rockies; middle left is a group of Winnipeg enthusiasts on one of the ski trails south of that city, and lower left shows Laurentian Mountain enthusiasts preparing for action on the trail. Lower right are two ultra-enthusiasts—the famous Laurentian sun-tan.

Hurricane House

By BRUCE HENRY

While Ronny sat there, helpless, clinging his nails into his plaster, she went over every detail of that tragic afternoon, in the hope that some of it all as distantly and as vividly, he knew, as though they were living it again. "It's much more pleasant and I don't really need to lie down in the day any longer."

Lucille bowed at her, but she didn't say anything. There was a certain nearness in the silence. They all felt it.... then suddenly Sandra reached out and touched Lucille's hand.

"Sorry, Lucille ... I'll do as you say, of course."

Ronny gave a deep breath. Never spoke that, he told himself. If these two girls ever really clash at....!

It had not occurred to Ronny that having Sandra coming to the same office would present great complications. He had never found him more sensitive to her nearness than the day before. And they were having a row, right in front of them.

Sandra did anything that needed doing—wrote officials, and proved occasionally went out to pick up an odd or a personal. And one morning, having nothing better to do, she crawled up on the little stepladder to clean out the feature files which were thick with dust. Ronny, sitting in the next office, looked up at her—and felt a twinge in his heart. There was a faint natural resemblance in her slim neatness of returning loveliness.... Ronny turned his head when she climbed down and went out—to return five minutes later and break his daughter's heart. She was on the floor and Sandra was clinging to the edge of the narrow shelf and, for one being—not more than four inches from the floor, though she could not know that.

"Go on and laugh your head off, you monkey!" she cried at him over her shoulder. "Do you want to bring me back?"

He was still laughing when he lifted her in his arms and started across the room; but the laugh became a wavering, uneasy smile when Sandra's arms crept over his shoulder and around his neck, and the smile vanished completely when Sandra said, wistfully:

"Must you go on treating me as if I were a hopeless invalid, sister, Ronny....?"

INSTALMENT 32

Ronny thought, as Sandra's face became a white blur just beneath his own, "She's being funny. She doesn't mean anything by this—but if she only realized what she's doing to me...." Then, as Sandra struggled, tried to brace himself. "I won't let Lucille down! I won't do it.... I'm—"

Those slim arms around his neck were slowly relaxing under their own pattering around the house, Ronny sometimes wondered if ever she would completely recover—and as for such times he felt an almost overpowering protective impulse to take her in his arms and hold her close until she understood that always he would be shield for her, always from these unknown influences remarkable, to prevent disturbances. For though her old gaiety was slowly returning, all in that dreadful afternoon was not happy, that her physical recovery was being retarded by a mental condition which they could not treat because they knew nothing of the causes behind it.

But Ronny was wondering about many things these strange days, and to the counting questions that found themselves in his mind, he had one stock answer: "Sit tight, boy—she'll be going home before you've had everything off as it was before the cane." If he dreaded the day when Sandra would announce she was returning to New York, he hadn't himself for dreading it, and daily he renewed the resolve made in the hour of her arrival that however great a fool he was disposed to make of himself, he would never by word or act let Lucille be hurt.

The understanding that had developed between the two girls delighted him and filled him with increasing amazement. They were so obviously fond of each other so honest in what each saw and admired in the other. What troubled Ronny was that Lucille had not the faintest suspicion that Sandra Brooke had once been the most important person in pls life, and might be still—deny it as regularly and as determinedly as he would. "Was I?"

"Could you use a good reporter on The Guardian, Ronny?"

It was Sandra's third Sunday in Maple Village and they were all at the dinner table.

Ronny grinned. "Any references, miss?"

"The best. Ask Matt Stanley or Harry French of The Flash."

"Might be worth while to have The Guardian up with Flash methods at that." Ronny said, soberly. He turned to his mother: "Know any first class scandal we could dig up in Maple Village, Mom?"

But Sandra said, "I'm serious, Ronny. Between the cook and your mother, I've never allowed to lift on my hand around here. And when Lucille's home, hardly permitted to breathe without help.... I want something to do."

Lucille nodded, looking at Ronny. "Why not let her write the editorials?"

"Boy!" Ronny cried. "That was what I call inspiration.... Sandra, you're hired. You and Mom can hold your editorial conference in the morning and you can come to the shop and write 'em in the afternoon."

Lucille said, "No, they can hold their conferences in the afternoon when Sandra is lying down. I'll be there in the office mornings."

"But I'd rather work afternoons," Sandra said, quickly. "It's much more pleasant and I don't really need to lie down in the day any longer."

Lucille looked at her, but she didn't say anything. There was a certain nearness in the silence. They all felt it.... then suddenly Sandra reached out and touched Lucille's hand.

"Sorry, Lucille ... I'll do as you say, of course."

Ronny gave a deep breath. Never spoke that, he told himself. If these two girls ever really clash at....!

It had not occurred to Ronny that having Sandra coming to the same office would present great complications. He had never found him more sensitive to her nearness than the day before. And they were having a row, right in front of them.

Sandra did anything that needed doing—wrote officials, and proved occasionally went out to pick up an odd or a personal. And one morning, having nothing better to do, she crawled up on the little stepladder to clean out the feature files which were thick with dust. Ronny, sitting in the next office, looked up at her—and felt a twinge in his heart. There was a faint natural resemblance in her slim neatness of returning loveliness.... Ronny turned his head when she climbed down and went out—to return five minutes later and break his daughter's heart. She was on the floor and Sandra was clinging to the edge of the narrow shelf and, for one being—not more than four inches from the floor, though she could not know that.

"Go on and laugh your head off, you monkey!" she cried at him over her shoulder. "Do you want to bring me back?"

He was still laughing when he lifted her in his arms and started across the room; but the laugh became a wavering, uneasy smile when Sandra's arms crept over his shoulder and around his neck, and the smile vanished completely when Sandra said, wistfully:

"Must you go on treating me as if I were a hopeless invalid, sister, Ronny....?"

INSTALMENT 32

Ronny thought, as Sandra's face became a white blur just beneath his own, "She's being funny. She doesn't mean anything by this—but if she only realized what she's doing to me...." Then, as Sandra struggled, tried to brace himself. "I won't let Lucille down! I won't do it.... I'm—"

Those slim arms around his neck were slowly relaxing under their own

"Remember that night in Emily's garden, Ronny—what you said after you had kissed me?"

Jaws set, he swung around and deposited her on the desk. And gently unlocked her arms, feeling a brute for doing it but knowing he had no alternative unless he were to hate himself for a wrecking the lives of both.

She watched him, smiling, her face revealing nothing of either resentment or humiliation. On the contrary, Ronny read in that little one-sided smile a certain secret amusement but a quiet challenge. It was as if she were saying: "I concede you the first round, darling—but you can't hope to win in the long run, you know."

Well, she need not be too sure of herself. He had asked Lucille to marry him. Before that he might have been as helpless in this girl's hands as he had been months ago ....If only, he thought ruefully, he had had some enough to tell Sandra the day of her arrival that he and Lucille were virtually engaged.

And still Sandra's question hung between them, unanswered: "Remember that night in Emily's garden, Ronny—what you said after you had kissed me?" He could not simply ignore it; and yet to attempt to answer was to tell her no day had passed since that night when he had not remembered it.

He sat down at his desk, groping for some casual reply...and heard a door open and Lucille's laughing voice adding, "I'm glad the way you keep your agreement to send Sandra home every day on the dot of twelve, Mr. MacAllister!"

Sandra had her hands out to Lucille. "It's my fault," she said lightly, "I was cleaning out those nasty files up there and the ladder slipped from under me and Ronny had to come to my rescue. We've spent the time since getting over the scare: I didn't know it then but I can see now it Ronny hadn't come back into the room when he did, it would have meant a sheer drop of nearly five inches." She laughed, delightedly.

Ronny looked at his watch; it was a quarter to one. He wondered if his confusion showed in his face.

Lucille said, "All right, run along and get home for your 'eats' you two, after the place until you get back, Ronny."

He shook his head. "Can't make it, possibly," he said. "You two go home. I'll grab a sandwich in the street."

In a few minutes Lucille came back. "Had lunch? Ronny asked, lightly.

"Long ago. Your mother couldn't imagine why Sandra didn't notice. I told her when a man and a woman begin to lose track of meal time, it's probably love."

He looked at her, sharply. But she was smiling. He felt her hand in his arm. "She's sweet, isn't she, Ronny?" she said.

"Sandra?" he say casually. "She's a nice girl. At say rate she's picking up, it won't be long before we'll have to get her...I suppose."

Lucille nodded, soberly. "I'll miss her terribly. She's not at all what I would have expected a Park avenue girl to be. There's something real—real substance, I mean. And not even a little bit high-hat."

Ronny didn't say anything, but he was suddenly remembering Sandra as he had first met her in the apartment with David and left hurriedly because she had made it clear her only reason for wanting him there was to entertain her friend. And remembering that, he realized as he had not until now, how much Sandra had changed. Far from being snobby—she had made friends in every one in Maple Village. And it was evident she liked them. She was no longer the playgirl who had been contemptuous of all save those who moved in her own exclusive circle, the longer the superficial creature who had gone her selfish way in a world of superficialities.

But perhaps this was an interval—a change that could not be natural for the time being by necessity. Would she, when she returned to New York, look back on her Maple Village experience as an amusing and unimportant episode? Would she, when she was back on Park avenue, revert to type and become once more the cynical little snob? ....He had no answers for those questions and it came to him suddenly that he wanted none. In the end he would get her as completely out of his mind as she would be, inevitably, out of his life.

He saw Lucille looking at him curiously. He said, grinning, "Sorry, I'm letting this job get me down. I'm afraid." And then, "No, Sandra isn't high-hat. But you needn't change your ideas about Park avenue. The crowd she's always been with is high-hat, plenty high-hat....Well, if you'll keep an eye on the office for a few minutes, I'll put on the feed bag."

When he returned a quarter of an hour later, Sandra was bending over the table where Sandra had worked over proofs before decided to clean out the feature files. She looked up, laughing, when she heard Ronny come up behind her. "So this is the way you editors spend your leisure time—writing your own names all over the place!"

He looked over her shoulder, saw RONNY printed in large round letters across the face of a scratch pad. Quickly he turned away and stalked over to his desk feeling his face grow warm. "Just a little free-hand practice," he said glibly.

The last April issue of The Guardian was run off on Thursday, the thirteenth, and Ronny was to remember the day for he had just left the press room and was saying bing his lady hands with mechanics' soap when David Stanley arrived. It was a day message and told the complete story:

Fisher and Mother driving to Maple Village to bring Sandra home. Don't let them do it unless Sandra is fully recovered and wants to come back. They plan to make several stops on the way to give Father a little golf, arriving at Maple Village Sunday morning and leaving that afternoon. Can't tell you how strange it seems to hear a baseball broadcast and know you are miles away from the Stadium. When are you coming back? Drop in a line sometime. David."

Oddly enough, it was not the news that Sandra's parents were coming to Maple Village that made David's message memorable to Ronny, but the reference to his absence from the air. "Can't tell you how strange it seems to hear a baseball broadcast and know you are miles away from the Stadium ...." Well, many bands held the message while he read and reread that sentence. Suddenly he was not in The Guardian office but sitting in a small, glass-enclosed booth looking out over a sea of restless heads with the sweet sharp smack of ball on leather and the familiar roar of thousands of excited voices in his ears. He was in his place at the New York Stadium watching those small figures darting about on the wide field spread out before the stands, talking his head off, translating the game and the crowd and every tense moment into living, graphic words that would make his millions of listeners see and feel precisely what he was seeing and feeling.

David's message lay on the floor at his feet. Suddenly he looked down and his left clenched fists—grinned and picked up the telegram.

Every day since he had come home Ronny had read the sports page of the daily papers that came to The Guardian office, but not once had he listened to a sports broadcast and there was a tacit understanding between him and his mother that any and all broadcasts pertaining to sports were taboo.

When Ronny gave Sandra David's message that evening she handed it back, without a comment. But a little later she told Lucille her parents were coming to take her back to New York.

They're coming Sunday morning and leave that afternoon. Do you suppose we could arrange to have them take dinner here, Lucille instead of going to a hotel or somewhere?"

Lucille said, "If you want Mrs. MacAllister to cook you out her list for life, just let them take dinner anywhere but here. It's just two more—unless they're terribly fussy, of course."

Sandra pondered that. "Chet isn't fussy. Enid may be, a little, but she'll love it here. That's the reason I want them to come here—to see the way I've been living."

Through a silence, Lucille studied Sandra's face, then: "You've a fairly good color now, Sandra, and I'm good enough to cook—so I suppose you're strong enough to go home if you think you'd be happier there. But I wish you could have stayed another month."

Eyes roaming, Sandra thought, "There's no happiness at home for any of us." She said, meeting Lucille's gaze, "I've never been happier in my life than I have here, Lucille....I've wondered sometimes if I can ever be happy anywhere else."

On Christmas Day the powerful new radio transmitting unit of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, station CBL, at Hornby, Ont., will have its official opening with Hon. C. D. Howe as chief speaker and a Christmas program featuring King Georges good-will message from Sandringham scheduled. Pictures from the 50,000-watt transmitting station are shown here with Chief Engineer Nicholls (AT RIGHT) testing the control equipment with an assistant. The huge tower carrying the aerial, stretching 647 feet into the sky, is shown second from LEFT, and TOP CENTRE pictures the almost unbelievable small base on which the 70 tons of steel comprising the tower rest. The insulated base carrying the massive needle is only about 10 inches across. AT LOWER CENTRE the operating console through which the engineer in charge can fully control operation of the station is shown; the control units are duplicated in the sister station now under construction at Vercheres, Que. One of the large 100-kilowatt water-cooled tubes—among the largest ever utilized for broadcasting in North America— is seen at RIGHT. The heat generated by these tubes is removed from the transmitter by an air blast and is used through radiators for heating purposes.

TWELVE CASES IN POLICE COURT

Transient Given Three Months on C. C. A. Charge

Twelve cases were speedily dealt with during today's local Police Court procedure, held before Magistrate H. J. Butler, K.C., no major charges appearing on the docket.

Elmer Hughes, 18-year-old Kingston youth, pleaded not guilty to a charge of breaking and entering the premises of Dr. S. A. Simpson, Front Street. "We are offering no evidence," added Crown Attorney D. C. Donnan.

Mr. Hughes, "Case dismissed. Next case," replied His Worship.

Stating he had no home and pleading guilty to a charge of vagrancy, Victor McVea was given 30 minutes to get out of the city. "This boy was convicted of breaking and entering at Iroquois Falls last spring," informed Mr. Donnan.

"You get out of the city as fast as you can," instructed His Worship while addressing McVea, after dealing his sentence back to the date of his arrest.

William McFarlane, 43, of Ottawa, was sentenced to serve three months in the common jail after being convicted of the illegal possession of liquor. McFarlane answered all questions of the Crown in a snappy manner and concluded each answer with "Sir".

"Did you behave in the Ottawa Hotel without any chance?" asked Mr. Donnan. "No, sir, the 78th Battalion, sir," replied McFarlane.

Ted Ball at $1.498

Howard Withers, of Toronto, appeared charged with vagrancy. The Crown asked for a further remand until Friday. "How much will the bail be?" asked the accused. "We have other charges pending against this man," interrupted Court Clerk Sergeant Arthur Harman. "One thousand dollars," replied Mr. Donnan, in answer to the prisoner's question.

Convicted of a grave offence, Leo Morris, Bellevile, was fined ten dollars and costs, totalling $28.60. The accused was given a week in which to raise the necessary funds.

Three inebriates, including a woman, pleaded guilty to charges of intoxication. Each was given a week in which to raise the fine assessed.

The three juveniles who were apprehended after allegedly breaking into Dickens and Son and Weaver's Music Store, appeared on a special session of Juvenile Court held in camera. Their cases were adjourned for one week.

Police today stated other charges were pending against the three lads in question. "We have cleared up a number of minor breaking and robberies since the apprehension of these three boys and hope to clear up others before long," he concluded with our investigations," revealed police authorities today.

CONCERT NETS $60 FOR FUND

Yuletide Program at Capitol Enjoyed by Large Crowd

CHILDREN TO BENEFIT

Rough roads and treacherous sidewalks held no terrors for residents of Belleville and district Sunday when a crowd estimated at well over 1,000 people jammed into the Capitol theatre to capacity to hear the Christmas Carolling concert given by members of the Belleville Municipal Band and the Royal Canadian Band of Trenton. Given in aid of the Toy Fund of the Belleville Kinsmen Club, the affair was not only productive of splendid entertainment but a sum of money voluntarily given that will bring much joy to the neighborhood of sixty dollars.

The massed bands were never heard to better advantage than they were last night. Sergt. T. Wright, bandmaster of the R.C.A.F. Band wielded the baton for the massed band numbers, with Bandmaster Lieut. Fred Johnson conducting the community and carol singing.

Augmenting the musical part of the programme was a splendid variety entertainment given by members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club and vocal numbers given by those clever entertainers left nothing to be desired.

Alderman Laurie Lewis acted as chairman and ably capable of the efficient manner. In a brief address, he thanked everyone responsible for City Fire Department for their untiring efforts in bringing the affair to a degree of Christmas cheer to the children of the city who otherwise would not receive any. He stated that the fund and appealed to all to help in every way possible.

Carol singing led by Bandmaster Johnson, with a program of old words and melodies of the Yuletide favorites rang out in the theatre to the many crowd that filled the spirit of the occasion.

Fire Chief Jack Lynch expressed his appreciation of the fine generosity on the part of the citizens in general, both in attendance and for the amount of money given to this good cause. He also extended his thanks to members of the bands and assisting artists for their splendid contributions that made for the success of the affair.

CAROLS SUNG BY CANDLELIGHT

Impressive Services Held at Bridge Street Church on Sunday

Candlelight carol service was held at Bridge Street United Church on Sunday evening when the church building furnished by about two hundred and fifty men and women adults, whose flickering flames threw an air of mystery over the auditorium. In the choir loft, before the pulpit, at the windows and on the pillars and even pillars supporting gallery and four the lily flames lighted the darkness into their seats. The choir came silently down the aisle, after singing as from afar, "Silent Night Holy Night" and after the hymn recitative had been sung, "Comfort Ye," from Handel's "Messiah," sung by Mr. James D. Bandzer. As the choir entered each chorister lighted the candle from the flame at the right hand, the interior of the church became in light appreciably from the candles borne by the fifty or more members of the choir. At the front of the church a conventional Christmas tree in white, to represent a tree whose branches were weighted down with snow was a point of note in the church decorations; two glistening trees were at the side of the pulpit.

The service was devoted to the singing of carols and Christmas hymns. A number of ancient carols were sung by the choir, and the rubbers and overshoes of the congregation added to the general effect.

The service was impressive. Adults left their gifts at the door and the scholars brought in their gifts and placed them in front of the church.

Pre-Christmas Night Schedule to Stand For Liquor Stores

Toronto, Dec. 21 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn said today the pre-Christmas night opening schedule for Ontario liquor stores would stay as it despite protests of temperance leaders and organizations.

"This schedule suited the temperance people," he said. "I'm sure none of them would patronize the stores."

(At the Ontario Liquor Control Board offices it was announced the stores in the nine largest cities would stay open until 10 p.m. instead of the city's 6 p.m. closing. Hotels, clubs, all other stores will stay open until 11:30 p.m.).

Mr. Hepburn said the public demanded the extra service at Christmas and it was necessary to handle the crowds. It had been the policy for years to extend the hours when the crowds and extra staff was engaged.

The premier said he would be unable to receive a temperance deputation this week. He was energetically busy.

"We are trying to serve the cause of peace by any honorable means we can," he said. "We understand its grave issues," but it must not be forgotten that some of our problems under re-(Continued on Page Ten)

The sun's heat is the source almost all of the earth's heat energy comes from the sun. It is interesting to know the temperature of the sun. Its surface temperature averages between 12 and 21 million degrees. Its centre is about 35 million degrees. Its surface is about 18,000 degrees. These are enormous temperatures. No substance on our earth could exist there in the form of gas or vapor. The spectroscope has revealed that of the 92 elements found on earth by the sun. (A spectroscope is an optical instrument used to examine spectra of different substances, in the laboratory or as distinct as the sun).

Forecast Credited to Ex-Kaiser Recalled in Japanese Drive

Interview of 1908 Quotes Wilhelm as Saying 'Japanese Are Devils'

SAW JAPAN VS. WHITES

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
New York, Dec. 21 (AP) — The Japanese war machine, having brought under the Mikado's control another vast and rich section of northeastern China, has paused for reorganization and to consolidate its ruling pull.

Chinese military officials in the emergency capital of Hankow say they believe Japan's next attack will land troops at Canton, on the southeastern coast, and begin an offensive in that populous and wealthy region.

Napoleonic Program Feared.

Such a move might portend the carrying out of a Napoleonic program of conquest which the Chinese long have feared—the annexation of the entire eastern portion of the Chinese Empire, and maybe more.

Meantime Great Britain is preparing to send a naval armada to her crown colony of Hong Kong, on the coast near Canton. She has important domains in the Far East to worry about. So have the United States, France and the Netherlands.

Ex-Kaiser's Forecast.

It would be interesting in this connection to recall the forecast of Japanese conquest of the ex-Kaiser of Germany, in Doorn, Holland. The interview was given to Mr. Hale and had definite theories about the danger to the western nations from the Far East.

Some of the Kaiser's pronouncements on this question was given in an interview with the American writer, William Bayard Hale, in 1908. Century Magazine was in the process of publishing this when the German government urgently requested that it be suppressed. In (Continued on Page Ten)

Claude Keith Mulchell and J. Norman Overgaard were the men who, police guards said, escaped in the automobile. The driver fled. The men are from a town miles north of Toronto.

Says Good Taste In Radio Programs Gradually Declining

O'Toole said the program featuring West, which was broadcast by the National Broadcasting Company from Hollywood, "is filthy" and climaxed a gradual decline in the "good taste" of radio entertainment.

The skit was based on the Biblical story of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden.

Mr. Hepburn Still Claims Attempt to Dominate Ontario Made

OTTAWA STATEMENT

Mr. King Does Not Comment on Publication of "Confidential" Letters

Ottawa, Dec. 21 (CP)—Publication of correspondence between Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Premier Hepburn on the St. Lawrence waterways and associated power developments has left the Ontario premier still claiming an Ottawa-Washington attempt to dominate his province and Mr. Mackenzie King asserting with equal vigor that his letting reveals no basis for that charge.

Although refusal from Mr. Hepburn for permission to publish a confidential correspondence between the Prime Minister a cosmic suggestion they be tabled in parliament, it was given to newsprints by Mr. Hepburn yesterday.

Prime Minister's Statement.

Last night the prime minister issued a statement in which he declared the letters bore out his previous denial of the existence of any agreement between Washington and Ottawa and Washington regarding Ontario's power problems. He did not comment on Mr. Hepburn's notice in publishing the correspondence.

Replying to Mr. Hepburn's charge that the federal government refused to co-operate with Ontario in obtaining the Chicago Diversion agreement into Lake Superior, he referred to the history of development, the prime minister said this phase of the argument arose only after Hon. Harry Nixon had been refused a power export license Nov. 18.

Mr. King's Conclusion.

Up to that date and during Mr. Hepburn's personal interview with the Prime Minister and his colleagues on that day, no request had been taken to the federal government's attitude toward Chicago water diversion licenses, Mr. Mackenzie King said.

Until he had been refused permission to export power, the prime minister said, Mr. Hepburn had taken no exception whatever to any action or delay on the part of the federal government, unless it was that one of the causes of friction between the two governments was the desire of the federal authorities to obtain control over Ontario's resources during emergency.

Although there was only a small amount of sunshine today for Christmas shoppers to enthuse over, Old Sol celebrated the shortest appearance during the year between 7.30 a.m. and 4.30 p.m. behind a bank of dull snow-laden clouds.

Seventy eight hours and fifty-five minutes of daylight constituted the sun's contribution to the shortest day of the year, the orb of day rising at 7.46 a.m. and setting at 4.44 p.m. The sun will continue to rise at a later time each day during the next two weeks, until on Monday 7.52 a.m. the 21 will be the end the day is longer. Then it will gradually climb until after the middle of June it rises at 4.36 a.m.

WINTER BEGINS OFFICIALLY TODAY

Fairly Mild in The West But Cold in Eastern Canada

Winter officially began today, Dec. 21, with comparatively mild weather prevailing over the Canadian west, colder temperatures in the east and the mercury dipping below zero in only a few districts.

Cities and in Canada during the night, according to the Dominion Meteorological Office, Toronto, was Moosonee, Ont., on James Bay where 30 below was registered.

It was 22 below at Ottawa, and Moncton reported only below with Fredericton, the latest, Atlantic, at W. T., on the rim of the Arctic, reported temperatures 20 above.

From Winnipeg to Victoria, westerners had respite from frigid weather with temperatures ranging from a few points below freezing to 30 above at the British Columbia capital.

Temperatures in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes generally ranged from zero to 30 above.

Meteorologist Jarrad officials said the shortest days of the year are yesterday, today and tomorrow. There is only a matter of seconds between the length of the three days.

Heavy snow began falling at Kingston and at Ottawa and Hull. At Hull and Brockford there was a light fall.

The mercury skidded to 18 below at North Bay during the night and snow fell as the temperature moderated.

Police Blotter

Contrary to the usual conditions that surround the appearance of the residents on the Eve of the Christmas season, a general decrease of transients appearing at the police station has been noted the past few nights. Last night only four tramps sought warm sleeping quarters at the police station, as compared with 48 the previous night. Taking into consideration these figures have run into the hundreds, the number of figures during the past few weeks, the more recent figure are considered quite satisfactory.

A red-colored bicycle was found abandoned on Front street early today and is in the possession of the authorities awaiting its rightful owner.

Motorists have been forced to the police station during the past few days by covered streets during the past 24 hours. Several motor vehicles were found in difficulty as they skidded into ditches and across curbs today. Highway leading out of Belleville have been sanded, at strategic points to lessen such driving along the highways.

EMPLOYEES OF BELLE RECEIVE BONUS

A pleasing Christmas gift was received by the employees of the Belle theatre in the city this week in the form of a week's salary as a bonus by the Rev. Dr. efficient service during the year. The gift was made by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited. Mr. Ernest Bowen, manager of the Belle theatre stated that the cheque for each employee had been made out in suitable envelopes decorated for the occasion.

Bridge Street Sunday School Gives Fine Christmas Concert

For the first time in several years the children of Bridge Street Sunday School put on a Christmas concert last evening. An audience that more than filled large the Sunday School rooms enjoyed the delightful programme which showed much preparation on the part of those who had the program in charge.

All the departments of the Sunday School were represented and the children derived a great deal of enjoyment displaying their talents before each other and appreciative audience. The stage looked attractive with the large Christmas tree decorated with bags of candy tinsel and lights, while the background was decorated by dark blue, star spangled screen.

Mr. C. C. Burr, the superintendent of the school, was the chairman and in many of the items with a despatch. The tiny tots of the primary department opened the program with a chorus "Old Santa Claus" followed by recitations given by Jimmie MacPherson, Mary Muir and Betty Brook.

Joan Reid and Jean Muir and Donald Kerr gave a song which received much applause.

Little Stanley Pearson recited "A Christmas Story" which was quite long but the little man right through it without hesitation. Then eight children in a dialogue presented "My Gift to Jesus", in which they told about the good deeds they hoped to do and all these was a "Gift".

Then Doreen then gave a recitation, which was followed by a chorus, "Christmas Lullaby". This act showed a little girl dressed in an Eastern costume and holding a doll representing the Madonna and Child and were serenaded by children of Biblical times singing Christmas carols. This ended the primary part of the program.

The work of the senior department was of a rather more ambitious character and while were represented by solos, recitations and playlets.

The opening number was a sextette given under the direction of Miss Leathbrook. This was done in a very pleasing manner and showed careful preparation.

Shirley Smith sang sweetly and Jimmie Greer recited a short piece, while Miss Dickens' class presented a playlet in fine style which was beautifully staged.

A piano duet played by Miss Marion Leathbrook and Miss Jean Hollowell showed up well in the Bankier's class in a dialogue number. Mr. Moore's class of Trail sang "Christmas Bells" a fine number which was well received. This department was the first looking for the Christmas Spirit by going to the assistance of a group of poor men and an old couple in their homes.

Donald McCabe then sang a Christmas solo and Miss Price's class gave a chorus number.

Last on the program was a cantata given by Miss MacPherson's class of six girls, which was beautifully done and commanded much applause.

The arrival of Santa Claus was awaited with much expectancy by the smaller children and when he popped out from the chimney there was a shout of cheer that left nothing to be desired. Old Santa was played by Mr. Brown in his usual jolly and entertaining manner. All the children were then presented with gifts.

One of the most enjoyable features of the evening was the recitations of Mr. John Stephenson who has marked ability along that line. The audience greatly enjoyed his sketches of comic strip characters and Santa. Mr. Stephenson filled in the program between stage settings and before the concert began. In wishing the large gathering the compliments of the season, Mr. Stephenson said who had helped in making this a very successful entertainment, as the best ever put on by the school.

Obituary

LATE LEON E. WALMSLEY

Slowly, reverently, by the flower-banked casket in the home he loved as, with a crowd of people representative of all walks of life in the city and district joined in silent tribute to pay their last respects to the memory of the late Leon E. Walmsley, highly respected and esteemed resident of this city, who died suddenly last Friday evening. The funeral services were held in the late home at 19 Cedar Street yesterday afternoon.

The Rev. D. T. McClintock, pastor of Cherrywood United Church officiated at the simple yet impressive service. He was assisted by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, pastor of Bridge Street Church and the Rev. Dr. E. J. Baker.

Masonic rites under which the funeral was held were performed in the home by W. Bro. R. J. Andrews while those at the graveside were in charge of D.D.G.M. R. D. Adams and P.D.D.G.M. Dr. A. R. Carling officiating. Members of the Masonic lodges of the city proceeded with the funeral cortege to Belleville Cemetery where interment was made.

Floral Tributes

Evidence of the esteem and respect in which the late Leon Walmsley was held was seen in the large crowd of people who attended the services. Capacity of the home was taxed to the utmost. Outside a large gathering awaited the opportunity to view for the last time a tried and true friend. Members of the Belleville Administrative Board paid tribute to one who took an exceptional interest in their welfare and devoted much of his time and energy to their efforts by appearing in uniform. Churches, fraternal and other organizations were represented.

In a brief funeral address, the Rev. Dr. McClintock spoke of the three great problems that confront man Sin, Pain and Death. "The Bible has no solution for these problems," he said. "Yet it has a message for men who have to meet them. We should not bow to the sorrow of other people," the speaker pointed out "nor should we seek it."

In an eulogy to the deceased, Mr. McClintock pointed out that he was highly regarded by all with whom he came in contact. "He was an open-hearted, open-minded man, suddenly tragically taken away from us. The closing of the whole community bring sympathy today."

"When I think of the church and organization to which he belonged, there is but one thing I can say and that is of sorrow and sympathy for the family."

"There are three attitudes pointed out by the Master," the minister said, "firstly the King, who chose to ignore sorrow, those who face life without hope and with despair, and thirdly the attitude of Jesus Christ who said 'In the world ye shall have trouble but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world'. Christ did not want to die, yet He submitted His will to God. An angel came and strengthened Him. That is the way to face life. There is not anything, that gives us so much comfort in times like this as the teachings of Jesus Christ."

Following the address, prayer was offered by the Rev. Dr. Semple with the Benediction pronounced by the Rev. Dr. Semple. Masonic rites followed.

Active pall-bearers were all fellow brethren in the Masonic Order representing Moira, The Belleville and his own Eureka Lodge. These were Rt. Wor. R. A. Bonter, K.C., Wor. H. A. Morgan, Wor. Bro. W. D. Embury, Rt. Wor. Bro. C. Symons, Wor. Bro. Ryan, Barlow and Wor. Bro. H. Anniston.

Honorary pallbearers included:

Most Wor. Col. W. N. Ponton, Rt. Wor. J. O. Herity, Rt. Wor. T. D. Diamond, Bro. George H. Ostrom, Rt. Wor. C. H. Sulman and Rt. Wor. Bro. R. D. Adams.

A large following of citizens accompanied the cortege to the cemetery where further Masonic rites were held at the graveside.

Two Arabs were killed in a clash with police near the northern frontier. The other was slain when he ignored a police order to halt.

KINSMEN'S CLUB HOST TO KIDDIES

Turkey Dinner, Program, Gifts Given to 25 Youngsters

This satisfaction derived from distributing Christmas cheer to children less fortunate than ourselves was enjoyed to the utmost by members of the Kinsmen Club when they were hosts to a number of the impoverished children of the city at a turkey dinner served in the Ivy Queen Room of the Hotel Quinte.

The banquet which took the place of the regular fortnightly meeting of the club, was twenty-five minutes long for each minute of the Christmas of their lives as they sat down to a sumptuous repast served in the daintiest manner by the members of the club. The Turkey Question lilted on every tongue, and all did justice to the delicacies and other goodies containing in the Christmas menu enjoyed not only by the young guests of honor but by the members of the club.

Topping the "Christmas Turkey" was a varied program, the master ceremonies for that part of the evening, John Spencer, of the R.O.A.F. The tricks of magic and sleight-of-hand had the young audience in ecstasies of delight, and when, after they were called upon to assist in the many tricks of the conjurer their excitement knew no bounds.

A musical addition to the program was also enjoyed by all, and as a special present was the rendition of favorite Christmas carols by a trio of soprano quintette from Christ Church choir under the direction of Jean Brown.

Gifts Presented

Following the program gifts wrapped in red Christmas paper were presented to the children. An additional class was added in the distribution of gifts, the assortment of presents for the Queens Hotel for distribution among its youngsters.

Not only did the meeting take the form of a Christmas cheer party for the youngsters but it marked the inauguration of the 1938 presidency of Kinsmen Leo Gerbus, retiring prez, Norman Garbut, voted the appreciation of the club for the co-operation given him by the members of the club during the past year, and hoped the same would be given to his successor. Retiring officers endorsed the club briefly. A feature of the meeting was the presentation of a Past-President's Garbutt of the past president's pin.

Guests of the club were members of the executive of the Cobourg Kinsmens Club, including Messrs. Gordon Cleland, secretary of the sister organization, Paul Jones, and Jack Ventress, Don Scott of the Peterboro branch of the Kinsmen organization, was also a guest.

Appreciation of the clubs efforts in their various activities were voiced by Jack Allin, chairman of the Board of Education, and Fred Johnson of the Bridge of Belleville Municipal Band.

Community Singing

Community singing led by Jack Darlington found the soprano voices of the present quite matching with the tenors and basses of their hosts as old favorites such as "Bells", "Rudies" and other well-known numbers rolled out to the accompaniment of Phil piano.

Attendance at this meeting was guaranteed by a popular vote of the members present.

Members of the club felt that they were well repaid for their efforts in bringing a slice of happiness of Christmas cheer to their young guests. This was appreciated was evidenced in the shining faces of the youthful guests as they filled into the dining room, with tummies full of turkey and some full of gifts.

GENERAL FOODS WORKERS BENEFIT

Food Company Announces New Co-operative Group Insurance Plan

Toronto, Dec. 20.— Adoption of a non-occupational accident and sickness disability benefit plan for its employees and a new group life insurance plan, is announced by R. K. McIntosh, Vice President, General Foods Limited. All costs of non-occupational accident and sickness benefits are borne by the company, while both company and participating employee contribute to the cost of the life insurance.

Under the sickness and accident plan, all regular employes are entitled to two weeks of benefits during each year of continuous service. Any unused portions of each yearly benefit credits accumulate from year to year up to a maximum of 26 weeks, provided service is continuous. "A provision of particular interest", said Mr. McIntosh, "is that credits are being allowed for service rendered prior to installation of the plan. These benefit credits are retroactive, in other words. Our employes right now have accident and sickness benefit credits in their favor ranging up to the maximum of 26 weeks, depending upon length of service and previous non-occupational disability absences".

The week's benefit payments in the case of a salaried employe is the regular weekly salary as the time disability begins. In the cases of an hourly-rated employe one week's benefit is equivalent to two-thirds of his average weekly pay. Benefits are payable beginning with the first day of disability to salaried employes and with the eighth calendar day of disability to hourly-rated employes.

Participation in the new group life insurance plan is entirely optional, Mr. McIntosh explains. All employes are eligible to participate after six months' continuous service. Insurance coverage is determined as an employe's annual pay. Under this new co-operative plan, employe contributes 4½ cents a month for each $1,000 of insurance, the corporation pays the balance of the cost over and above employe contributions.

The non-occupational accident and sickness plan is in operation, and the life insurance plan become effective January 1, 1938.

Christmas Carols Are Sung by Rotarians

Christmas carols featured the weekly meeting of Belleville Rotarians at the Hotel Quinte Monday, the program being in charge of Les Rigg. Choral selections by the Belleville Octette were well rendered and appropriate to the Christmas season. Vocal solos by James Bahkler varied the program. The accompanist was Les Rigg. Singing of carols by the entire club formed another pleasing feature. The Octette was composed of Merl Hoosier, Art's Brass, Bert Stewart, Gerald Duff, Charles Spalding, James Bahkler, Harry Morman, & W. Burrows.

President Fred Douglass expressed the keen regret of every member at the sudden deaths of Leon Whitney and Grant Cooper, the former being a valued member of the Belleville Rotary Club for years and the latter a warm friend of the Club and a frequent guest at the weekly meetings.

Rotarians on this occasion were guests of the Hotel Quinte, Manager Gerald Jenkins providing a very fine Christmas turkey dinner which was greatly appreciated. The dining room was suitably decorated, and each corner of the room held a large Christmas tree illuminated with colored electric bulbs.

Secretary MacLean Haig sent his Christmas greetings to the Club members prior to leaving for England where he will spend the Yuletide holidays with his brother. Accompanying the greetings was a large turkey which Mac donated to the Club to be disposed of for the benefit of the crippled children fund. John Deacon won the bird on ticket No. 21.

Mackenzie Robertson, absent from several meetings on account of illness, was welcomed back by the President and members.

Past President Bert Boyce officiated at the fining line with his customary success thereby benefiting the crippled children fund.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, December 22
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THIS SHOULD be a day of great excitement and commotion, according to the lunar transits. There may be a sudden change, removal or journey, either of which would be of benefit and of far-reaching influence, if managed with calmness and discretion and not turmoil, quarrels and confusion. Emplorivative business and finances are well fortified, but in all be cautious and discreet.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of surprising progress and opportunity, with sudden change and other surprising developments. But these decided benefits would be nullified by indulgence in quarrels or reckless and impetuous behavior.

A child born on this day may be efficient, original and independent with many opportunities for signal success in life. But it should have early training and discipline regarding its impetuous, quarrelsome and wayward nature. It should have a sound business training, although possibly in unusual lines.

OPINIONS DIFFER OVER DUCHESS

London, Dec. 220.—(CP-Havas)

The managing editor of Britain's peerage yesterday wrote in the Sunday Referee that the decision as to the Duchess of Windsor's rank "can only be settled by the King's intervention".

The editor, C. F. J. Hawkinson, also said the Duke of Windsor's marriage "may already be considered a dynastic one."

"We of Burke's place the Duchess of Windsor by reason of the date of creation of her husband's Duke-dom, in the 20th or Junior, Duchess," the article said.

"We believe that she is debarred from taking any royal precedence by the letters patent governing the title of Baron, held by the Duke, in which it is clearly stated that neither his wife nor his issue can take royal rank."

Placed 5th by Bo Brett's

De Brett's, the authoritative publication on rank and titles, placed the Duchess in the eighth rank, the article went on, "that is the eighth lady in the realm or the third Royal Duchess, ranking immediately after the Duchess of Gloucester and the Duchess of Kent".

De Brett's had reached the decision on the "recognized rule that a wife takes her husband's precedence and that it is already established in the Peers' roll that the Duke of Windsor is ranked as the youngest brother of the Sovereign, that is, the third Royal Duke."

"These are the two opinions. One of them is almost bound to be correct. . . .

"Fears are expressed that the decision, when it comes, will make the Duke's marriage a morganatic one. Those fears need not be entertained for the reason that, as the Duchess and any children are debarred from sharing the Duke's highest rank of Royal Highness, they cannot rank with him or take the precedence of his highest station, and therefore the marriage may already be considered a morganatic one. This fact has hitherto been overlooked".

Premier Maurice Duplessis, of Quebec (LEFT) meets Premier M. F. Hepburn, of Ontario, at the latter's office in Toronto in a renewal of the inter-provincial conversations which began when Mr. Hepburn visited Montreal. The respective premiers have already announced an economic alliance and they are seeking an accord on power exports. It is also reported that the governments may prepare a joint brief for presentation to the Rowell Commission investigating provincial-federal relations.

WHY DO THEY DO IT?

"In many cases accidents at highway crossings are due to negligence of those driving automobiles and other vehicles and of pedestrians. The negligence is found at both unprotected and protected crossings".

This statement from the judgments, orders, regulations and rulings of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada is worthy of thought. The statement is supplemented by the details that its 346 cases there was danger at protected crossings due to the negligence of those using the crossings from May 1st to October 30, 1937 on the C.N.R. lines and in 210 cases from April 1 to Sept. 30 on the C.P.R. from those persons using the crossings.

Then occurs this striking statement "Notwithstanding safety devices and cautionary signals people take chances and disregard safety. Motor accidents are becoming more frequent. Every sane motorist deplores this."

Here are a few dangerous practices:

Truck driver motioning watchman out of the way, and the latter not moving, the driver swings to the right and gets over the crossing.

Running through stop signal.

Disregard of both stationary and watchman's stop signals.

Auto does not stop at crossing, strikes car of train engaged in switching.

Truck struck by car being backed up on elevator track.

Auto runs through gate semashing arm.

Cars strikes gate during fog.

Too fast car skids into side of train.

Auto poor headlights fail to show train though driver sees engine.

Auto fails to stop for red lantern signal.

Auto nearly runs down watchman.

Auto at speed of sixty miles an hour runs through gates after gates down one and half minutes.

Truck and trailer swerve to escape car parked waiting for train to pass and barely escape train.

Car attempts to cross track in front of train while car has defective brakes.

Auto drives under lowering gates.

These are many of the dangerous practices and they may be summarized as follows:

Disregarded watchman's signals	11
Disregarded bell ringing	7
Ran through stop signal	24
Ignored stop signal	19
Ran into train or engine on crossing	14
Attempted to cross, struck by train	14
Passed red flag or red lamp signal	35
Ran into or through lowered gates	44
Passed under gates being lowered	17
Attempted to cross when gates down	5
Regardless of signals, crossed in front of engine	16
Stopped on crossing in front of train	4
Backed or turned on crossing	2
Attempted to cross in front of approaching train	130
Stalled on crossing	4
Approached crossing too fast	2
Autos collided on crossing	5
Autos stopped foul of track	3
Horse drawn vehicles attempted to cross in front of train and struck	3
Total	358

From the point of reason these practices are silly and criminal because they possess no excuse and they endanger lives and property.

WAYS OF VOTING

The great democratic countries, whatever their faults, have a way of expressing themselves by the ballot, which dictatorships do not permit. A recent election in one country which piled up millions of ballots for the support of its chief and his policy causes wonder in democratic lands. There is the wonder why so many people voted on one subject when dictatorial countries have never seen so one-sided an election. There is wonder why an election was held at all if it is not a true voice of the people.

The great democracies cannot quite understand the view of peoples which allow their elections to be largely set beforehand. The totalitarian states, in which the individual exists entirely for the state and not the state for the individual, have a repressive way of doing things through their dictators which puzzle.

One can realize of course that the dictator can be a valid strength in impressing the people with a solid vote and the outside nations and critics of the totalitarian state the immensity of strength behind the one-way vote. Though citizens of dictatorial states seem cheered by the gigantic oppositionless vote, the bread democracies are not impressed, but see in it just the dictator's wizardry.

"THE HURRICANE" IS ANOTHER OF THE SERIES OF "MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY" stories immortalized in celluloid. First "The Mutiny on the Bounty" by Hall and Nordhoff, two young men who absorbed South Sea atmosphere by living on romantic Tahaiti found instant favor as they retold the old story of the mutineers who founded a colony in the South Seas, and were forever exiled from the homeland, that little bit of land in the midst of the sea called England. "Men against the Sea" followed, by the same authors, telling the story of the amazing escapes in open boat of the captain and crew of the Bounty, cast adrift when the mutineers took over, some 3500 miles batteling every foot of the way against terrific storms, hunger, thirst, murderous savages, and all the handicaps which the tropics can produce at a moment's notice. A later volume told the story of the colony founded by the mutineers in an out-of-the-way spot and brought the history up-to-date with all its tragic aftermath. "Hurricane" does not treat of the mutineers of the Bounty but has the same surroundings and South Sea glamour and portrays a great tropical hurricane in all of its devastating fury together with the puny efforts of humans to withstand its destroying deadliness—a battle with the elements in which only the fittest could possibly survive. "The Hurricane" was a moving intensely interesting story, and as a film it is said to be even more so.

"CREW OF WRECKED LINER DISGRACE TO U. S. SHIPPING", reads Front Page headline referring to wreck of cruise liner President Hoover. Passengers charged that many of the crew were not seamen and knew nothing of launching or manning lifeboats, that the boats had to be pulled ashore with cables as a result, after several attempts at launching which ended in swamping. Members of the crew are charged with being Communists, with breaking into the bar of the wrecked liner and getting drunk on champagne, of breaking into the women's quarters on the island, and frightening women and children. Not very long ago the editor of a magazine published in the United States severely criticised the service on American passenger liners, saying that members of the crews were inefficient, impudent and generally much "Superior to their positions," in their own opinions. The same editor complimented Canadian and British liners on the splendid srevice given at sea. Of course there was a comeback, denials, threats of boycotts and all that, but the incidents attending the wreck of the President Hoover would seem to bear out in every respect the charges made recently by that newspaper man, arising out of his own experience at sea.

Toronto, Dec. 20 (CP)—Following is text (3000) of correspondence with Prime Minister King on public today by Premier Hepburn:

Miss to Hinfrst

July 31, 1937—Provincial Secretary H. C. Nixon to Hon. Fernand Rinfret, Secretary of State.

Dear Mr. Rinfret:

In January, 1934, a reconnaissance survey was made by engineers of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission to determine the feasibility of diverting the flow of the Kenogami River, a tributary of the Albany River, to Lake Superior. The information secured indicated that the proposition was feasible. As the same time an investigation was made of a proposal to divert a part of the flow of the Ogoki River, another tributary of the Albany, to Lake Nipigon, and then to Lake Superior.

Insofar as the diversion of the waters of the Ogoki into the Nipigon drainage basin is concerned, the question of its diversion, control and use is purely a domestic matter. When, however, the diverted water reaches the Great Lakes, the question at once becomes of international import, and the same is true of any water that may be diverted from Long Lac as the headwaters of the Kenogami River into Lake Superior.

In February, 1925, the Honourable G. H. Ferguson, now Sir George, Honorable Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior at Ottawa, advised me that the diversion of the water from the Albany River into Lake Superior was under consideration and that he wished to point out that, as the water to be diverted would be added to the Great Lakes System, it should be looked upon as belonging to the Province of Ontario for development.

He asked, therefore, that assurance would be given in any question which might arise that the Dominion Government would consider the water the same public property of the province, aside from any claim it might have on the diversion of other waters.

In replying to this letter, Mr. Stewart stated in a letter dated May 4, 1925, that he and his colleagues of the Cabinet were of the opinion that if the Government were prepared to give the necessary authorization for a direct water from the Albany, and forego the navigation and power advantages on the Albany inherent in the water so diverted, it would undoubtedly be justified in assuming that the water, when added to the Great Lakes system, would be and still be considered Canadian water.

He stated that he was prepared to assure Mr. Ferguson that the Government would maintain this interpretation in any questions which came before it having to do with the consideration of the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence Waterway, particularly with respect to the apportionment of the waters between Canada and the United States.

Later, when the St. Lawrence Deep Waterway Treaty was signed at Washington on July 18, 1932, but not ratified, was drafted, provision was made for the retention of the benefit to Canada for any water so diverted into the Great Lakes system. Paragraph (d) of Article VIII in that treaty reads as follows:

"The high contracting parties, recognizing their common interest in the preservation of the levels of the Great Lakes system, agree: That, in the event of diversions being made into the Great Lakes system from watershed lying wholly within the boundaries of either country, the exclusive right to the use of the equivalent in quantity to the provisions of Article IV (a) be vested in the country making such waters, and the quantity of waters so diverted shall be at all times available to that country for use for power below the point of diversion, or shall be at the substitute a part of boundary waters."

Within the past year additional surveys have been made on the upper part of the watershed of the Kenogami River and southerly from Long Lac to Lake Superior, with a view to providing a channel for water transportation of a large quantity of timber floated to the Long Lac area to Lake Superior. This, of course, would permit part of the waters of Long Lac to be diverted into the headwaters of Aguasabon River, thence to Lake Superior, and necessitate a dam being built on the Kenogami River sufficiently high to provide a channel to be excavated from the southern end of the lake over the divide.

Sufficient water would be diverted to transport the cut of pulpwood, and, in addition to that, if the necessary storage arrangements are made, a greater part of the run-off of the watershed above Long Lake River dam will be diverted southerly. The average annual flow which could be terminated would be 1,300 cubic feet per second.

As pointed out above, as soon as this water reaches Lake Superior it becomes a matter of international concern. I would, therefore, appreciate having your views in connection with this matter in two respects; firstly, regarding permission to divert the water into the Great Lakes System; and, secondly, regarding an agreement for the retention for Canada of the benefits of the diversion.

Apart from the view of the acceptance by both the United States and Canada of the principle of diversion into the Great Lakes and that it be so diverted shall remain the property of the country making the diversion, as evidenced by their signatures to the St. Lawrence Deep Waterway Treaty, it may not be necessary at this time to do more than summate a treaty on this particular item, but the exchange of notes between the two countries should be the two countries might be sufficient until such time as the question of diversion could be included in a formal treaty.

I would, therefore, respectfully suggest that you transmit through the proper channels our request for permission to divert these waters into the Great Lakes System, and also take whatever steps are necessary to retain for Canada the benefits of the diverted waters.

(Signed) H. C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary, Province of Ontario.

King to Nixon

Sept. 7, 1937—Prime Minister King to Provincial Secretary Nixon:

Dear Sir:

Your letter of July 31st to the Secretary of State of Canada, which Mr. Rinfret has referred to me, you outlined a project of diverting water—averaging 1300 C.F.S. from the Kenogami River in the vicinity of the Albany River) via Long Lake to Lake Superior for the purpose of carrying pulpwood. In conclusion you asked that your request for permission to divert these waters into the Great Lakes System be transmitted through the proper channels and that the necessary steps be taken to retain for Canada the benefits of the diverted waters.

I have given the matter preliminary examination, and it may be necessary to indicate some certain considerations that have presented themselves, though, as will appear, they have for the present been pointed out in previous communications.

A determining factor in the matter as your letter points out, is the International character of the issue and the necessity to cover it by an international treaty. The United States in view of their interests in the Great Lakes System. After reviewing certain correspondence of 1925 between the Provincial and Federal Governments and the resulting Article VIII of the as yet unratified St. Lawrence Deep Waterway Treaty of 1932, you raise the question whether a treaty to cover this particular Long Lake project would be necessary at this time. The suggestion is that possibly a simple exchange of notes might be sufficient until such time as the matters at issue could be included in a formal treaty.

The rules presently governing the division, as between the two countries of the uses of boundary waters, that is to say, the British C.P.S.: 30,000 C.F.S. rule at Niagara and the rule of equal division at the International Rapids, treaty rules duly ratified and made law in both cities by or pursuant to the Boundary Waters Treaty of 1909. What we have been awaiting for a long while and still wish to obtain —namely, a principle or rule that would govern the use of the whole watershed into the International waterways and not merely the waters above as national waters exclusively, would in effect amount to a wholesale dealing with the use of this existing treaty law.

I fear, therefore, that we should be on very unsafe ground if we undertook to rely on any international agreement differing in its constitutional sanction from the treaty which presently governs the matter. There is there any likelihood that the United States executive would be prepared to deal on a different legal basis.

In other words, this Long Lake case would properly require a formal agreement to be negotiated with the United States Senate and to Parliamentary approval here. Then the agreement so reached by the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario and, in this connection, the above mentioned reply to Mr. Lyon reviewed the situation from the point of the boundary waters situation as it now stands. Should you decide that a separate treaty as is now in question appeared to have no prospect of success.

The United States administration would then be free to proceed to back the St. Lawrence Treaty for such action as they might consider wise. A separate treaty would have less chance in the United States Senate than the Deep Waterway Treaty as it would be subsidiary to the same effect in the St. Lawrence Waterway project and would be for Canada's benefit only so far as power is concerned. In the meantime the Boundary Waters Treaty would be in force and the diversion and the compensation work proceeded with.

Since that time there has been some further exploratory and preliminary background, of which I informed Mr. Hepburn in a letter dated January 6th of this present year. It was also explained at a greater length to the Premier of the province and the power commission in two conferences held here in Ottawa on January 26th and 27th, February 26th.

The conversations with United States representatives then mentioned indicated that the Secretary of State, Mr. Washburn and definitely interested in developing the St. Lawrence Waterway project in connection with United States representatives held here in the forthcoming month. At last two conferences held here on January 26th and 27th, February 26th further explanations along this line were given by Federal and Provincial representatives of Ontario and the Hydro Electric Power Commission.

In my letter of September 7th last to Mr. Nixon, the Provincial Secretary, the position was again reviewed with particular reference to the project to divert water from the Kenogami River, via Long Lake, into Lake Superior, in response to his request that certain action be taken in that connection. For convenience, I am repeating here the substance of that letter herein.

The position remains, I believe, substantially as shown by these various communications.

As indicated before, we recognize that the whole question of the Ogoki diversion will require to be treated, and in order to be in a position to commence with the United States Government I should be glad to learn your views. We may also be glad then to be able to arrange for a discussion of technical matters with the Hydro Commission or such representatives as you may designate. I have no desire to confer "confidential" as before because of the nature of our relations with the United States.

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) W. L. Mackenzie King.

Hepburn to King

Oct. 14, 1937—Premier Hepburn to Prime Minister Mackenzie King:

Dear Mr. King:

Yesterday I consulted with my Cabinet colleagues on the question of Canada's position in respect to the proposed St. Lawrence Waterway scheme, as a result of which I can only reaffirm the position taken by me during the time of the election and also on the occasion of your visit to this office.

Having finally arrived at a satisfactory arrangement with respect to a settlement of our power problems with the Dominion Power, I am advised by the Hydro Commissioners and engineers that Ontario's present requirements have been taken care of for many, many years to come.

We are, therefore, not in need of power at this time, having in mind our acute railway problems, and additional expenditures.

In my judgment the purchasing power of the United States and countries will collapse with the continued expenditure of billions for armament purposes and this continent will, as a consequence, witness a wave of depression comparable to the one through which we have just passed.

I should be very happy to have members of the Hydro Commission and other officials confer with your officials at any time you so desire.

With kindest personal regards, I remain,

Yours very sincerely,

(Signed) M. F. Hepburn.

King to Hepburn

Nov. 26, 1937—Prime Minister King to Premier Hepburn:

Dear Mr. Hepburn:

I have received your letter of October 14th and have noted your observations regarding the St. Lawrence Waterway matter.

I believe a discussion by members of the Hydro Commission and officials with the appropriate officials here, with respect to some of the matters referred to in your recent correspondence, might serve a useful and mutually helpful purpose.

I have accordingly instructed the Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs to arrange for a meeting at a time that may be most convenient to the officials of both Governments.

With kindest personal regards,

Yours very sincerely,

(Signed) W. L. Mackenzie King.

Sept. 14, 1937—Chairman T. Stewart Lyon of Ontario Hydro Electric Commission to Provincial Secretary Nixon:

Dear Mr. Nixon:

I have read with keen interest but no surprise this letter from Mr. King to you regarding the Long Lac diversion.

Mr. King in effect says—that he does not propose even to ask United States authorities for their consent to the diversion of the Long Lac water into Lake Superior, but that the question can only legally be made by amendment to the Boundary Waters Treaty, and in his opinion there is no likelihood that the United States executive would be willing to deal on a different legal basis.

500 Attend Carol Service Held in Stirling Theatre

Stirling.—Strains hymns came all parts of the district reverberating about five hundred filled the auditorium of Stirling Theatre on Sunday night for a carol service sponsored by the young men of Stirling, under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Young Men's Bible Class. Artistically colored slides bearing the words of the most familiar Christmas carols were thrown on the screen and a large male choir led in the singing. Mrs. W. H. Bishop, well-known local pianist, acted as accompanist for the evening. Vocal duets and solos by Mrs. Frank Warren and Mrs. Harry Morrow and Mrs. H. F. Mills also featured the splendid musical program.

Mr. Arthur Duncan acted as master of ceremonies and introduced the various numbers with brief recitations selected from the works of Edgar Guest and Patience Strong. These poems, most of which were appropriate to the occasion were also beautifully illustrated with excellent slides. The young men of Stirling are to be highly commended for the excellent manner in which the entire service was conducted. Greetings were also extended to the gathering on behalf of all the local churches by the following ministers: Rev. T. Greene, St. Paul's United Church, Rev. Jas. Scott, Bible Presbyterian Church, in charge of the United Church, Rev. J. A. Kotford of St. Andrew's Presbyterian, Stirling, Rev. T. A. S. Tulloch, president of St. Andrew's Young Men's Bible Class, Mr. Jack Ormiston, Wm. Dermody, James Hahn, Lorne Anderson and Arthur Duncan. The use of the theatre was given free of charge through the courtesy of the Stirling Village Council and the staff and management of the theatre assisted throughout the service. A prelude of recorded Christmas music was transmitted through the loud speakers as the crowd assembled and the carols used included, "Ghost Night," "The First Noweel," "Come All Ye Faithful," "Joy to the World" "Hark the Herald Angels Sing" "Angels From Their Realms of Glory". The assembly closed with the singing of "Silda With Me" and Rev. W. J. Scott pronounced the benediction. Christmas music, carols, plays and recitations with talent that included all the younger set of the community gave evidence of much effort and thought in the preparation. This entertainment which is held from year to year serves the church school as well as the public school. A tree beautifully decorated with streamers and tinsel and loaded with presents gave a real tinge of Christmas to the occasion. Among the presents was a fine turkey for the minister, the Rev. J. F. Evans, as a gift from the Sunday School in appreciation of his co-operation and help. Among those who assisted with the program, from a distance, were, Mr. and Mrs. Stalking Culver and Miss Phyllis Richardson, of Napanee. Miss Stevenson who had charge of the entertainment is the public school teacher at Bethel and also the superintendent of the Sunday School.

NEW IDEA TRIED FOR SKIN ILLS

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

ACNE VULGARIS, the vulgar acne, is certainly a blot to present day skin. The crops of pimples on the face and shoulders, more or less completely or even disfiguring comedones, miseries of its course, can only be treated here in brevity.

We advocated here in this column, for years, treatment recommended a few years ago on the basis that there was a disturbance of function in the skin and that it could be treated with hypodermic injection of the anterior pituitary hormone, Antuitrin "S". We have heard from a good many people who tried this and success followed in about half of the cases.

An interesting new idea has just been advanced by a New York dermatologist, Dr. Neild Stirling, over the disease philosophizes, by it seems that the trouble occurs in the hair or on the scalp.

Acne pustules develop on the shoulder blades, over the breastbone, and the shoulders. This, in spite of the fact that the scalp obtains just as many sebaceous glands as skin surface. The sebaceous glands are little glands which supply the oil and grease to the surface of the skin. This secretion, called "sebum," is carried down in ducts and accumulates in the gland crypts, themselves usually inconspicuous.

New Hair Rises

In the scalp, the sebaceous glands empty into the hair follicle. Each hair has a small involuntary muscle attached to it. When this muscle contracts, the hair rises to a vertical position or "raises the hair" armorer pill. When these are stimulated by cold, they cause the sensation of "raising the hair". They are stimulated quite frequently to a slight degree many times a day, although the amount of stimulation is not sufficient for us to recognize it. It is probable that the popular sensation of the hair right in the opening of the duct of the sebaceous gland, will supply the sland and cause the accumulation of sebum.

The face, forehead, shoulders, chest, etc., are characterized by a different kind of hair, much finer, called "lanugo hair." These lanugo hairs do not have arrector pili muscles, and hence the sebaceous glands in this region are not stimulated to drain-age.

There are two factors which are essential in the formation of acne pustules: first, increased secretory of the para-sympathetic nervous system which causes an increased secretion of sebum, and secondly, insufficient action of the arrector pili so that this sebum is not carried out. Everything else is secondary as a causative factor.

This idea, at least, checks with the treatment that everybody recognizes as essential, and which probably must accompany every other form of treatment, and that is cleanliness. The use of soaps to rid the skin of grease and open up the openings of the sebaceous glands, and the use of comedone extractors to press on the glands and relieve the pent up accumulations.

A comedone extractor is a small metal instrument with an eyelet which is placed over the mouth of the sebaceous gland, pressing upon it until its contents are extruded. Usually a small white plug of fatty material marks the mouth of the comedone.

BRIEF NOTES

My friend, Morris Markey, who is investigating certain health problems, tells a story that a young man was sent out by the Department of Social Hygiene association to accost people on the street and tell them about his symptoms and ask them what they would do about it. He accosted 100 strangers. This is what they told him: 32 told him to go to a drugstore and ask the pharmacist to give him some medicine; 19 told him to consult some of the specialists who advertise their skill in the newspapers; 16 gave specific advice for a cure—recommended a drug or a patent medicine; 30 told him to see his doctor alone, it would cure itself; only 11 said "Go to a doctor."

WE SUGGEST— FOR HER

By LADDIE

FASHION in jewelry changes, but women's love for jewelry, never. Modern woman loves her jewelry as much as her sister who lived in a cave.

The bracelet illustrated would certainly please the little woman. It is silver and quite an elaborate design, is bold and showy, and is one of the very latest things. She would prefer a gold bracelet, by gold, however, with her initials hanging from it in the place of bells. That is also a late design.

Then there are the black or gold bracelets in wide bands with rhinestone ornament. These ornaments often come detached and used as clips or clips. They are not quite as new as the one illustrated, but are known by the best shops.

Heavy gold band bracelets, many of them engraved, and closely resembling those worn in grandmother's day, are also very popular.

If you prefer color—there are any number of bead bracelets, and many, many more. Don't overlook bracelets when shopping for a last minute gift that is sure to please.

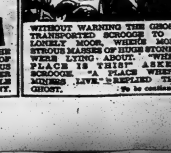
Dickens' Christmas Carol

ADAPTED BY C. D. VORMELKER

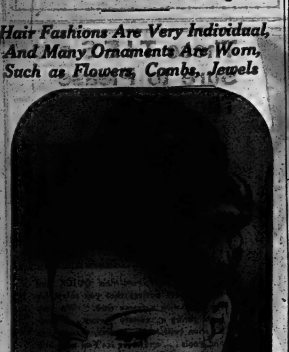
Illustrated by Alfred J. Boesacker, CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION



AT BOB'S SUGGESTION THE FAMILY, UNWILLINGLY, DRANK A TOAST TO MR. SCROOGE. TINY TIM DRANK IT LAST OF ALL, BUT SCROOGE WAS THE FAMILY OGRE AND MENTION OF HIS NAME PUT THE FAMILY IN GLOOM FOR FULL FIVE MINUTES.

SCROOGE HAD HIS EYE UPON TINY JIM UNTIL THE LAST, AS HE HAD THE GHOST OF CHRISTMAS PRESENT LEFT THE CRATCHITS AND JOURNEYED ALONG THE STREETS AGAIN.

AS THEY PASSED ALONG, THE GHOST SPREAD THE FAVORS OF HIS TORCH WITH A GENEROUS HAND. THEY VERY LAMPLIGHTER LAUGHED OUT LOUD, LITTLE KNOWING HE HAD ANY COMPANY.



WITHOUT WARNING THE GHOST TRANSPORTED SCROOGE TO A DESOLATE MOOR, WHERE MONSTROUS MARKERS OF HUGE STONES WERE LYING ABOUT. "THIS PLACE, I'M THINK," ASKED SCROOGE. "A PLACE WHERE MORTALS LIVE," REPLIED THE GHOST.

Contour Coiffure Is Latest Style

Hair Fashions Are Very Individual, And Many Ornaments Are Worn, Such as Flowers, Combs, Jewels

Courtesy Bonwit-Teller
Coiffure with curls in cluster and ornament on top of head, by Sydney.

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

WOMEN HAVE done all sorts of things with their hair. They have worn it low and flowing or in long bangs; in plaits, as they did in Queen Guinevere's day; they have made it white with powder and red when it is rouged; they have worn it in bunches or coils in their necks and twisted into chignons, as they did in Dickens' day, and indeed it has been many a one.

And they have built it up into huge structures, bejewelled it, and decorated it with every manner of queer devices. They have also covered it with caps of lace and net, and otherwise, played around with it.

And latterly they have cut it off, but have not been able to leave it alone even then; but have curled, waved, lacquered, and otherwise treated it up to whatever way seemed to them most becoming.

Now, says Sidney, New York hair stylist, coiffures are extremely individual. Many ornaments, such as flowers, combs and real jewels, are worn in the hair. In fact brunettes have gone pre-war, and oh, so feminine! This is the case with the contour al centre. It is called "Turn of the Century", and is an example of the new brushed up coiffures sponsored by Sydney. On his return from Paris recently, he announced that all chic French women are brushing their hair up. The arrangement, pictured, brushed back softly but sleekly up against the sides into a cluster of curls at the top. The curls are topped by a rather elaborate ornament.

Pompadour Twist Revived

The "French twist" was a favorite of the nineties. It is revived today, but has a decidedly modern look. Hair is an exemple. It also follows the new brushed up effect. Note how the hair is combed. Then the hair is done in a French twist in back, and is caught with a comb. On the sides and front it is brushed up smoothly, with the curls turned under in smooth rolls.

"Contour is the thing," says Sydney. "Hair must be brushed close and must be sculptured. Wave must show.

The third of these coiffures is called "Roller Coaster". It is another example of the same design for hair styling. Here the hair is brushed into a sleek roll, high, on one side and graduated down behind ear on the other side. This line gives the effect of an extreme swirl. A rhinestone bird set in the hair adds a chic touch.

CRANBERRY ICE IS GAY DESSERT

Cranberry Sherbet
Cakes or Cookies Coffee

Cranberry sherbet is colorful and refreshing. It may be served with the meal course or at a dessert. In this menu, you see, I used it as dessert. For the average-sized family this recipe for cranberry sherbet could be halved. Ginger Rogers of morning fame also is said to use the sherbet recipe; Lucille Ball the pudding recipe.

Today's Recipes

CRANBERRY SHERBET—Pour cups cranberry juice, one cup boiling water, two cups sugar, one and one-half cups orange juice, two egg whites, dash of salt. Cook cranberries and water for 10 minutes, add sugar, pulp and orange juice, run through, sieve. Now cool the mixture, turn into refrigerator tray and partially freeze. Remove from refrigerator, add egg whites, beat one minute, return to speed of freezer unit and freeze until firm.

CRANBERRY AND BRAZIL NUT PUDDING—Three-fourths cup soft butter, three-fourths cup sugar, two eggs, well beaten; two cups flour, two and one-half teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup milk; one cup cranberries, one cup chopped Brazil nuts. Cream butter, add sugar gradually and cream together until light. Stir in beaten eggs. Mix and sift flour with baking powder and salt and add alternately with the milk to the first mixture. Stir in cranberries and Brazil nuts. Pour batter into greased mold, cover and steam three hours. Serve hot with hard sauce to bring out the flavor.

Soak Your Brushes

As soon as you are through using paint brushes, soak them in gasoline or turpentine for an hour. Then wipe them with a soft cloth and wash them well in warm water and soap suds. Wipe perfectly dry and wrap it in a cloth or paper.

New in Bathroom Fixtures

New fashions in bathroom fixtures combine beauty and luxury with utility. If you want a bathroom in the ultra modern style, consider a basin with heat rounded edges and square corners under a porcelain cover.

Very conveniently, too, are basins which destroys the blood vessels supplying nourishment to the growth. When the needle has been passed through the base of the growth often enough to completely destroy the blood supply, the growth, deprived of nourishment, shrivels and eventually drops off.

Moles can be removed from the face satisfactorily by this method. But, as I said previously, be sure a skilled individual only does the work. Don't let any quack work on your face, if you value your appearance, for the removal of moles should be undertaken only by a skilled and reliable person who is thoroughly experienced. In the work.

Bristle Nails

Betty: Massage a bit of warmed olive oil into the base of each of your nails nightly before retiring. This will correct their dry, brittle condition.

Style Whimsies

If you wear bright trimming on your hat, and during these dark days that is very chic, repeat the color somewhere in your dress.

Many brimmed hats have the front section of the brim cut away, giving an off-the-face effect.

HOPEFUL: The only way you floor paint for the furniture, or wall paint for the cellar game room.

Don't try painting over waxed or glossy surfaces. Remove the gloss by sanding it down.

There's a trick to applying varnish. Flow it on. Don't try to stroke it back and forth or you will spoil the smooth finish you are after.

Look out for wet surfaces. "Try to touch" isn't dry enough. The wood surface or the paint coating must be dry straight through.

Don't let the cans or paint stand where the temperature drops below 50 degrees. Freezing will ruin the paint!

Vacation Time Has Hazards

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

ALONG WITH all the joys of Christmas come some serious ills to children, thanks to hazards they must face.

In the rural home, school or church not lighted with electricity, the careless Christmas tree may prove a serious menace. Its pot flaming candles on the tree is to endanger many precious little lives. Fine needles burn like paper. There are some hazards, too, from inexpert electrician wiring.

Thousands of children will get sick at Christmas. But sleds are perilous unless used in safe places. I wish more parents would go with their children to safe coasting places; and I wish we might have many city streets roped off for children in summer as well as winter. We could, if enough of us cared. For the rural child the public highway is too dangerous for coasting.

The wise parents not only provides safe places for his children to use, but also see to it that they accept avoid obviously perilous places. Otherwise, let the child have no sled. It may have to be a choice between life and a sled.

May Need Trouncing

To parents who care: Please see that your child does not slide from the drive or lot into the street, nor play with his sled in the unprotected street. See that he never hooks a ride. If in earlier years he had learned obedience, such safety measures will be easily effected. Whereas corporal punishment is of doubtful wisdom, as a rule, after the age of four or five, it might be employed wisely even with the child of 10 or 12, who, in defiance of his parents' warnings, will coast in forbidden ways and places. Nothing might prove more humane than a good trouncing of this young dare-devil, with a switch, paddle or razor strop. Help children properly disciplined in younger years will not need measures so severe to restrain them.

Health hazards are increased at Christmas time. Too many sweets eaten then, and often many children will hoggle in a home pouty ventilated. The crowded street cars and ch"i"-frequented theatres are good spreaders of children's diseases during the Christmas holidays.

This season also may prove perilous to home dwellers—from mice, more confusions, more family tensions. Finally it is a hard time for mother's nerves. Thanks to the school, there eventually comes relief again.

Big Chap Can't Hold His Girls

By VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR MISS LEE: I'm just like that boy, Bill. I am a big six-footer and I'm built for playing for a sucker all the time. I'm getting sick of it, but I don't know what to do about it.

"I would like to get hold of a nice, sweet girl, but it seems they all fall for thin fellows, and us husky boys are left out in the cold. Can you please tell me what to do? Maybe if I put some pointers I might have better luck.

"BILL R."

Are you definitely fat, Bill? The "nobody loves a fat man" type? If so, it would be good to train down a bit, or curb your appetite a little. How about it?

If you are merely big and "husky", as you say, I think you have the kindly knack with the girls—believe it or not. Girls like their men big and strong. They want someone who looks capable of protecting them from the hard world. (Incidentally, they rarely do, however, I've found.)

You can't be a good picker, Bill. Usually a girl's first requisite for a boy friend is that he be big and strong. Then that he is gentle—not a kidder, but a chap who can say nice things. She wants sympathy. That he thinks of the girl's welfare himself that he considers the subject too. That he be courteous, neat in appearance. She wants a man who can be proud of, but not a dandy who thinks too much of his own appearance.

Girls like men who think for themselves, but will give a girl credit for having some brains and don't look upon all her ideas as silly. One who can be pleasant and jolly with her dad and mother, brothers and sisters, girls, and who may not admit that they want their brothers to like their boy friends, but they do, nevertheless. A man who makes a hit with a girl's brothers, as well as the other members of the family, has a much better chance, all other things being equal, with the one the family does not care for.

A well-informed chap, who can talk intelligently and hold his own in a discussion is an asset in a girl, and if he is a good sport—especially so-called manly games, that is all to the good.

If you have a fair percentage of these qualities, Bill, you should be a success with the ladies, my unprovided you pick normal girls.

Redmen and Flyers Practice In Their Initial Workout at Belleville Arena Last Night

Eddie Thomas' Charges Prepare For Opening Game Against Potes

ICE IS KEEN

Preparing for their rapidly approaching O.H.A. season, the Belleville Redmen and the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" held their initial hockey practices of the season at the Belleville Arena last evening. The Redmen will again work out before meeting the Peterborough seniors in the opening senior O.H.A. hockey match of the season at the Belleville Arena next Monday night, however.

It is seen that sheet of ice welcomed the two squads as the "Airmen" took to the ice first, 17 strong under Coach Carling Kelly to be followed by the Redmen, who trotted out 20 men dozen players, including two new-comers Skipper Eddie Thomas utilized the allotted sixty minutes to advantage, driving the Redmen at top form. The local regulars of Wait in the nets, Ken Murphy on defence, Bob Jackson centre and "Pat" Wilson caught the eye of the few railbirds at hand as they travelled at mid-season form.

New Faces Seen

George Millot, former Winnipeg defenceman now assisted with the R.C.A.F., elected to battle for a position with the Redmen, for reasons he refused to divulge last night. Millot possess speed and a terrific shot. His teammate with R.C.A.F., former Ottawa City youth in front of "Lem" Cannon, took junior and senior O.H.A. hockey in Cornwall Winnipeg right winger and his fellow-townsman, Elliot, has promised Manager Thomas, Belleville coaching with the veteran Eddie McCosker and Ed Storms. Another newcomer seeking a place on the Redmen squad is Doug Lemay, former Napanee junior. Leary has proven himself an able lad, both within and around the nets, that will doubtless come as the season progresses, however. Generally speaking the Redmen seem to possess plenty of speed and shooting threats than they carried last season, especially the initial line of the Jackson-Millot, Lemay-Although Baines, Leary McGuire and Storms were designated as the sets in practice last night.

The O.H.A. intermediate champion Redmen are in their current hockey season versus the fast Peterboro seniors in regular scheduled group games at the Belleville Arena next Monday night.

Flyers Practice

Coach Carling-Kelly trotted out 17 puck aspirants including the old guard of Gilmour, Jackson, Lalonde, the Mowbray twins Dan Cowley Louis Leconte and newcomers Dan Inchbold, Jamieson, Le Gree, Halward, Haggerty Baldwin and others. Both new-yard Mnft— out for a full how prior to their meeting on Tuesday night in a scheduled YanHorne series games in Kingston.

The ice surface at the Arena was lightning fast, keen fast ice welcoming the players for their initial practice. The Arena management announced today the rink would be opened for public skating on Thursday night, weather permitting.

FIRST JUNIOR PRACTICETONIGHT

Every Position Open on Squad Says Mentor Eddie Thomas

The initial call for junior O.H.A. hockey aspirants was issued today by Manager Eddie Thomas, the Belleville Juniors, taking to the ice at the Belleville arena this evening.

A large number of last year's Belleville juniors have either graduated or have departed for other centres and are now playing hockey in foreign realms, but every position on the club is open to the youngster aiming for a spot showing at the first practice workouts and therefore it is essential that every player attend every practice.

The Junior O.H.A. season opens on December 30th, so it is important that our juniors practice whenever possible. Now on until the date. We meet Havelock in the opening game of Senior O.H.A. competition that morning.

The initial junior O.H.A. practice will be held at the Arena commencing at 7.00 p.m. this evening. The practices are open to all boys under the age of 20 years on the first day of January 1938 and a sheet of ice has been made by the arena officials for the opening practices, while pucks will also be afforded the anxious skaters whenever tomorrow or Thursday, it was announced today.

U. OF M. BEATEN BY PRINCETON

U. S. University Wins 3-2 in Overtime With Few Fans Present

Montreal, Dec. 21.—(CP)—Princeton University, in International intercollegiate hockey, team may have something after all though there were large gaps in the stands today to express opinions on the Tigers' latest showing.

Beaten 10-0 by McGill here Saturday night, Princeton crept around and defeated University of Montreal 3-2 in overtime last night. Twenty-five hundred persons were on hand to watch.

Victory put the visitors on top of their division but Harvard, Yale and Dartmouth also have played their first games. McGill has been on University of Montreal and Princeton to play an early season spree over Toronto and Queen's in the Canadian circuit.

Action in last night's contest was dull and not much credit to the players.

Substitutions and Doug Cochrane tied the score at 1-1 in the first period with the visitors' goal by the invaders, while Jean Grignon, Varsity Roger grabbed one for Montreal goals and added session Nichols had the Tigers at 2-2 in the third period and passed to Cochrane for the winning score after one minute of extra play.

CHRISTMAS WEEK SEES FEW GAMES

N. H. L. Proxy Decides Shopping Has it Over Hockey at This Time

By The Canadian Press

When canny Frank Calder, National Hockey League president was drawing up this season's schedule he decided Christmas shopping had it all over hockey, as an attraction for Tuesday and Thursday nights.

As a result only Boston and Montreal Will see action as the teams before the holiday week-end when half a dozen games are scheduled to catch the dollars that are left over after Christmas shopping.

Tonight the only game is scheduled for Boston where the Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks, with Art Ross' American Division leaders likely to increase their margin of two points over New York Rangers at the Garden tomorrow.

Thursday the only contest scheduled is a game between the Maroons in Montreal. But on Saturday there are three games and as many more the following night, with Toronto Maple Leafs, Detroit Red Wings, New York Rangers and Bruins all taking their holiday hockey the hard way by playing two games.

JOHNNY FERRARO ASKS THAT "LEASH" BE TAKEN OFF GAME

Montreal, Dec. 21 (CP)— Once captain at Carroll University, Chubby Johnny Ferraro surveyed his four years in Eastern Canada football today and urged that the "leash" be taken from the game.

"Maybe I'm not qualified to speak," Johnny ventured. "People have criticized the methods I've used at Hamilton and Montreal— but it does seem to me there's something restraining football in the east and I shouldn't be surprised if the west had the answer."

Ferraro, one of the east's great players no matter what they say about his strategy, has been outstanding for four years at Hamilton, when his teams might have won championships. He doesn't like to attempt to defend himself against the charge that he's "dumb."

"I've been criticized because I tried for single points when I thought it best, but I like open football and I like to see emphasis on punting."

Western Rules Ideal Game

A galloping backfielder who can punt and catch passes, Ferraro calls the Western Canada Conference rules an "ideal combination of United States and Eastern codes. They allow unlimited interference and the forward pass from anywhere behind the scrimmage line. They don't allow a point for a kick to deadline, while retaining the touch.

"No eastern official can be considered in penalizing illegal interference because he can't tell where the five-yard limit is after the play. Montreal's 1937 field captain declared, "but that's not the point. I'm excited that three-yard interference is making football more open, more short without taking actual part in the play.

"I know the thrill of stepping up the field in American football and receiving a forward pass. I also know what it is to pull back when I punch that three-yard limit— I mean I am coaching, when not carrying the ball."

Not doing Full Job

The said Millot out loud since coming to this country," he said, "I thought the game was adopted from Canadian and there was something to it they needed just as much as American boys need Canadian football.

But the leash on numbers is stopping every player from taking a definite job on every play and isn't doing the game a bit of good.

"It doesn't matter to me what rules are in force. Anybody because I'm settled in business and don't care whether I ever play football again. However, without trying to gag at anyone who stands up for all the game's present good points, I should like to see eastern football fling out a little.

"You must admit when they have changed in the United States to draw such huge crowds week after week, that the West must add over its new version this year."

JOHNNY ADAMS

Jockey Johnny Adams had an interest in the Tanforan track after this year—at least he had a piece of the jockey several places, he should say—upon his person. Johnny is one of the United States' leading riders.

Belleville hockey fans will be afforded an even closer, Ontario Hockey Association schedule during the coming season, all games below senior "B" title, except two junior games. Four times the Belleville Redmen and R.C.A.F. "Flyers," last season's O.H.A. champions in their respective groups, clash during the schedule.

Peterboro seniors come here on four occasions also, twice versus the Redmen and the pair of games Thanksgiving week-end matched against R. C. Carling-Kelly's Airmen. Queen's University will be seen performing on the local ice on two occasions, once against each senior club to call the Belleville Arena it's home ice, making ten senior O.H.A. games in Belleville in all. Peterboro and Havelock juniors supply the remaining two Association fixtures on the Belleville juniors.

Not since the hectic days of the past when the management of the Belleville Fair and Jerry Woods at Queen's, have the "stanzas" been represented in the O.H.A. group, Queen's always provided Jerry Woods material for Belleville hockey clubs, but the locals managed to win the majority of their battles with the "Presbyterians" over a span of years. Then Eddie Kaiser, Queen's head his Redmen out for their initial game of the season last season last evening. The locals seemed to be in fine fettle and were occasionally "tarning it out" for the benefit of the few railbirds at hand. Coach Kaiser drew the Redmen have a game in the Van Horne series and will be on hand to see or two more practices at the arena before they play any of the locals. O.H.A. tilt here next Monday versus the 1938 edition of the Peterboro seniors. Frank Rackland, perennial hockey coach at Peterboro, has moved from Ottawa to his staff of assistants. Bisset is the Peterboro coach, having handed the Whodser seniors in 1937, when they eliminated Belleville in the senior "B" finals of that season.

We understand there are three keenly contested games on the Lift Lock City roster this season, Rines and Brown from Western Canada and Lockie from Eastern Canada. Whether "Honey" Tompkins will be with the Rines next Monday night or not we have not heard. Tompkins would give considerable line-up with the Peter against his old team mates. Incidentally it would appear Whitby is located at Lake-field, near Peterboro. At any rate the two will have a return peck at senior hockey next Monday night.

Whether Boxing Day, usually celebrated the day after Christmas, will be observed in Belleville this year we are not prepared to say, although it is believed that there is a concerted movement throughout Ontario, on the part of the Belleville Christmas. It purchase Boxing Day is observed as a holiday, and we doubt it will be by the banks and legal offices. But the hockey games will be on the opening hockey games will be on Belleville Boxing Day night in Belleville. Whether it be baseball, hockey or table tennis there always is keen competition when Belleville and Trenton sports interests clash.

"One of the funnier tales at the baseball meetings in Frisch, St. Louis Cardinal manager, revolves around a day last summer when a morose St. Louis fan, fed up with the efforts of Dizzy Dean trying to come back, peered down from the grandstand and, opened his arms in direct Biblical blessing up to Dizzy, "Forgive him, O Lord, for pitching duty," relates John F. Carmichael of the Chicago Daily News. "The sight of the of Sheriff Hull down on the last stretch of his Card stalwart, who called for an inter- ference. "Hull, you're fired! Fired for life!" he ordered and protfered a note. The lad delivered it to Frank, who opened it and read: "Dear Mr. Frisch. I think I know where I can find Wee Willie Sherdell!"

The Perth Crescents vaulted into the leadership of the Van Horne series last night with two well earned victories. The Belleville Redmen and R.C.A.F. "Flyers" clash in Kingston on Wednesday night with the winner moving into the lead. The result of Wednesday's game will be keenly awaited by local hockey fans. Standings of the clubs in the Van Horne series reads as follows:

	W	L	T	Pts
Perth	2	0	0	4
R.C.A.F.	1	0	1	3
Belleville	1	2	0	2

Perth jumped into first position to the top rung in the league leader in one night's hockey playoff. In this series, most anything may happen before the schedule is completed. The first three placed clubs meet with the fourth placed club in a home and away playing off likewise. The winners of the above two series then meet in the final round.

The Kingston City squad moved into a tie with Perth for the leadership of the Van Horne series by virtue of a 2 to 1 victory over the lowly Carleton entrants last night. All the Redmen and Flyers have to do is win their four-game series to assure themselves a play-off berth now.

The biggest sports disappointment of the year in the city of Hereford (Dmry) Dean's failure to produce in the National League pennant campaign despite the fact he won 13 and lost ten to finish on the right side of the pitching ledger. In 1936 Dean won 24 games for the Cardinals and is being extremely reserved and quiet at the present moment. The umpires in the league meet on Thursday and committee from the Threat of baseball Players' Fraternity, of who we are satisfied is one of the greatest umpires we big league pitchers are concerned.

We understand Fred Ingram, former Campbellford hockey player, whom we always respected as a top-notcher puckster, returned to his native town recently and whisked away a bride to Northern Ontario, where Fred has been making good for the past two seasons. Congratulations, Fred.

3 COASTAL CITIES

There were authoritative reports that 11,000 Japanese soldiers withdrawn from the Nanking area embarked last night from Shanghai, apparently bound for Canton.

A party of 300 British and United States women and children attempting to flee war threats in central China were turned back toward Hankow, one of China's three temporary capitals.

A military boom across the Yangtze River at Matang, 100 miles above Nanking, obstructed passage of their refugee vessel, the British river steamer Woosung.

Most Threatening.

The south China situation was considered the most threatening. A Japanese attempt to cut the railway between Canton and Kowloon, which lies opposite Hong Kong, was expected momentarily. The prospect of dangerous incidents in waters close to its boundaries led to growing uneasiness in Hong Kong.

Gunfire was audible in Hangchow. Three Japanese columns were closing in on the city.

In Shanghai, Major General Kenkichi Harada, Japanese military attache, modified some details of his report on the bombing of the United States gunboat Panay by Japanese planes Dec. 12.

Harada announced additional investigation showed Panay cannon were not fired at Japanese troops, as he had said yesterday. In a report which contradicted essential details as told by survivors.

Tsingtao Quiet.

Advices received by the United States flagship Augusta said Tsingtao was quiet. Tsingtao, however, expected an attack in retaliation for destruction of 40 Japanese cotton mills by Chinese troops. Japanese placed the extent of damage at about $87,000,000.

Additional fears of reprisals were aroused by the Japanese spokesman's report that a number of Shanhsing Province coal mines owned jointly by Chinese and Japanese were destroyed. He said Chinese damaged the properties to the extent of $4,000,000.

Foreign officials in Hankow attempted to arrange evacuation of the 300 refugees on board the Woosung by an international train to Canton. The British cruiser Cockchafer, bottled up in the middle Yangtze, was able to clear the Matang barrier which held up passage of the 2,436 ton refugee steamer.

Streamlined hogs are in fashion now, as the demand swings toward a longer, narrower animal that will yield more cuts of meat, rather than a short, fat type.

STRATEGIC TERUEL

the other in the city itself and its suburbs where the insurgent garrison fought with its back to the wall in the hope relief would come.

Insurgent Col Dezo

A column of insurgent Moors and Legionnaires was said to have been destroyed when it tried to break through the Ejea line from the north city. Government machine-gunners, nested on the fringe of the city and in places overhead, cut it to pieces.

All of Franco's lines in Spain were reported to have been strengthened by the drain in manpower from attempts to save Teruel.

(A government communique reaching Madrid, 136 miles west of Teruel, said the insurgents suffered of staggering losses while reinforcing the lower Aragon sectors.

Counter-Attacks Repulsed.

Five insurgent counter-attacks were said to have been repulsed and government lines remained the same as on Sunday when the general attack was opened, after four days of milder skirmishing.

Two ultimatums for the surrender of the insurgent garrison under a guarantee of safety were flatly rejected by the defenders. Their position remained critical, the government communique said, while airmen bombed insurgent positions in the north and west of the walls (region front).

A government command announced yesterday the attackers had taken the last line of trenches defending the city on the northwest.

AUGMENTED FORCE OF DIVERS USED

Expect to Recover Last Five of Victims Before Nightfall

Fort Stanley, Ont., Dec. 21—(CP)—Search for the bodies of five "missing" lumber jacks, who vanished in the collapse of a huge steel and wood coffer-dam, was augmented by renewed view today with words officials confident an augmented force of divers would recover them before nightfall.

The work of removing the bodies from the death trap in Kettle Creek was made easier by the visibility of the water, which cleared throughout the night at the task of lifting from the water sheets of shattered steel and broken pilings, all that remained of the 30-foot cofferdam after its collapse Sunday night. Three divers were to descend into the chill water today.

Thirteen Trapped

Thirteen men were trapped at the bottom of the coffer-dam when it collapsed without warning Sunday night. Only three escaped. The men were doing foundation work for a new bridge over the creek which runs into Port Stanley harbor. All were employees of the Canadian Construction Company, in charge of the $250,000 project.

Peter Mercier, Hamilton diver who recovered three of the bodies yesterday, was last night joined by Thomas Grignon, a Toronto Harbor Commission employee, and Burdett (Sammy) Bristow, also of Toronto. Bristow came from Sarnia where he had finished a job on the new international bridge spanning the St. Clair river between Sarnia, Ont., and Point Edward, Ont.

Govt. to Investigate

Half a dozen divers were necessary before Montcrag fired the bodies of George Bailey, Carter Bisbee and Donald Beatty from the mass of splintered wreckage, still resting on the bottom of James McFarlane, Archibald Jones, James and Joseph Claus and Carter Bisbee, son of J. Chester Bisbee. All the dead were Elgin County residents.

As soon as all bodies are accounted for an Ontario government investigator will open an investigation in an effort to determine the cause of the dam's collapse. W. J. Munro, chief inspector of the Provincial Department of Labor and veteran of years' construction experience, is in charge of operations.

Sheet is Serious

From accounts of the 10 survivors—five other men working on top of the dam were thrown into the water but were rescued—it appeared supporting timbers snapped in two and the bottom of the steel walls were pushed out of place, permitting a sudden inrush of ice and water. Those who escaped were shot to the surface by the influx of water and were pulled out before being sucked back into the turmoil of wreckage.

Work on the bridge foundations had reached the stage where cement was to have been poured today for one of the piers. Months of work on the project were wasted. Moisture flirted with death as he worked among the jagged timbers in his search for the bodies. Twice his thick rubber suit was punctured and he had to be pulled quickly to the surface.

The Bible girl seems headed for a fall, wouldn't you say? But she happens to be Married Vinson, star of the touring ice extravaganza, "Cap Blades" as she probably knows what she's doing.

Buddy Baer, 243-pound younger brother of former heavyweight champion Max Baer, is shown here as he drops Eddie Hogan, Connecticut Lithuanian, with a terrific right in the third round of their scheduled ten-round bout at New York. Baer was awarded the fight on a "technical" knockout after he floored Hogan three times in the third round. His victory clinches, for him, a title fight with Joe Louis.

Hurricane House

By BRUCE HENRY

After Miss. McAllister had gone to her room for the night, Lucille left her own door ajar, deliberately, to hear Sandra and Ronny. Ronny sat on the front porch and talked, blow-by-blow.

Irresistably, it seemed to Sandra, Ronny was telling Sandra what he'd think my voice is, Sandra? I mean—is it anywhere near what it sounds like on the radio? Do you suppose they notice any difference?" "Why, you sing glorious, Ronny," Sandra said, "You want to go back to radio, Ronny?"

"Of course. I'm hardly ready to retire yet. I've had from one to three letters a week from the office since I came home asking when I would be able to report for work. I'll tell you, if it would make you feel any better," Sandra said, still not convinced by his protests, "if you have had such a great many people keen over the Slilky Irish I did you—getting you out in the street on that Coast Guard cutter to no purpose?"

Ronny peered at her in the semi-dark. "I'm everlastingly grateful to you for that, Sandra. I wouldn't miss that for a week in my previous year or my life." I'm sorry about this town, he added, hastily.

"And yet you're thinking now of leaving it, Ronny?" Sandra said, "I don't understand you, Ronny."

"I do."

"It is very different from your own? Lucille told me a little bit ago that she and you had never been happier in your life than you have had here. I'm glad to hear from you you'll be on your way back to New York."

"That came near to recover from my illness, Ronny. This isn't my home. I've almost—well, maybe—there's nothing to keep me here longer."

The silence fell into Ronny's room there, gritting his teeth, knowing if he spoke now, he was lost.

INSTALMENT 32

As Sandra and Ronny sat there on the front porch in the semi-darkness the silence dragged into minutes. If only, he thought desperately, he had something to say, something light and so obviously without feeling that Sandra could not possibly have read any feeling into it.

Ronny thought: "She's going back to New York and I'll be going back to Hollywood. I'll tell her about Lucille now we've bound to meet and...." And heard his own voice saying, "A long time ago you said to me, 'We have no right to say about our lives....' I didn't quite know what you meant then, but I do now, Sandra." He saw his very clearly at last. He would tell her about Tony Gomez, of high school days, of his dream of becoming a professional baseball player, of his coming to Maple Village to marry Lucille.... or those years when he had been unhappy, and hardly ever remembered and of that day when he came back to his mother's home and saw Lucille again and realized he had always loved her, and then he would say to her, "And so I asked Lucille to marry me, Sandra—barely an hour before we found you and Daryl Hutchings at Cloverdale—from that day until—well, you see how it is. Not that you care one way or the other, of course, but I must not let this opportunity slip away from him. He had the strange need to go through with it. He might not be able to work himself up to it later.

But, a hand on the door, Sandra said in that same maddeningly calm, "Thanks—but I promised Lucille I wouldn't sit up late. She's been a little tired, for some reason...." Good night, Ronny."

"Good night, Sandra. Good night, Sandra...." and could have kicked himself. Why hadn't he blurted it out? Why hadn't he said, bluntly, "Say, in love with Lucille, Sandra—I'm going to be married soon."

And hearing those words that had not been spoken he found himself wondering if they were even half true. Many times these past weeks he had told himself he was in love with Lucille but not once had he experienced that strange, wonderful ecstasy Lucille could, certainly, and she had made some mention of it, she would make some mention of it to him. But to say that he loved her was to say that he did not love Sandra, and that was as untrue as it was impossible.

Of course he loved Sandra, had stopped loving her only for so much as an instant; in his heart he had never been uncertain of his love for her a single moment since the night when he had gone to her in Emily Stewart's garden and told her close to him and pressed his lips to her soft, unresisting mouth ...But then, he loved Sandra with all the passionate strength of his being, he had always had to marry Ben and—"I mustn't let Sandra go, I mustn't...." Again and again as he had all through the weeks Sandra had been in Maple Village, he repeated that determined resolve. "I mustn't let Lucille be hurt—I must not...."

Long after Sandra had left him there, he paced the length of the porch until it came to him that his every step could be heard inside the house, and he paused to consider the steps, to himself out the door, and he backed off down the long silent street. He had no purpose in mind, but when the Bachelor's home loomed up on the opposite side of the dark street, he thought, "Stop in for a visit, or just and then walk home with Lucille." He moved on until he was the yellow glare from the sitting room window and, silhouetted against it, the hurdine of a car.

It flashed through his mind, because he knew Dan Bachelor had no car, that some one was ill and this was the doctor's machine. Then, a dozen steps nearer, a dim shapeless form stood out between the car and the house and as he saw that dark bulk suddenly resolve itself into two distinct persons, he halted, against his will.

He told himself quickly, "Don't let your imagination run away with you...."

But those two heads were so clearly revealed against the yellow light of the window behind them that he could detect every line of Lucille's almost perfect profile.

He could not go on for when he came opposite the house, they would certainly see him. He turned on his heel.

Bump, bump, bump, bump. Fully dressed, Sandra sat on the edge of her bed in the unlighted room and listened to Ronny's regular tread of heavy oxfords, with growing amazement. Poor Ronny! Making his feeble attempts against Lucille's somehow so much stronger than his own will. Waiting and down the porch, pacing once to close to her window that he could have tapped the glass at every passing but he must, she worked in his restless thinking to realize he was trying himself every way with stride.

"Poor Ronny"—she thought again. "It's no good holding back, boy. I've been through it and I know." Sooner or later he must forget she was a congenial Park avenue snob, now! Ronny all but in love and loving her, he must ultimately swallow his prejudices and his pride and come to her and tell her what was in his heart. "Because I've had to forget a lot, too, Ronny—the things my way walked out on my party and your self-righteous stiff." the right of David's accident, and a lot of little things that were very really important. I've had to forget that I was Stephen waiting almost a year only to have to tell him soon that its no go, just as you'll have to forget it. He's swallowed everything, Ronny—gulped them down and liked it because I know now I love you and that I've never loved any one else...."

Bump, bump—

Sandra sat up listening. The steady tramp had stopped. And then she heard the shrill little squeak of the gate, and by back on the bed, smiling up at the dark ceiling. She couldn't have his emotions on the porch and sink off with Dane Reason on his arm. She knew, instinctively, that he had tried, how she had tried!

Throughout that first days in Maple village, she hadn't thought of Ronny at all....nor or Stephen or Enid and Obet. In fact, she hadn't thought of anything; for longer than it required to push it out of her mind. For then she had been in the grip of the strangest hypnotism that seemed to extend to every fibre of her body and every cell of her brain.

That Body of Yours

By James BD. Barton, H.D.

Treating Old or Chronic Cases of Arthritis, Rheumatism

The infected teeth and tonsils have been removed, the sinuses are in normal condition, the gall bladder has been drained, and yet the patient still suffers with rheumatic pains and stiffness of joints. Naturally he is discouraged and begins to believe that there is no hope for any relief or improvement.

As mentioned before, the fact that whatever was causing the rheumatism—teeth, tonsils—had been removed means only that no more poisons can be manufactured by that particular part of the body, but that some of that poison may still be in gall bladder, large intestine or elsewhere and some of it is carried by the blood in the already affected joints or soft tissues and so cause symptoms. Besides, the damage already done to the joints by infection from the teeth and tonsils may e permanent, and even surgery or other treatment cannot give satisfactory results.

Dr. Bernard Wyatt, Tucson, Arizona, in Nebraska State Medical Journal states that the most important of all in the treatment of arthritis (rheumatism) is to explain the "long time" required for cure, otherwise the patient will become discouraged and stop treatment before the physician has had a fair chance to show results.

Some of Dr. Wyatt's suggestions are:—

Removal of all infection present—teeth, tonsils, gall bladder.

Constipation must be corrected by a bulky fruit and vegetable diet (low in starch—bread, sugar, potatoes), and the use of mild laxative enemas, and, at the beginning of the treatment colonic irrigations (high enemas).

Heat, it is harmful to keep on working a painful joint, but while in a warm bath, gentle exercise can be carried on without pain as the warm water acts as an anaesthetic and the wider open blood vessels carry away waste products manufactured by the exercise.

The patient should not be allowed to slump in any position he likes; wrists and knees should be kept straight by splints and casts worn at night.

Heat in various forms, vaccine, blood transfusions, all have a place in the treatment. And last, but not least, the patient should be encouraged to continue the treatment faithfully. He must be kept hopeful of results.

Fitting the Clothes

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

Hale was more or less accustomed to her brother Roland's impulsive actions but his latest idea really took her breath away. ;

"Sis," he had said in that cheery voice that morning at breakfast "I have ordered the most exquisite set of gowns, evening, day and anything else in the way of time dress that you ever looked at. Also hats, shoes, slippers, stockings. In fact, I've ordered almost anything that a lovely woman could want. Now the idea is for you to find a girl who will fit them. She must be reasonably good looking, but that is not of importance.

"Roland have you quite lost your mind? There is no such a girl, and what girl is going to wear a lot of clothes purchased by a young bachelor, and if she did, what are you going to do with her?"

Roland burst out laughing:

"My idea is not so absurd as it seems to you, Hale. Between you and me, in fact, I am a bit fed up with all the artificial stupidly pawned upon men we know. I have thought what I'd consider some extremely attractive distinguished clothes, and I want some one to wear them, and I want some one to wear them with me at dinners, theatres, dances, and all kinds of nice entertainments. Now don't get the idea that I am looking for a wife. I simply want a natural looking girl whose face is not entirely made up at the dressing table. I am sick to death of pulled eyebrows, crimson mouths and hair that looks like a waxed head. It is only a kind of lart, sis, that I am going to experiment. You come in contact with so many girls down in the settlement who never get a chance to wear wonderful gowns—now—" he paused a moment, "can you find me such a girl?"

"I would like breathing space," laughed Hale. "The idea is not so bad when one has details. I think no one but my prime brother could get away with it."

The gowns, furs, evening cloaks and hats which arrived in March were so exquisite as to make even the heavily pressed Hale quite speechless in admiration.

"I will take a girl of more than a little poise to wear these with elegance," thought Hale. "She will almost have to be extremely well born and show it."

It was at this flash that inspiration came to Hale.

The gardener she had always wanted Roland to meet with a view to matrimony was just the right girl in the right place. With the cunning of the matchmaker, hitherto unrevealed by a single action, she wrote the entire plot to Audrey Ainsley and in return had a delightful answer.

"I jump at the chance," wrote Audrey. Am just catty enough to want to met Roland since he has acted scurvy so often and the knowledge will serve beautifully. I will be true to my word demure, well-worn suit tomorrow for the first act."

Audrey was slim and dark. Her brow was broad and milk white and her black hair rolled back from it into a classic knot. Her eyes were dark and her lashes lashed up for hips were scarlet. Otherwise Audrey was colorless. Demure to the last detail and Audrey was suggestive of an animated Greek statue come suddenly to life.

Roland was guilty of a swift intake of breath when, upon entering the drawing room, Hale had introduced her selection to him. The fictitious name of Miss Granger had been assumed.

He quickly regained composure and with a courtly bow agreed to Hale's choice.

"This is very kind of you, Miss Granger," he said, "and I hope you will find a bit of fun in this adventure. I am sure to; so where will we go tonight?"

"How about the opera?" suggested Hale, "I'm sure Miss Granger loves the opera."

The whirled off to the opera.

Roland was very silent, considering it the most likely way of ensnaring Roland's real interest. In any event Audrey was quiet, keeping her well aware of her presence. There was no denying the fact that the girl Roland suddenly sprung on the public was a social success. Hale's selection was exquisite, her manner dignified and her self-effacement touched the heart within those beautiful garments. Year of equal finesse and combination had not hitherto found.

The next few weeks of gayety had passed before Roland entered his sister's apartment with a look of defeat.

"I have failed," he said wistfully. "I have failed to keep from loving this girl. What do you think about that, Hale? Here do she come! I've , and what can you tell me about her? She has been so reticent that I am fearful she has a husband tucked away or—"

"Holly, dear," said Hale soothingly, "why have you not told her you love her? She might give you all these details herself."

"She, you're a peach. I never thought of it," he flung back as he dashed off to find the girl who had successfully worn clothes.

And Hale smiled. She already knew where Audrey's heart was, and it was just exactly where everyone wanted it to be.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Wife of Shanghai"

Deep in China's wild interior proceeds the thrilling action of "Wife of Shanghai," a gripping drama starring Boris Karloff, which opens tomorrow at the Capitol as "mash hit No. 1 on a grand double feature bill.

It is a tale of the race for ownership of some oil fields, by three Americans, and their adventures with the native bandit general who controls the territory. Karloff plays that master of makeup and character acting, Boris Karloff.

Contrary to his usual custom of portraying "scary" characters, Karloff this time is a good-natured rascal, whom audiences can't help liking even though he is a villain who doesn't hesitate to get his foes out of the way by the quickest methods possible.

The plot revolves around the romance between the general and an oil concession. Jim Hallet has discovered the fields, but cannot afford to develop it, but it is about to be foreclosed on him because he hasn't enough money.

Some unscrupulous men try to buy it in, but General Wu Yen Fang (Karloff) is in possession of the disputed territory, and when he learns that Hallet is the man who has saved his life, he repays the debt by helping him win back his oil field.

The three American characters are Gordon Oliver, Ricardo Cortez and Douglas Wood, while the feminine romantic interest is sustained by Nevelle Robert and Sheila Bromley. There are a number of clever Chinese actors in the cast, too.

"Big Business"

When Ded Jones turns high-pressure stock salesman and American Legion commander in order to get wealth from a wildcat oil-well scheme, the laughs of millions of fun-loving Jones Family fans everywhere in "Big Business" shower as mash hit No. 2 on the same program.

In the face of the family's getrich-quick dreams, the kids keep on dreaming of love and romance, and Dad and Ma Jones find it a problem to keep the family from losing all when Dad loses his money.

Directed by Frank R. Strayer, the screen play by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan promises a wave timely theme in which Ded Jones, played by the unctuous Jed Prouty, big-city stock promoter, has his friends fleece him in the company formed to develop a worthless oil well.

In their usual family roles, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington, Russel Hicks, Florence Roberts, Kenneth Howell, George Ernest, Juna Carlson, Florence Roberts and Billy Mahaly succumb with varying degrees of confidence, to the salesmanship of promoter Lane. Grandma Jones, however, is suspicious, and she delegates the two Jones boys and Sonny Clinton, whose romance with Shirley Deane is interesting by Lane, to get the truth about the well.

A climax involving a thrilling auto ride which gets the boys to the family just in time to prevent the loss of the reputation and money brings one of the most rousing comedy situations ever to highlight the series.

AT THE BELLE

"The Life of the Party"

A streamlined romantic theme blends with rippling comedy and thrilling melody to make "The Life of the Party" one of the most scintillating musical comedy entertainments to come to the Belle Theatre.

Star-studded from the top of the cast to the bottom, the film has Gene Raymond, Joan Bennett, Victor Moore, Harriet Hilliard, Helen Broderick, Billy Gilbert, Franklin Pangborn, Ann Shoemaker and Margaret Dumont in the principal parts.

As distinguished from any musical production that recently has originates thoroughout, despite a sparkling variety of supplementary musical and dance features and comedy which will keep the spectator in a continual uproar during the presentation today and Wednesday ,matinee daily.

The story involves the romantic tribulations of a beautiful girl, who beguiles the affections of a fabulous mother to bolt a wealthy man from his girl's charm, seeks a singing career.

An accident brings together the adventurous girl and a happy-go-lucky playboy, who can't afford to take the romance seriously because of a three million dollar bequest which he loses if he marries within three years.

These roles are ideally suited for both Raymond and Miss Hilliard, who make an exceptionally appealing team as romantic singers together. Miss Hilliard's lovely voice is heard in the rendition of "One Of Those Things" which written for the production and Raymond's duet of the numbers displays his splendid voice and engaging style.

Contrasts in humor are supplied by six of the screen's leading comics, who keep the picture alive with laughs throughout. Penner, as a wealthy bachelor and Barrymaker as a hotel detective, turn in riotous performance; Helen Broderick and Victor Moore are equally effective with their particular brand of slap stick humor and Billy Gilbert and Franklin Pangborn garner their share of laughs.

Ann Miller, one of the best tap dancers to appear on the screen recently, is seen in two dances, one a whirlwind dance performed on the observation car of a train, and the other a novelty routine with a chorus of twenty beautiful girls and the same number of male dancers.

The six musical hits were written by Ailie Wrubel and Herb Magidson Ben Oakland and George Siegel.

Little Benny's Note Book

After school me'and Pade Hanlon and Skinny Martin and I we'nt down to talk about Christmas we saying. Good nite, it dont look as if we'll ever find a home for him, and it's going to get harder and harder on account of him getting more and more growed, now that he's in garage.

Hey, I tell you what, Skinny said, and Pade said, What? and Skinny said, How about putting a add in a paper? You know, Lost and Found, he said.

What's going to pay for it? Pade said, and Skinny said, That's one your father works in the newsprinting department of the paper, don't he? Well, why cant he get it put in free for us? he said.

Well, I'll tell you what of the best ideas yet, said Mr all rolled down in Pade's lollies in the back of the Spanker Rolling and Pade told him what, "in a shake" and Mr. Martin then said, I'm a' ! If Cave's say-Lisbet can do it later and see the last of that confounded mutt I'll be only too glad to do it. Give me his discription and I'll write it down, he said.

Skinny what he looks like, and Pade said. Well, he's a little dog, he's not a ! he still another will-out actually being a midget, I'd just say he was a middle size small dog.

What color is he? Mr. Skinins said, and I said, He's partly brown and partly black and partly white, but just now he's mostly black on account of all the grease spots he's living at the ' 30th Century Garage.

What breed would you say he was? Mr. Skinins said, and Shorty Pades Said, He looks like different breeds depending whether you look at him from the back or the front.

And his name is the name of Stanley? Mr. Skinins said, and Pade said, he answers to any name.

And we walked home again and the advertisement is suppose to be in the paper tomorrow.

A SONG FOR THE SEASONS

When the merry lark doth glid
With his song the summer hours,
And their meals the swallows build
In the roofs and tops of towers,
And the golden brown-throw burns

What ' ' a Sailor and Mr. Mew-

Then, how merry are the times!
The Spring thyme! The Summer time!

Now, from out the ashy stone
The shrill, midnight cricket cries,
And all merry birds are flown,
And our dream of pleasure dies;
Now the once blue, laughing sky
Gathers into gray,
And the frozen rivers sigh,
Finding all away!
Now, pale autumn are the times!
The Winter times! the Night
times!

Yet be merry; all around
Is through one vast change revolving;
Even Night, who lately frowned,
Is in pale dawn dissolving;
March will burst her fetters
strange,
And in Spring grow free;
All things in the world will change,
Save—my love for thee!
—Sing then hopeful for all
times!
Winter, Spring, Summer
times!

FORECAST

1934 it was published in the Atlantic Monthly.

Japan Made Against Japan.

The Kaiser was quoted as saying the inevitable clash would come between the Far East and the Occident, "the white race being to prevent Japan from swallowing China."

Japan's aggressive integrity and the "open door" mental nothing, he said, often "shuts the door in the face of all such goals. He was quoted as saying that Japan's ambitions are "boundless."

The interview continued that by allying himself with Japan, Great Britain would "sell out the white man's colors." This alliance has since been formed.

Britain Will Talk

Then will talk what sort of people the Kaiser was. Meanwhile the immediate concern of the western hemisphere is in the Orient. Japan relates to what may happen to "the integrity" of China, to Hong Kong, to Canton and to the "open door" policy. Here on Standard are the western holdings close to China.

Great Britain:—The Straits Settlements, having a free port, 1,356 square miles and a population of more than one million in the city. Hong Kong is the great commercial port. Then there is Northern Borneo, part east of Singapore, and Kowloon, Hong Kong. Kong-Kong is one of the largest ports for coaling and is a vast trade. Even though it is to the interior, it has strong defences. Further afield are the Fiji Islands, Nauru, Australia and numerous small islands.

Possessions of Other Nations.

France:—French Indo-China, with an area of 286,000 square miles and a population of 22,000,000. A small beach territory on the west coast of the peninsula of Laichow, South China.

Netherlands:—Dutch East Indies, including Sumatra, Borneo and Java. The area is 735,000 square miles and the population is 37,000,000. From their rich area comes sugar, rubber, tobacco, tea and many other products.

United States:—The Philippines, Guam, Island and other islands in the Pacific. Further afield accessible to the Ontario Attorney General in cases of suspected fraud. The agreement runs from the first of April, 1938, whereby the Dominion would collect Ontario's income tax returns and guarantee that the information would be available, in cases of suspected fraud, before and after the agreement.

Since the agreement was reached on Mr. Hand said, there had not been a single instance where such information was not available to both Ontario and not one complaint had been received on the fund money from Ontario's authorities.

Statement by Mr. King

The Prime Minister issued the following prepared statement:

The Premier of Ontario now alleges that some action of the federal government, prior to his application for a license to export power, is responsible for the cessation of work on the Ontario diversion.

The interview which Mr. Hepburn had at Ottawa with my colleagues and myself, at which he made application for a license to export 150,000 horsepower of electrical energy, took place on Monday, Nov. 29. It is only necessary to read Mr. Hepburn's letter of Nov. 23, to see that, up to that time, but four days prior to the interview, the Premier of Ontario had taken no exception whatever to any action or delay on the part of the federal government with respect either to the Toronto Harbour question, the Welland Canal waterway, or any of the matters which, he would have the public believe, hindered necessary the contracts for electric power which he made with the Ontario commission.

Had Mr. Hepburn considered the course pursued by the federal government to have been in the least embarrassing to himself, or the Province of Ontario, he would surely have made representations to me forthwith at the time of his interview with my colleagues and myself.

Moreover, he would hardly have concluded his letter with the words "I should be very happy to have members of the Hydro Commission and technical officers confer with your officials at any time you so desire."

It is clear from the correspondence given by Mr. Hepburn to the press, that the Dominion government's action with respect to passing on to the Premier of Ontario, for the consideration of his government, the views of the United States government with respect to the St. Lawrence waterways and related matters, as understood and to be understood by Ontario, was unchallenged.

In no way can the correspondence be construed as evidence of any "agreement" or understanding between the authorities at Ottawa and those at Washington with respect to any of these matters. There is, as well, nothing in the correspondence to substantiate the assertion that, in this or any other connection, there was any attempt at domination or coercion.

As evidence of the fact that the Ontario government felt no embarrassment, but rather appreciation of the attitude being adopted by the federal government with respect to the Long Lac diversion, I might cite the following communication from Mr. Nixon to myself, which, significantly enough, appears to have been omitted from the correspondence given to the press by Mr. Hepburn, this morning:

Toronto, Sept. 9, 1937

"Confidential.

"Dear Mr. King:

"Your note of 7th instant regarding diversion of water from Kenogami River, via Long Lake, to Hudson Bay, duly to hand this morning and I have carefully noted contents.

"Permit me to thank you for giving this matter your personal attention and replying so fully.

Yours sincerely,

H. G. Nixon."

Mr. Hepburn Quoted

The Canadian Press quotes Mr. Hepburn as saying, yesterday: "Mr. King now is trying to create the impression that there has been no correspondence or conference between himself and the government of the United States regarding the St. Lawrence waterways, and no correspondence between me and him, but in a letter dated Nov. 23, 1937, he makes reference to both conferences and correspondence.

"Mr. King referred to, and quoted what I denied a day or two ago was not the existence of correspondence or conference between Washington or Canada, or between himself and myself, but the existence of an "agreement" between the authorities at Washington and at Ottawa, with respect either to the export of power, the St. Lawrence waterways project, or related matters.

Mr. Hepburn is the one who demanded that the correspondence should be made public and who asserted that it had been improperly marked confidential. This would hardly bear out his latest statement that I am now trying to create the impression there has been no correspondence.

Christmas Concerts

QUEEN MARY SCHOOL

A Christmas concert progress by the pupils of the children's section of prizes won during the past year provided an interesting entertainment in Queen Mary School auditorium afternoon.

The auditorium was filled with students and parents. Visitors were welcomed to the school by Mr. C. L. Frederick, principal, who acted as chairman.

The program presented was of a very high order. The pupils were perfect in their parts. The settings and costumes were well worked out and the staging is especially to be commended.

Grade six and seven opened the program with a "Snowman's Song." The scenes in snowy green costumes with bows and arrows sang a rousing song of the greenwood.

Scott's trial

"Bonnie Dundee" followed. Here a court of law solemnly tried Sandie and after watching the evidence of the witnesses against that of his friends it was decided that he wasn't such a bad fellow after all.

Those taking part were:

Judge—Douglas Sparks.

Clerk of Court—Verna Massey.

Lawyers—Jean Elford, Albert Miles.

Santa Claus—Victor Kemler.

Guards—Gordon Walkin, Ronald Rayner.

Presentation Witnesses — John Mackinnon, Billie Moore, Stewart Hughes, Albert Tomlinson.

Defence Witnesses—Billy Rawson, Audrey Lafferty, George Reeve, Marjorie Ashton, Laureen Lewis.

Audience—Patsy Orr, Donna Airy, Georgie Woodcock, Helen Reid, Muriel Taylor, Kathleen Winters, Donald O'Neil, Allen Young.

Sandie—Jack Orr.

Scott's trial was followed by a song and dance by Grade 5, in middies and skirts was gracefully done. A piano solo by Mary Pitts Ostrom was warmly applauded.

Fairy Queen Operetta

Fairy charm held sway in the final number "The Magic Ring". The lovely costumes of the young performers made a colorful scene. Those taking part showed genuine talent and the play moved very smoothly. The plot centred in the spell of the old witch indicated because she had not been invited to the christening of the Prince and Princess. The latter is put under a deep sleep by the witch and is kissed by the Prince.

Fairy charm held sway in the final number "The Magic Ring". The lovely costumes of the young performers made a colorful scene. Those taking part showed genuine talent and the play moved very smoothly. The plot centred in the spell of the old witch indicated because she had not been invited to the christening of the Prince and Princess. The latter is put under a deep sleep by the witch and is kissed by the Prince.

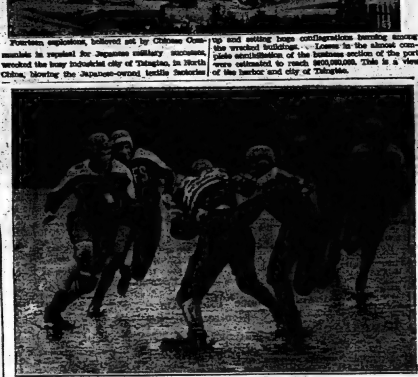
Thirty-five persons died and 300 others suffered more or less serious injuries in the railway collision that has the pile of wreckage in its wake. The Mitre-Limited express, roaring through a blinding snowstorm, crashed into a stationary passenger train at Castlegary in Stirlingshire, Scotland, creating the shambles. Railway cranes and wrecking crews are removing the splintered coaches from the line.

Deported from United States after serving a prison term and brought back to Toronto to face three charges, Lester A. Parmalee, notorious swindler and confidence man, wears philosophical air he declares that "crime doesn't pay." Parmalee eluded American and Canadian police for 16 years before falling into the toils of the law though he was wanted in dozens of cities on both sides of the line for cheques and other frauds.

Caught by conveying steel and timbering from a temporary dam they were building to hold back the waters of Keddie creek, while a new bridge was under construction, eight workmen lost their lives near Port Stanley, Ont. The men were members of a night shift working on the project, a new harbor fill bridge built as a provincial unemployment relief work, and were killed by the falling beams and timbers of the temporary dam, or were drowned when the waters of the creek swept into the excavation following the collapse. A view of the wreckage, with debris floating on top of the muddy waters, and some of the huge shoring beams which fell plainly visible, is given ABOVE. An eyewitness of the tragedy was Frank Stern (LEFT) steam-shovel operator who was working on the creek bank. Divers were summoned to the scene to search for dead or injured and a rescue crew is shown (below) preparing their equipment. Several rescued were reported injured.

Fourteen explosions, believed set by Chinese Communists in reprisal for Japanese military successes, wrecked the busy industrial city of Tsingtao, in North China, blowing the Japanese-owned textile factories up and setting huge conflagrations burning among the wrecked buildings. — Lower in the almost complete annihilation of the business section of the port were estimated to reach HUNDREDS. This is a view of the harbor and city of Tsingtao.

Frank B. Kellogg, former United States' secretary of state and co-author with the late Aristide Briand of France, of the Kellogg-Briand Peace Treaty which outlaws war, is reported critically ill with pneumonia at St. Paul, Minn.



Leroy Ross, 33, C.I.O. worker at the Fisher body plant at Kansas City, shows policeman the buckshot wounds he received in the leg as 300 C.I.O. men attempted to stop a caravan of 150 Ford motor cars bound for the Fleet plant in the same city and carrying Ford employees. Although Ross would not tell under what circumstances he was injured, a Ford employee who is not a member of the C.I.O. union had reported earlier he fired a shotgun twice at fleeing men who had thrown rocks through his bedroom window.

POMPOON AT SANTA ANITA—Getting ready for the race at Santa Anita, Cal., is Pompoon, who may meet War Admiral again.

Dr. Carl Omsrud, Los Angeles dentist and amateur inventor (LEFT) is shown here, demonstrating to his friend Don Wilson, radio announcer, the "vibrobelmintholator," a worm-catching device which he has invented. Three years ago, while Dr. Omsrud was on a fishing trip, he was passing a high-tension power line following a sudden rainstorm. He heard the strange humming and crackling of the wires above. At the base of the tower he saw numerous angle worms which had undoubtedly been attracted by the vibration of the pole itself. With that in mind, he made the vibrobelmintholator, consisting of a steel rod and a corrugated wooden stick. When he puts the steel rod in soggy earth near a tree or pole, and draws the stick across the rod as a violinist would draw a bow across a violin, the worms come out, drawn either by a certain low hum or by the vibrations. The picture was taken at Los Angeles, Calif.

Co a wa.er-logged gridiron Regina Dales, Junior Rugby champions of Western Canada, and Hamilton Tiger-Cubs-Cheslers, eastern titleholders, met in a Dominion football championship game at Hamilton. Although the match was not sanctioned by the C.R.U. it was considered by both teams as a title affair. Big "Tom" Springsteen, Regina Dales ace placement kicker and plunger, failed to live up to advance billing, and along with several Regina fumbles, was a big factor in Hamilton's 27-3 win. Wright, of Dale-Canadians, is pictured here carrying the ball with Regina tacklers surrounding him. Some idea of the condition of the field can be gained from a glance at this picture.

This unusual hockey picture was taken during the wide-open game between New York Rangers and their intra-city rivals, the Americans, in New York. The Rangers emerged with a 2-0 victory over "Red" Dutton's star-spangled aggregation. Goalie Dave Kerr, of the Rangers, who, incidentally, is leading the league in shut-outs, is pictured here sliding on the ice with the puck tucked under him as Johnny Gallagher, of Americans, tries to get at it. Lyn Patrick, No. 8, and Ott Heller, No. 2, of the Rangers, are on the LEFT, while the two players sticking their heads together in front of the net are Cecil Dillon of Rangers and "Happy" Emms of Amerks.

Robert Worth Bingham, United States ambassador to Great Britain, died in a Baltimore hospital after a brief illness. Mr. Bingham, a Louisville, KY., publisher, was 66. He recently asked to be relieved of his diplomatic duties. Jos. P. Kennedy was appointed to succeed him.

GIFTS MUST BE INDIVIDUALISTIC

Rev. A. G. Sinclair is Special Speaker at Y's Men's Club

"Christmas is a children's festival," said Rev. A. G. Sinclair of Bayside Church, addressing the Y's Men Club at their weekly supper. "However, as Christians grown-ups are all children. Everyone likes to receive and give presents. Good gifts are purchased every one week. Children do not take an interest in something they receive here nor do they take an interest in something which they have to give with someone else. Gifts must be individualistic or it does not please them.

"The greatest Christmas gift to the world was Jesus Christ," said Rev. Sinclair. "For centuries men have been looking for a Saviour. God had given them many wonderful gifts, such as the birds, the flowers and other beautiful things, yet there was a longing for a personal gift from God. Every year we renew that sense that God gave to the world His only Son. And so we have Christmas to remember God's goodness or giving and making others happy."

Rev. Sinclair was introduced to the Club by Joe Shortt and was thanked by Cooney Scott. President Lorne McDougall presided at the meeting. Rev. Lavery, chaplain of the club was given a present, some toys, which were all given to the Dundas Street Mission. Members of the Christ Church boys' choir, under the direction of George Mayhew, were guests of the club and sang a number of beautiful Christmas songs.

JAPAN BANS SANTA CLAUS

Tokyo, Dec. 21 (AP)—Santa Claus was banished from Japan today.

A Home Ministry ordinance forbids the custom of Japanese celebrating Christmas this year.

Japan, although not a Christian nation, had been celebrating the day with a gaiety that rivaled that of predepressional stores, featuring Santa Clauses.

Shopkeepers have announced that instead of the usual decorations their establishments will display Japanese, German and Italian flags. This is because Japan is partner of an anti-Communist agreement.

Members of the staffs of the Lipton stores in Belleville, Trenton, Napanee and Bridgewater were surprised and delighted to receive substantial cash bonuses, marking the Christmas season, with the best wishes of the management. Bonuses of from one to nine weeks salary were paid. Managers of the various Lipton centers are Prince Edward County and also received substantial Christmas bonuses.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 22, 1937

CLAUSE 9 OF MILLAR WILL DECLARED VALID

Dozen Toronto Women Hope for Half Million Left by Wealthy Lawyer

Determination Mother Entitled to Money Left to Ontario Court

RELATIVES CONTEST

Estate of Lawyer is Estimated to be in Excess of Half Million

Ottawa, Dec. 22—(CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada today upheld clause nine of the eccentric will of Charles Vance Millar of Toronto. It ruled his estate, estimated in excess of $500,000, should go to the mother or children who gave birth to the most children by Mrs. Toronto between Oct. 31, 1926 and Oct. 31, 1936.

The Supreme Court left to Ontario courts the task of determining the mother or mothers entitled to the money in a decision in the manner as a decision was reached.

Validity Questioned by Relatives

Validity of the will was questioned by two relatives of the Toronto multimillionaire lawyer, Arabella West and Alexander Butcher who claimed it was contrary to public policy.

The next-of-kin contended clause nine of the will which left the residue of the estate to the mother of the largest number of children born in the 10 years followed Millar's death. Millar himself described the will as "unconventional and peculiar" in his preamble. Other clauses left bravery shares to clergymen and race track shares to opponents of racing.

Viewpoint of Judges

The five judges who heard the appeal were unanimous in holding the contentious clause was a valid bequest. Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff delivered a judgment in which Justices Davis, Kerwin, and Hudson concurred. Justice Crocker disagreed with some of the reasons of the other judges but arrived at the same conclusion and delivered a separate judgment.

Legitimacy Raised

The determination of this controversy as to validity involves the decision of a point of construction, namely, whether the word 'children', as there employed (in the will), includes illegitimate children," wrote the Chief Justice.

That question was answered in the negative by Mr. Justice Middleton and by the Ontario Court of Appeal. We think it sufficient to say that we agree with this conclusion, which rests upon the reasons stated in the clear judgments delivered by the Chief Justice of Ontario and Mr. Justice Riddell in the Court of Appeal and by Mr. Justice Middleton and we think it unnecessary to add anything to those reasons.

The remaining question, concerning which we express our views at length, is validly the contention that this clause is void as against public policy. In support of that view we have had a powerful argument from Mr. Hellmuth, K.C. Hellmuth, counsel for the next of kin); but giving due weight to it we find ourselves in agreement with the conclusions of the Ontario Judges who unanimously held the clause to be valid."

Mothers Hopeful

Toronto, Dec. 22—(CP)—The decision of the Supreme Court of Canada upholding clause nine of the clause in the will of Charles Vance Millar today finds at least a dozen Toronto women still hopeful for the $500,000 left by the wealthy lawyer to the mother giving birth to the largest number of babies in the 10 years following his death.

Six of the entrants in the contest claim to have had nine babies in the stipulated time. Two claim eight one reports seven and another lists six. Then there are the special cases of Mrs. Martin Kenny, who unofficially claims 12 eligible, and Mrs. Pauline Mae Clark, who states she has had nine born in Toronto in the specified time and one baby born outside the city.

The half dozen who report having had nine children are Mrs. Grace Dagnato, Mrs. Kathleen Nagle, Mrs. Lucy Tinkiel, Mrs. Annie Gerber, Mrs. Hilda Graziano and Mrs. Vera Mahaffy.

Mrs. Mary Pegan and Mrs. A. Harrison claim eight; Mrs. Margaret Coombs has entered with seven and Mrs. Manuela Darrigo reports six eligible.

The courts of Ontario will be asked to decide the mother or mothers entitled to the prize.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Winter solstice in the northern hemisphere will be the shortest day of the year, and at 1:22 a.m. eastern standard time, the sun is directly overhead at the Tropic of Capricorn.

For us it has reached its lowest point in the south and gives less heat and light as the days of this year. Peary, when in the far north, called it the midnight of the "Great Night". He assembled his company on deck, included the Eskimos, and explained to them that the sun on that day started to return northagain. He celebrated by presenting gifts to the Eskimos. One of them, a boy, started south over the snow hills to meet the sun, but he soon returned to the ship.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 22—(CP)—Synopsis—A disturbance centred over Northern Ontario and moving eastward has a trough of low extending southwestward across the Great Lakes to the Southern States. High pressure and cold weather covers the Prairie Provinces and Northern British Columbia. Light to moderate snow, with part rain, has occurred over Ontario and light snow in some parts of Quebec. It has been cold over the Ontario valley eastward to the Maritimes but quite mild in the Great Lakes region.

Lake Superior—strong northwest winds; cloudy and becoming much colder with light snow or flurries. Thursday, fresh northerly winds; partly cloudy and cold.

Manitoba—Northerly winds; partly cloudy and cold today and Thursday with scattered snowflurries.

Saskatchewan—Northerly winds; partly cloudy and cold today and Thursday with some light snow.

ORDER AUTOPSY AFTER COMEDIAN DIES SUDDENLY

Ted Healy, 41, Engages in Fist Fight Police Are Told

AT CELEBRATION

Stage And Screen Star Creator of Theatrical "Stooges".

Los Angeles, Dec. 22—(AP)— An autopsy was ordered today to determine whether Ted Healy, stage and screen comedian, died from the effects of a fist fight which, police were told, climaxed a gay celebration of the birth of his son.

Although Healy's death was announced by his studio as due to a heart attack, police said they considered he was engaged in a fight Sunday night outside a Hollywood night club with an unknown adversary.

Healy's physician said a coroner's examination of the body showed a red, subcutaneous bruise on the left eye, temple, possibly caused by a blow, and a deep gash above the left eye.

Police learned from Dr. Sydney Rosenberg that Healy received two stitches to close the gash over the actor's injured eye.

Creator of "Stooges"

Culver City, Calif., Dec. 22—(AP) Ted Healy, 41, four-faced comedian who made humor and a career out of slapping his pals around the stage and screen, died from a heart attack at his home here presumably.

Healy was the creator of theatrical "stooges" and his assistant relatives who bob up in the audience to get their pals' laughs to cause general confusion. He used them in "Gags" that brought him first fame in that Carroll's Follies, then success in the movies.

His latest movie, "Hollywood Hotel" was previewed Monday night.

The comedian's second wife gave birth to their first son, John Jacob last Friday.

Healy had been in the greatest excitement in his life.

Married Twice

His first wife was Betty Braun, a dancer, whom he married in Louisville. They were divorced in 1932. Last year Healy eloped to Yuma, Ariz., and was arrested for the law in New York but turned to the stage, forgetting the comedy team of burlesque show "Cuddle Up" in 1917. For 15 years he was a familiar figure in vaudeville houses of the United States and Europe.

Healy and his boys were featured in Earl Carroll's Vanities in 1932, 1933 and 1934 and appeared in "A Night in Spain" and "A Night in Venice". They reached the apex of $5,000 weekly vaudeville salary in New York and $6,000 on the road.

Climate Hotter Than Tropical In Canada Many Years Ago

Palaeontologist Says West Covered by Vast Inland Sea

MONSTROUS REPTILES

Toronto, Dec. 22—(CP)— Four hundred million years ago the climate of Canada was hotter than tropical, Dr. Madeleine Fritz said today.

Dr. Fritz, small and blue-eyed, sat at her desk in the Royal Ontario Museum of Palaeontology, and talked about things which, by her standards, are so old they are news.

Between three and four hundred million years ago, coral reefs abounded around the southwestern fringes of Ontario; sponges lived in the seas washing over Hamilton; and "sea lilies", a kind of shellfish, flourished on the present site of Peterborough.

Dr. Fritz looks coolly back through the ages. The Prairie Provinces are absent the driest place in Canada at present, but a mere fifty million years ago they were swept by a vast inland sea, she tells you calmly.

Monsters Swam Lagoons

Then she takes you outside her office, shows you reconstructed skeletons of other creatures of the monstrous reptiles—half the size of a house—that swam through the lagoons and battled on the swampy shores of central Alberta in a vanished age.

She shows you also that giant fern trees and cycads which flourished grew in the lush tropical bogs of the Cape Breton district two hundred million years ago now are the coal you burn in your furnace.

Dr. Fritz is one of the directors of the Museum of Palaeontology, the branch of science which deals with fossil remains or traces of animals and plants found embedded in certain rocks of the earth's crust.

She admits fossil skeletons and such are things a long time dead, but declares that they have a way of bringing things to life in the imagination and quickened the sense of wonder. It's a way, she says, of keeping the mind young.

Seeking the bodies of the eight "Stuckers" who met death when dynamite dam collapsed upon them at Port Stanley, Ont., Pete Montour diver, descends into the muddy, wreckage strewn water, where jagged steel and splintered beams make his own work hazardous. The diver brought three bodies to the surface, but five more were buried under tons of steel and debris close to where fell when the dam gave way. TERUEL CAPTURED BY GOV'T FORCES

Thousands Killed or Wounded in Major Battle of War

Hendaye, France-Spanish Frontier, Dec. 22—(AP)—Government forces have captured Teruel, insurgent officers said they were advised today by General Franco's headquarters.

Official government dispatches—following an earlier pressmire announcement that the Nationalist provincial capital had been occupied—indicated part of the old fortress known as "The City of Rock" remained in insurgent hands.

Only isolated bands of the garrison still were resisting, Franco's officers acknowledged. The wife and Salamanca headquarters considered the city as lost.

Official insurgent spokesmen refused to confirm or deny government capture of the city. Insurgent officers, however, said reports indicated Franco would re-establish his line from Albarracin across the Teruel-Zaragoza highway about six miles north of Teruel.

Government troops fought their way across a ravine to attack the old Teruel fortress where the insurgent defenders made their last stand.

Thousands Reported Killed

The battle for Teruel was in government hands after a battle which thousands of men were reported killed or wounded.

(Dispatches from Valencia said Teruel fell when government attackers stormed and captured a bull ring where the insurgent defenders made a last stand against bayonet charges.

Madrid hailed the success at Teruel as the greatest in the 17 months old civil conflict. The last Teruel census showed 12,000 inhabitants but refugees were believed to have swelled the city to 20,000 or 22000.

The civilian population, the government said, emerged from subterranean hiding places and welcomed the government troops with "wild demonstrations of enthusiasm."

Fifty thousand rebel troops took part in the government's drive to smash the Teruel sector which had constantly threatened to split the government's coastal territory between Valencia and Barcelona or to sever Madrid-Valencia communications.

PUBLIC FUNERAL FOR EIGHT KILLED

Bodies of Seven Recovered And Expected Eighth Will Soon be Found

Port Stanley, Ont., Dec. 22—(CP) —Body of Allan Bisbee, 24, Dam Station, who perished with seven other workmen in the collapse of the coffer dam in Kettle Creek here, was taken from the water today.

It was the last body to be recovered, three being located Monday and four yesterday.

Bisbee's body was found in the tangled wreckage of the coffer dam that collapsed Sunday night while the eight workmen were "mucking" at the bottom, 20 feet under creek's surface.

Timbers were lifted last-night and divers today explored the entire bottom of the dam and reported there were no more bodies there.

Then they went down the outside of the dam west will of the dam and found Bisbee's body about three feet from the wall.

Provincial Coroner said the body had been carried over wall by the wash at the time of the dam's collapse.

TOBACCO DEALER SLAIN BY GUNMEN DURING A HOLDUP

Jos. Benoit, Montreal, Made Attempt to Frustrate Robbers

SON HEARS SHOTS

Gets Glimpse of Two Men as They Fled From The Store

Montreal, Dec. 22—(CP)— Two gunmen shot Joseph S. Benoit to death today when he attempted to frustrate their efforts to rob his wholesale tobacco shop on Jacques Cartier Square.

Benoit, accompanied by his 18-year-old son, Fernand, had just opened the jobbing plant when the two men entered and asked for a certain age of cigarettes. As Benoit turned to a showcase behind him the intruders drew guns and warned the jobber to put up his hands. Instead, Benoit reached for a large gun in a drawer but it let the men who opened fire. The storekeeper fell behind the counter, two bullets in his back.

No Inkling of Killers

The son told officers of the police patrol from which Benoit responded to the alarm he had no inkling of the holdup until he heard the shots fired. He caught a glimpse of the two men as they ran from the store to a waiting car. They carried no distinguishing streets, and he was taken to headquarters to examine pictures in the police gallery. A farmer, on his way to a nearby market place, also saw the men and went with the youth to headquarters to attempt identification.

Son Shot at

Benoit was rushed to hospital but died before his wife, two daughters and another son could be summoned to his bedside from their Monkland Avenue home.

Daylight had hardly broken when the shooting occurred, and there were few persons in the wholesale district where Benoit was known as a successful jobber. The son said the men also fired at him when he entered the store from a rear room but the bullets entered wooden framework on the shelves.

Britain Protests Violation Hong Kong Territorial Waters

Sends Note to Japan to Respect All Rights

INCIDENT RECALLED

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 22—(CP Cable)— Great Britain today presented another note to Japan. This time it is to protest against alleged violations of the territorial waters of Hong Kong, a British crown colony. The incident occurred Dec. 11. While within Hong Kong territorial waters a Chinese maritime customs protection vessel was fired on by a Japanese destroyer which lay just outside the three-mile limit. The Chinese vessels ran ashore and was beached. The Japanese destroyer then sent two motorboats into territorial waters and towed to pam.

The note, which Sir Robert Craigie, British Ambassador at Tokyo, presented to the Japanese government, requests the assurance that strict instructions have been issued to Japanese naval forces which will prevent a repetition of such incidents in territories and territorial waters.

Another point under protest is that it is pressed in the note. The Chinese vessel was engaged in protection of customs revenues. The service of foreign loans is the first charge on these revenues. The service of domestic loans is the second charge. What is left goes to the Chinese government.

British official circles are inclined to regard the incident as due to an excess of zeal on the part of the Japanese commander rather than a deliberate violation of territorial waters. Nevertheless, it is felt the incident cannot be allowed to pass.

Imposition of Sanctions Means an Overwhelming Force to Back Policy

British Foreign Secretary Points Out Sanctions Mean Risk

PEACE IS AIM

Prime Minister Chamberlain Warns Patience of Britain Not Inexhaustible

London, Dec. 22—(CP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told today's cabinet meeting, told the House of Commons last night that sanctions to be effective mean "a risk, if not a certainty, of war."

The Foreign Secretary winding up for the government a long debate on foreign policy, stated:

"Supposing that the opposition speakers have meant that the League of Nations has the power to impose sanctions in the present dispute in the Far East, I reply that there are two possible forms of sanctions: Ineffective, which are not worth getting oh and effective which means a risk, if not a certainty, of war.

Overwhelming Force Necessary

"No one can contemplate any section of that risk in the Far East unless they are convinced that they have overwhelming force to back that decision.

"Do they really think the League has, with the United States, such power in it—Britain and France—as got the overwhelming force? It is not any longer clear to me that that overwhelming force does exist."

That was the Foreign Secretary's reply to labor suggestions the League with the United States, should bring pressure to bear upon Japan in regard to her invasion of China.

Three Countries

Three countries outside Geneva he said, who clearly by its action does not accept the rule of law, and Germany, who would not join the League to co-operate in enforcing the law, and the United States, though sympathetic to the rule of law, not prepared to undertake responsibilities in new spheres.

"If. We must do all we honorably can to secure a restoration of peace.

"2. We must do our full share with others in the fulfillment of our international obligations.

"3. We must provide our own interests and, of course, British territory.

Mr. Chamberlain, who spoke early in the debate, warned Japan that Britain's patience was not inexhaustible.

"What we are doing now," he said, "is not in avail proof of the determination and ability of the Japanese government to frustrate a recurrence" of attacks on British lives and property in China.

Friendly Cause of Peace

"The government are still anxious to serve the cause of peace by any honorable means open to us, but it must not be thought that our desire for peace and our patience under repeated provocation mean that we are not mindful of our international obligations or forgetful of our duty to protect British subjects."

Mr. Eden answered the House there was no truth in reports Britain sought a colonial settlement with Germany at the expense of any other colonial power.

BUILDING FOR BETTER HEALTH

Each year at the Christmas season we are asked to share our blessings with those who are less fortunate than we are. This is a worthy cause, but there is a much wider field open for our charity.

Tuberculosis is a germ disease. It is very likely some of the food, fluids or parts most frequently attacked are the glands. Children are more prone to the disease than adults. Children and boys with the most active glands. It is spread from person to person. It is most common from October to March or April season. Infections from cattle can be passed on to human beings through the flesh of diseased animals, or through milk. Milk should never be bought or used from doubtful sources. It should always be pasteurized. The great allies of the germs are overwork, strain, dissipation, insufficient food and all those symptoms which lower the vitality. Tuberculosis is a disease all of us can help to control. Every cup we throw them off and do not breathe in their germs. Children, however, are more susceptible than grown-ups; therefore it is most important that children be protected.

Recovery from tuberculosis is slow and its success depends largely on early discovery of the condition, and faithful adherence to all the requirements of the treatment. It cannot be cured by drugs or by medicines. The best treatment is fresh air, sunshine, which nobody begrudges, food developed toward the end of the last century, rest, sunlight, fresh air, and proper food, under medical supervision. Many sanatoria have been built in recent years in order to bolster the body in its fight against the ravages of the germs. A strong emphasis is placed on rest. Rest helps also in staging a successful battle.

The crystal driver begins to think of the road ahead, even while still at home, for he knows that, before he sets out, he should see to it that his car is in good shape—in prominent couch, loss of weight, error failing on steering-wheel—however all generally run-down condition. All these things are the symptoms of other sickness.

Don't be afraid to consult a physician. He will discover your troubles, and don't mess learn if your fears are confirmed. With proper treatment there is hope.

The Toronto and Toronto Hospitals for Consumptives and the Ontario Sanatorium for Consumptive Children stand ready to care for all who are afflicted, but in this they must have the help of many others.

Please will you aid the life-saving work by sending a contribution to National Sanitarium Association, 347 College Street, Toronto.

Health of City Good in 1937, Inspector H. McGinnis Says

Examination of Well, Shows Conditions in Many Cases Unsatisfactory

CONTAGION DECREASE

Sanitary conditions in Belleville and statistics for the year 1937 are outlined in the report filed with Sanitary Inspector H. McGinnis to the Medical Officer of Health, Dr. O. R. Clark, and presented to the local Board of Health at a recent meeting and passed. The inspector's report in part reads:—

Contagious Diseases:

"List as reported to me through your office:

Scarlet Fever	3
Diphtheria	2
Diphtheria Carrier	1
Measles	115
Mumps	4
Chicken Pox	6
Typhoid (out of town cases)	1

"This shows a remarkable decrease in contagious diseases from the number in 1936. In that year we had as follows:

Measles	115
Scarlet Fever	38
Infantile Paralysis	3
Typhoid	1

Reason for Congratulation

"It is a matter for congratulation to every citizen of Belleville that not only were there no deaths from contagious diseases, but that there were not many cases of Infantile Paralysis, a disease which assumed such alarming proportions throughout the Province of Ontario.

"The Isolation Hospital has, during this fiscal year, been in operation for eighty-six days. Last year it was open one hundred and sixty-three days. This decrease means a considerable saving to the tax payers of our Municipality.

"At the present time, October 31st, 1937, there are no cases of contagious diseases in the City.

Measures Taken by M. O. H.

"In connection with the epidemic of Infantile Paralysis throughout our Province in August and September, I desire to make mention of the precautionary measures taken by our Medical Officer of Health, Dr. O. R. Clark. Circulars signed were ordered placed at all popular bathing places along the water front and in the Moira River, where bathing was indulged in. Within the City Limits, the Victoria Park Pool was closed up, although previous to the epidemic extra precautions were taken in connection with it. Twice a week during the bathing season this pool is cleaned out and brushed and every day it is chlorinated. I personally inspected this place some twenty times previous to closing and wish to thank the Caretaker of the Parks Board, Mr. C. J. Symons, and the Members for their hearty co-operation.

Milk Supply

"Strict supervision over this most important product is exercised not only by our Department but also by the Provincial Department of Health in Toronto. The quality of which I collect every month, and in some cases twice or more a month, are forwarded to the Department in Toronto. I can record my pride in them, which have been very satisfactory during the past year. In all cases the sediment tests for the year were clean and the butter fat content very satisfactory up to the required test. Bacteria count was also quite satisfactory. This shows an improvement every year and the report for the month of October was the best in every particular.

"Consumption of milk in the City this year was as follows:

Pasteurized, 4,815 quarts per day — Raw, 307 quarts per day.

Percentage of pasteurized milk sold in the City, 90; per cent. Cream sold on the market is pasteurized in ice during months of June, July and August, with proportionate number sixty. Inspections of these places were made covering the premises outside and inside, as well as the cattle, milking utensils, etc. With the exception of 3 places, one of which is particularly unsatisfactory, as it also be the raw milk dairy attached thereto, I found sanitary conditions very good. The names of the producers and dairy mentioned above were duly reported to the Medical Officer of Health and also to the dairies procuring from them the milk which is offered for sale in the Municipality of the City of Belleville.

Instructions Given

"On several occasions I have notified the dairymen and milk vendors that they should comply with the regulations contained in City By-Law 2513, Part 4, Section 8, which reads as follows: "Every dairyman or milk vendor shall immediately notify the Medical Health Officer or Inspector upon making any change or removal of his dairy or cow barn, and in the event of his not doing so shall forfeit his license."

"Once again I desire to remind the producers to keep the milk down to 50 Fahrenheit or even lower, while waiting delivery to the dairies.

"Premises and cattle of cream producers who sell cream on the Market were also inspected and found satisfactory. Inspections of all stands within the Municipality and the County approximated 480.

Ice Supply

"Samples of ice from the area in the Bay of Quinte where our ice dealers procured their supply were taken by me personally and forwarded to the Provincial Laboratory. All were found to be in Class "A".

Wells

"Samples of certain wells were taken and forwarded to the Laboratory. In most cases we found reports unsatisfactory. We wish to remind the citizens that where city water from the Filtration Plant is available, the Board of Health deems it advisable that use of wells in cases same up. They are considered to be a potential danger to health and, occasionally, to life.

Inspections — Hostles and Special

Cafes, Restaurants, Fruit Stores, Bakeries, Butcher Shops, Grocery and Meat Stores combined), Fish Stores, Poultry Plants, Soft Drink Plants, Hotel Kitchens.

In the final inspection this year of the above places, I found that all, with the exception of one, had their premises in a condition which complied with the regulations. Upon re-inspection of this one place two days later, I found it quite in order.

"The open market and the butter and market are inspected twice every week. I can find no fault there as regards sanitary conditions. A big improvement is noticeable as compared with former years.

Complaints

Smoke Nuisances
Catch Basin Odours
Basement Odours
Sewers Blocked
Drains Blocked
Sewer Openings (not properly disposed of after collection. Since then this trouble has been adjusted.)
Outside Toilets
Cesspools
Unsanitary Homes
City Dump Grounds Lanes
Back Yards
Sinks
Sewer Connections (sanitary)

"The total number of complaints received would approximate 160. All of these complaints, with the exception of smoke nuisance, for which there is no covering municipal by-law, have been investigated and amicably settled.

"I would the City I find that business men are more particular now in keeping the spaces back of their stores in a clean and sanitary condition and are also more careful about garbage. This improvement regarding the garbage situation appears, especially speaking, to nearly all our citizens. I find that lanes are kept in far better condition than formerly, although there is still some room for improvement.

Tenement Houses

"There is some improvement over last year in this respect, but there are still three or four places about which action should be taken. This matter is now in the hands of the proper authorities.

Tourist Camp and Houses

"At the City Tourist Camp I found that the regulations of the Provincial Department of Health were being complied with and the premises stand who was also found to be in order. Previous to the opening of the tourist season I personally inspected some twenty tourist homes. They too were all carrying out the regulations of the Provincial Health Department.

Schools

"The sanitary inspection of the Collegiate Institute, Public Schools and St. Michael's Academy has been duly carried out.

Isolation Hospital

"This institution is inspected at various times by me. Hospital is open. I look after the duties in connection with the opening and closing the Hospital, subject to instructions from the Medical Officer of Health.

"In conclusion I with to express my sincere thanks to the Members of the Board of Health, the City Officials and citizens in general for their splendid co-operation in the discharge of duties in my local Department of Health Inspector."

A Christmas Gift for All the Year

There is no one thing as a poor Christmas present. Some are just better than others. Any gifts carried out of spirit of love and friendship is not to be discarded lightly.

All gifts, however, do not betoken this wish, so well as they might. Household gifts lack the desirable personal touch—yet purely personal presents never seem new or change style so quickly that the giving seems an ill-chosen waste. The perfect gift not only gives pleasant measure, but lingers on to charm the receiver many, many times.

Few make excellent gifts. Candies, particularly, touch a responsive chord in any heart. They need little care, water, some bird food, and such tiny luxuries as will bring their owners the gift of song from morning till dusk.

With the Christmas season coming on space it is well to keep "his memory in mind and stop at a pet shop. The very novelty of the gift will surprise and please the receiver.

IN PEACEFUL LANDS

While nations war in other parts of the world, the Christian lands of peace will observe the great religious festival three days hence. The world at peace, while worried over the international character of war turns with joy to the marking of Christmas in the northern world it is a time of gladness and merriment with accompaniment of winter and snow, with the making of gifts, and with calling a blessing upon everyone as the greeting "Merry Christmas" is expressed and the "compliments of the season" are passed to each and every person. Christmas widens the brotherhood, for it has an expansive power. So potent is it that people feel better in being more kindly towards their fellows. For one time in the year at least their ideals are quite properly set and their gaze is on the right things.

The last few fleeting days which remain before Saturday still find the loving attentions to the preparations for the happiness of others proceeding without let-up. Crowds frequent the shops and business is not at a standstill. The inspiring individual downtown becomes a crowd and that inspired crowd is a buying, present-giving crowd. Ante-Christmas entertainments crowd the week with all the anticipation which goes into plans for a time for preparation for Christmas. These are days when few are idle, unless it be those whose ways are not cast in pleasant places and who lack the means to prepare and to give. Yet with the thoughtfulness which marks many of these rise to the emergency and with this aid make out of what might otherwise be a wreck of a season something by which long to remember Christmas.

CHRISTMAS IN THE WORLD

Christmas this year will find many lands torn with strife. In the Holy Land, disorders have been taking place and will no doubt mark even the holy occasion of the celebration of the birth of the Founder of Christianity in Bethlehem of Judaea. Palestine over which conquerors strode for centuries long before the Christian era and for many of the centuries of the Christian dispensation, should be a land blessed with peace and happiness but here disorders reign. In Abyssinia as the season approaches there can be little joy, with freedom, as the natives knew it, gone with no likelihood of its return, with its monarch, once known as the Conquering Lion of Judah, living the life of a forgotten man in London, and planning to move into a smaller home where he will write his memoirs.

In the Far Christian missions have been preached and were beginning to bear impressive fruit. Death reigns and events have occurred which have shocked humanity in the Japanese invasion of China, neighbor, the Chinese. In Spain, a land where Christianity has had some of its fines expounds in thought and devotion and art, madly brother Spaniard strives with Spaniard to the death for the sake of political formula.

With all these trials and with the fears with which mankind is beset, many might feel that Christianity would be a mockery to the lot of those who have this mad outer world to the darkness it seems to be courting. But that would be a poor following of the Founder of Christianity whose message was a social message and one of brotherhood, love and peace. Christianity works both in the inner and the outer areas of life. Christ lived in a day of discontent, when Palestine was a Roman colony, and the tramp of conquering Rome with its huge army of occupation or possession, was heard daily. Yet after that His religion possesses a greater part of the earth, though many of its followers, it must be admitted, are only nominally followers, for that possesses what some of the nations posses, a materialistic outlook. Will it not continue its sway until the race of man will come to see the utter futility of war and conquest?

Christmas brings the hope that the spirit of brotherhood will find a way out of the fears and dreads and turmoil of this time, that it will bring the social and the individual attitude towards the great question of world brotherhood to the place it belongs and make it keep step with the modern scientific progress, which is easily seen as so great a menace today, when men have taken the new knowledge and the instruments of science to kill one another. In a paraphrase of the Biblical words the swords, shells, the cannon and the bombs shall be turned into agencies for peace. That is the Christian hope and expectation.

The world's sense of horror at the slaughter in various lands shows the futility of it all, reveals that it is only in the spiritual values that the true greatness of individual and nation is to be found.

MODERN CHRISTMAS

Shops and windows gaily dressed
In green and scarlet hue;
A roller-skating throng in fantastic garb;
A never-ending queue
Of children waiting anxiously
Of Santa Claus to greet,
Or ride in Toyland's fast express,—
A special Christmas treat.

How changed the scene from long ago
And that first Christmas Day
When in the town of Bethlehem
Christ-child and mother lay.
No royal bed to rest a king,
No herald to proclaim
The woundrous tidings to the world,
Until the Wise Men came.

Though vast the change that time has wrought,
His word lives with us still . . .
"May peace abide throughout the earth,
And to all men goodwill."

Montreal —E. Anne Pomeroy.

"SANTA CLAUS" PARMALEE WILL SPEND THIS CHRISTMAS

from the inside looking out, as he has the past three celebrations of the Peace on earth good will to men of good will season. Several Christmas seasons ago this gent with a moniker of "Santa Claus" because he always appeared and disappeared during the festive season, leaving mourners loud and long in his wake, operated in Toronto and Hamilton and cashed bank cheques for as much as $3,500 each in leading banks. His general method of working was to appear garbed as a clergyman, accompanied by a comely female represented as his daughter. He took plenty of time, selected a residence in the vicinity of the tabliahed a residence in the vicinity of the bank he purposed to loot, made a large deposit and made friends with the bank staff, and businessmen in the neighborhood. When the "blow-off" was ready Parmalee's cheques were honoured without question, and he garnered his spoils and flew. He slipped in California where he passed several large cheques. The cashier, who was his victim in this case, was a crippled veteran of the war and he resented Parmalee's crude touch, so he cruised about the streets in his auto watching for that smiling face. Fate was kind to him and he saw Parmalee on the street. He told his wife, sitting beside him, "There's the man." Friend wife needed no urging, she leaped from the car and threw her arms about the astonished Parmalee's neck, holding him until a policeman, summoned by the cashier, could run up and put the handcuffs on her prisoner. Incidentally the cashier's wife received $8,500 reward. Parmalee has just finished three years in San Quentin penitentiary and was brought back to Toronto to answer for his misdeeds in Canada. He now admits that crime does not pay and says he has reformed. Evidently he has changed his mind somewhat since his favorite indoor sport was "sucker" or easy money, several "grand" at a time, treating his victims to that Parmalee smile, and nothing else. It is not hard to reform in prison and Canadian justice will continue to deal with and wisely the case or otherwise of turning this clever manipulator loose upon the public again. Another of this guild of gentlemen cracksmen who opened safes by the magic of their smile and operated only at Christmas time was "Christmas" Keough, who a number of years ago forged traveling checks for $200 each on a Canadian bank and bought diamonds and other gimcracks, receiving considerable change in cash on each transaction. He operated successfully in various cities of the United States at Christmas season for several years, and many arrests were made and at times identifications made, no "Christmas" Keough. A Toronto mining broker was arrested one Christmas in Minneapolis and identified as "Christmas" Keough by store clerks, being imprisoned for a considerable time, finally obtaining his liberty to lose a law suit for false arrest. About five years ago a man practising "Christmas" Keough's technique was caught in New York, identified and given a prison term. There has been no more of the phoney Canadian travellers cheques passed since, but it is about time for "Christmas" Keough to regain his liberty and "John Law" will watch carefully to see just where and how this specialist spends his Christmas holidays.

X-Ray Treatment of Acne—Pimples

Notwithstanding the successful results obtained by viosteral in the treatment of acne—pimples— and also by the injections of Sulphur-olive petroleum extract, there are some cases that do not clear up. Even with the use of the X-rays—considered the best single treatment—there are cases that persist.

There has been a great amount of study and investigation of acne because it not only disfigures the individual but lowers his morale by making him conscious of his appearance at all times.

Naturally as most cases begin in the early teens—puberty—it is believed that the gland system of the body is at fault in that it seems unable to handle certain foods successfully and there are also changes in the oil glands of the skin which makes the oil thicken and harden instead of pouring out on the surface and making the skin soft and pliable. Thus the use of gland substances—pituitary and others—colonel diet, vegetable oil rub, and X-ray have one and all been found to help a certain percentage of cases.

These methods may help by stimulating the circulation of the blood, making the oil more fluid, killing the organism (acne bacillus), and causing certain foods to act differently.

While the X-ray is still considered the best single treatment, Dr. Erwin P. Zeisler, in Archives of Physical Therapy, X-Ray and Radium, says it should not be used in 'every' case of acne. X-rays should not be used in youngsters in their early teens, and that it should be recognized that many cases can be cured by proper hygiene combined with proper diet, vegetable oil rub, vioseral, and application of certain salves or ointments. And even when X-rays are used he says the treatment should be reduced to the smallest dosage, and number of treatments necessary to achieve permanent results. Dr. Zeisler found that since reducing the dose of X-rays, giving just four treatments (one per week) using sun and ultra violet light treatment with vaccines he get better results.

With this treatment—X-rays once a week for four weeks—followed by light, diet, and general hygienic treatment—it is seldom necessary to continue treatment more than three months. And the percentage of relapses has been less than with other treatments.

Mount Vernon

Ed. Note—This is the third of a series of letters being written by Mr. A. Jones now on his way to Florida.

Newport News, Va.,
December 6, 1937.

Mount Vernon, Virginia.

Silence, Respect. You are now approaching the tomb of General Washington and his wife, Martha. It was mere accident that I came upon Mount Vernon. We had never heard of the place and at the same time had never heard of the tomb of Washington, the beloved Father of his Country, and his wife, Martha Washington. The first president of the Great United States of America in the year of 1759 and who died on the 14th of December 1799. Proceeding down U.S. No. 1 between Fredericksburg and Richmond Va. I take a decided turn to the right but facing you is a four lane highway along the famous Potomac River and decorated with shrubs and trees. We naturally headed into this beautiful highway but glancing to the right we saw the arrow pointing to Mount Vernon at the curve. Coming to a stop we left the car and headed for the Service Station on the bend. The courteous attendant informed us this four lane highway led on to Mount Vernon. "How big a place is Mount Vernon?". We had not been but the home of Washington and his tomb. It is three miles further and joins No 1 almost at that point, Mount Vernon."

This four lane highway nine miles long along the Potomac and decorated with shrubs and trees. We naturally headed into this beautiful highway but glancing to the right we saw the arrow pointing to Mount Vernon at the curve. Now Mr. Robb is doing this for Canada in his own way. He finds that most Canadian poets are not nationalist enough, that they follow traditions of other lands, even the great traditions of England, Ireland and Scotland are great as they are, do not quite match the different Canada of time in the panorama of Canada. For instance John Keish may write of the greatest poem of all time in his ode "To a Nightingale". But a Canadian cannot stop at the end of the Nightingale to Keats song. For Canadian writers express not the great theme of Canadian national life in a greater contribution to the glory of British letters but for Canada's ears to imitate the writers of the British Isles. Such writers would enrich the culture of the Empire and the work of the Empire but would never to give expression to one of these phases of Canadian life, seek his inspiration in the birds and in natural surroundings of Canada.

A New Voice

Belleviillans should read with more than ordinary interest his poems in the Intelligencer because there is a rhythmic prose because in them like the Canadian poet they express surely they can find nothing more fitting than the poem which they know is in their surroundings and atmosphere. Mr. Robb's poems have been expressed.

Mr. Robb, too, writes in a new style. Ordinary rules cannot be applied to measure his work. He has gone to what is as far as we know, a new field. He finds a soul behind that song, something of the eternal behind that, and he finds the same thrills as the little throat gives voice to the tart and and the throb of the little creature.

Lines of Beauty

In respect to phrasing, Mr. Robb has developed far from the earliest days of poesie. Every line is living with beauty and is in truth lines of beauty. His poems are not mostly brief, some of them like the bird-notes one wants to hear again, something like the twitter of swallows as they make their flight through the air. He has a gift of music and as expressive as anything in the whole of music knowledge. In reading Mr. Robb one must remember that, as he has pointed out in his "Song of the Mounting Muse", "My poetry is for the human voice, I would commend it to your ear." His fault found in silence may become his highest praise. The silence of the bird is not quite the same as the music of the human voice. Mr. Robb has gone into the violinist of expression and has bridged the gap. He has found the human voice which appears like gap of though, or an unfathomable depth, in the silent, rather than reason. Take these lines from the opening song:-

"In Cloistered Groves"

In vernal beauty a silfin phrase.
A faint street song, shy, hid away,
The woodland bird pours out his praise,
And gives a lilting roundelay.
Elusive, far away, then gone!
In cloistered glens, I hide and wing.

Artistry of Words and Sounds

Here is the right word in the right place, the simple word suitably, here is smoothness of phrase with consistentness of thought. The poem would have been out of place. Mr. Robb has learned the art of brevity and the art of the right choice of words. He handles metaphors without striking a discordant or artificial note. In general his verse is simplicity.

Some of his words seem strange as if we were speaking a new language, a being finding utterance before his fellows. The poet has ranged far in the thought and quest and trail of beauty. He has wandered through Indian lore and has discovered it a veritable treasure trove of lovely thoughts and life ideals. His prose name of "Mikrah-Dawe", the Algonquin name for the redstart, show traces of this new spirit. In Canadian poetry. Then line read:-

"Poetry is a flaming redstart in a forest of words, a flitting Canada-ism, lighting pathways to Truth and Beauty, and fitfully flashing through jungles of human darkness." (Canada is the Spanish name for "Little Canada," the same as the redstart, which is a fair translation of the Indian name for the bird.)

Here is a stanza from "Song of Resignon" (the song sparrow), Canadian bird song into human words and measures:

"Up, up, and away,
Clearly, clearly,
Fairies in yellow wings,
Bubbling rills, rainbow rings,
Vibrant and strong.

Delicate Expression

A delicate thought led the poet into this exclamation:

"Do Bluebirds ever kiss the sky?"
and again:—
Bluebird murmurs love.
The breast a dying sun,
A touch of azure, from above,
Descends upon each one.
Oh, earth and sky!
Oh, friendly eye,
Oh, voice of softest down!
Sweet bluebird, Glory of the Light.
Be mine for ever more.

Thus through the wide fields of nature the poet strolls and makes for us first time authentic the violent voice heard for generations, ever since sensitive man heard the bird and saw the flowers and loved the carpeted ones and the trees of the field, but not fully expressed until Wallace Havelock Robb became the voice to which a voice of the trumpets which sing to battle" says Shelley. Mr. Robb is a poet who challenges man and particularly the people of Canada to the appreciation of nature in this blessed land of Canada.

Christmas Song

Some delicate work has gone into the composition of the snow-flake and Christmas-tide. Here is Mr. Robb's Christmas melody:—

The silvery snow-lights of Eirland
Are twinkling in Dream Dingle Dell.

Oh, hush, for the vales of all Fairland
Are waiting the Eirlin Yule Bell;
Are waiting the Yule Bell to sound.
Are ringing where gnome Fellows dwell Underground.

There it is, delicate fancy, imagination, clothed in words of exquisite beauty and rhythm.

These are but a few thoughts which have come in the nature of the mind as one reads the delightful volume, this poet of the Canadian wilds, or rather, may one say, in Canadian life for the word "wilds" suggests "wild and desolate and cliffe" seems more fitting to describe the Canadian life of the young Canadian poets. He can be virile for he is, champion of the Canadian people and his message can come home to the-heart and bosom of every one for enrichment of life and sympathy.

'The Door of Dawn' Reveals W. H. Robb's Fine Artistry

Wallace Havelock Robb's New Volume Reveals Poet's Possession of Keen Sense of Beauty And Artistic Talent—A National Undertaking to Express Canada's Soul in Rhythm.

"The Door of Dawn", the second book of verse and some prose published by Mr. Wallace Havelock Robb, formerly of Belleville, now of Abbey Dawn, Kingston, is now being published by the Poets Press, "Radio City", Rockefeller Centre, New York City. The volume is in fact a distinctive format, which is a fitting treasure-vault of the recent poetical work of Mr. Robb.

Many have remember Mr. Robb's other volume "The Gull and the Candle" published while he was a resident of Belleville, in which he revealed a keen sense of spirit of beauty and an artistry in rhythm which offered great promise. His new work "The Door of Dawn" fulfils that promise for the poet's step is everywhere now unfaltering. In this volume in full-throated song he carries out his ideals while his sense of music in verse has grown with time.

A National Work

Canadians realize that Mr. Robb is endeavoring to express in Canada what the great national poets of other lands have done for their countrymen, they have caught the spirit of the nation and made it immortal music. One has but to cite John Keats or Robert Burns, or the regendary Homer, or Shakespeare in the presence of nature, and even the mighty Milton and myriad others of the immortals of Englishmen to reveal what the national poet means to his country. In Italy, in Spain, in France, in Italy, in Germany, in Russia, in the United States — in fact, filled with the inspiration of his race speaks for it in words and in music, in song and in verse.

Now Mr. Robb is doing this for Canada in his own way. He finds that most Canadian poets are not nationalist enough, that they follow traditions of other lands, even the great traditions of England, Ireland and Scotland are great as they are, do not quite match the different Canada of time in the panorama of Canada. DON'T TAKE CHANCES

When tuberculosis strikes, there is no unwarranted optimism if it is allowed to run its course. It is the most insidious disease known to mankind.

It is unfortunate that so many of the victims of this disease underestimate the necessity of immediate hospital treatment. Many, through fear, endeavour to carry on, thus lessening their chances of recovery. Statistics show that all with moderately advanced cases and early cases may look to another, too, with confidence. Many of these victims are young children. Tuberculosis is the greatest killer of children. The early detection of tuberculosis in children through the application of mass courses and patient treatment in the best institutions established medical and surgical treatment has reduced the number of these.

Warnings of the dangers of tuberculosis must not be forgotten or made light of. Regular check-ups by your family physician will help to make you safe. Neglect them—the consequences might be serious.

Christmas Seals are the only means of raising funds to provide, annually, adequate treatment for victims of this disease and indicate the immediate significance of the Christmas Seal. Do not consult him until it is too late and do not neglect to buy Christmas Seals, for upon your purchase depends the success of the campaign.

Issued by the Ontario Division of the Canadian Mutoskwa and the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptives, Christmas Seals are sold by the Canadian Mutoskwa, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptives. Proceeds are used for the prevention of tuberculosis and the care of victims.

Please send your contribution to Christmas Seal Campaign, Ontario Division, Canadian Mutoskwa Association, 223 College Street, Toronto.

Community Christmas Tree Gala Affair at Stirling

Stirling—With fine weather prevailing happy children from all parts of the district gathered in great numbers to attend the Community Christmas tree celebration. A parade started at the arena and led by the generous St. Nicholas himself and the Stirling Citizens Band under the leadership of Mr. Maurice Bell, and Mr. H. G. Thompson, marched to the Stirling Christmas tree Club made its way slowly to the bridge near Masonsby's Park where Santa passed out more than nine hundred gift packets to his little friends.

The parade began at two o'clock and for nearly an hour the children passed by the round-faced, smiling guest of honor and received their gift and a hearty handshake. Children of all ages relished the candy decoration of the coming day of days when this same happy character would again visit them as their sleep.

After the parade marched past the great truckload of gifts it continued on to the Stirling Theatre where through the courtesy of the Stirling village Council and the management of the Theatre a special matinee was given free of charge and the hall was filled to capacity with no one but children. The picture starred Shirley Temple who one of the most appropriate ones that could be selected and the delighted children thoroughly enjoyed the afternoon as their parents looked after their Christmas shopping in the village stores. According to some of the children on the day's sales were very greatly increased over previous such occasions.

The Christmas Tree Club which has been in existence for several years in Stirling is to be congratulated on the success that the venture was carried through. Systematic organization work resulted in a large number of willing workers knowing their job thoroughly and this prevented any delay in the proceedings.

The annual Christmas Concert of St. Paul's United Church Sunday School was held on Friday evening when an excellent programme provided by the children under the able direction of Mrs. Bolton and Miss Rebecca Fraser was presented before a large audience.

At this time the Scriptural story of Christmas was read by Mr. Wilson Clark. The Christmas carols were then presented by the girls of Mrs. Matheson's class. These were entitled "Away Back There in N". This the Sketch was given in a very realistic manner by the following young artists who portrayed their various characters very capably: A Shepherd—Jack Pentonville was provided by the services of Mrs. Scotty Clark and following a clever vocal duet by the Bible Sentry sisters, Ruth and Jeanette Clark, the Nativity was given by the Rhythm Band.

Four different scenes were required for the presentation but each scene was most realistic, the first scene of the play was on the hills at Bethlehem and was most effective. Between each scene numerous were being given by the following group of pupils:

CHOCOLATE, FRUIT MAKE EASY DESSERT

Molded Pudding Served on Christmas Eve

Chocolate Fruit Pudding

By MRS. MARY MORTON

I would suggest this very delicious looking chocolate fruit pudding to serve for dinner or supper the night of Christmas eve. Make the meal simple, as you want to "save appetites" for the Christmas feast, but an easily prepared and delicious dessert will drum up even a very plain meal.

Suppose you have a cold meat plate, some sliced beef or ham, or a hash of the last meat with potatoes, well browned and accompanied by creamed cabbage, stewed tomatoes, crisp celery and the pudding.

Following is the recipe for the pudding. Don't forget to file it for future use. You can, if you like, of course, save this pudding and serve it for the Christmas dinner. That is an idea, too.

CHOCOLATE FRUIT PUDDING —Two tablespoons gelatine, one cup cold water, one pint milk, one and one-half squares chocolate, one half teaspoon vanilla, one cup raisins, one-half cup currants, three egg whites, one cup sugar, three-fourths cup dates, one-half cup nuts, salt. Soak gelatine in cold water about five minutes. Put milk with fruit in saucepan. When hot add chocolate which has been melted with part of the sugar and a little of the milk added to make a smooth paste. Add vanilla and nut meats. Fold in beaten whites of eggs. Turn into a mould previously lined with nut meats and raisins. Chill in refrigerator food compartment. Unmould and garnish with whipped cream or a currant jelly sauce.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Divinity Roll

One and one-fourth cups sugar, two tablespoons white corn syrup, three-eighths cup water, one-half cup raisins (chopped), one cup nuts (chopped), one-half cup marshmallows (broken), four tablespoons orange juice, one egg white (beaten). Place sugar, syrup, and water in saucepan over flame and boil together to the firm ball stage or to 250 degrees F. If a candy thermometer is used. Meanwhile combine the raisins, dates and nut meats and moisten with the orange juice, blending well. Also beat the egg white until it stands in peaks. Then when the syrup has reached the desired temperature, pour it slowly over the beaten egg, beating constantly. Continue beating until the mixture is thick, and then spread it out on a sheet of heavy oiled paper. Spread the date mixture evenly over this divinity blanket and then roll up like a jelly roll.

Store in air-conditioned ice refrigerator where a constant circulation of pure, clean-washed air will prevent mingling of food flavors and where the confection will remain in its just right state of moistness. If desired this candy may be made a week before you plan to pack it in boxes. Thus stored in the refrigerator, it will remain just as "alienable" as it was several hours after cooking. Makes two dozen large pieces.

Raisin Peanut Clusters

(An uncooked confection)

One-half pound sweet chocolate, one cup peanut butter, one two and one-half cups seedless raisins, one-fourth teaspoon salt. Break chocolate into pieces and place in top part of double boiler. Allow water in lower part to boil, but not boil, remove from fire, add top part, cover and allow to stand five to ten minutes. Stir occasionally to melt and blend it. Remove from water, add salt, raisins and peanuts mixed thoroughly. Drop by small teaspoonfuls onto waxed paper to harden. This amount makes 50 small clusters.—This may be shaped in paper cups instead of dropping.

HONEY IS OLDEST OF COSMETICS, MAKES EXCELLENT FACE MASK

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty"

HONEY, I BELIEVE is one of the oldest beautifiers known. Famous beauties of the past used it often.

Honey really is highly beneficial and refining in its effects on the skin, but generally, I think that its properties are greatly enhanced when it is used as a face mask. Mixed carefully with the proper ingredients, honey forms a truly excellent face mask. It has a tendency to draw dirt particles to the skin surface, and bleaches and clears the skin, giving it a soft, satin-like finish.

Before the honey pack is applied to the face, a mask should be made from a cupful of boiling broth of fine gauze. Holes should be cut in the cheesecloth or gauze for the eyes and nostrils, and the paste itself should then be carefully applied.

To prepare the paste for this mask, enough strained honey should be mixed with half a cup of almond meal to make a thick, creamy consistency. A drop of witch hazel or rosewater should then be added, and the entire mixture blended until it is of a consistency that will spread easily and smoothly over the skin. If the paste seems too thick at first you can thin it out by using a bit more of the witch hazel or rosewater.

Previous to the application of the mask of course, the skin should be thoroughly cleansed. It is an excellent plan to use a good cold cream for this purpose, for it will soften the skin, open the pores and remove any of the extraneous matter.

The cream should then be wiped away with cleansing tissue, and a scrubbing with a pure, bland soap and tepid water administered. And as the final step, before the application of the mask, a bit of tissue cream should be massaged about the eyes and mouth.

When the skin has been correctly prepared, the application of breaking yourself of this habit.

Nan Wynn,
Radio star has pretty skin

the pack itself should be made. The cheesecloth mask should be placed over the face, and a generous quantity of the honey and almond paste should be spread over it.

Ingredients keep The Church Circle Cook Book within ordinary means, the paste employed is applied directly to the skin. But in the honey pack the proper ingredients seep through the cheesecloth mask in just the right quantities to benefit the skin.

In order to get the best results, this pack should be permitted to remain on the face for at least half an hour. And, if possible, you should lie down and relax completely during the period.

After half an hour the pack may be removed simply by lifting off the cheesecloth mask. This is the added advantage of placing the cheesecloth mask next the actual pack, as it facilitates removing. Then any traces of the paste remaining in the cheesecloth or gauze should be removed with a soft cloth and lukewarm water.

The final step in this beauty treatment should be the application of a good astringent, to close the pores and tone up the skin. This pack will not only have a soothing and refining effect on the skin, but will also help to bleach it, and leave it smooth and fine-textured.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Has Asked Her Husband to Move

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a bride of eight weeks and so unhappy! I live with my mother-in-law, and she makes me very miserable. She seems to be trying to break up my husband and me.

I've asked my husband to move and go to a home of our own, which he would afford to do, as he is making forty dollars a week and I am working part time, too. But he does not want to leave his family.

I'm willing to give them something every week, but he says his folks come first. Do you think they should? His mother and I are not speaking, and I seem to be going crazy worrying what to do next. I love my husband and know he loves me, but his mother seems determined to break us up.

Anita.

To stop speaking to any member of one's household is a grave mistake. Trying to do the situation in fact would go a long way toward straightening it out.

But husband evidently disregards the Biblical injunction that a man should leave father and mother and cleave only to his wife. If you are courteous and tactful to your husband's family, you will be able to bring them around to your way of seeing things more quickly than if you maintain the "armed camp" attitude.

She Doubts the Existence of Love

Dear Miss Fairfax:

As you would rather not, don't print your answer to my letter, but please do just tell me privately: Is there such a thing as love?

You see I can't help suspecting it's a thing that people do a lot of talking about but don't really believe in. Isn't that true?

The reason I'm asking you is that I have promised to marry a man much older than myself, who adores me and can do everything for me. He knows I don't love him. But I certainly don't love any of the boys I know, either, though a lot of them have tried to make me. I am 18, and it seems as if I ought to know by this time if there is such a thing as love.

Of course, I am fond of my fiance. He surely could help liking him. But I thought perhaps I'd better ask you that question about love before I went any farther with my sake, as well as mine.

Puzzled Georgia.

You are none too sure of yourself in your skepticism, my dear child, as any one could see. But I like your honest and straightforwardness. My answer to you is that love does really exist—and that it's perhaps the most important of all things.

There's nothing strange, at your age, in your not having fallen in love. You haven't met the "right" man, or your emotional development is a little slow. Or perhaps your nature may be somewhat cold.

But if you like and admire your fiance, and if he understands the whole situation, I don't see why you shouldn't marry him. There is little doubt but that you will love him afterward. Many of our happiest and most lasting marriages have begun as yours will begin. And one of these days you will wonder very much how you could ever asked them the question that is now puzzling you.

She Is a Spoiled Young Lady

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going "steady" with a young lady for over a year. I am 27 and she is two years younger. She was very delicately reared in childhood, and required such tender care that she had to be humored quite a bit, and therefore is now spoiled. She outgrew her illness, but not the petting and having her own way. Among friends, she sulks and pouts if she does not have every thing ordered to her liking, or broke up.

After a brief courtship she married another fellow, who turned out to be a fortune hunter. She divorced him, and now wants me back. I still love her, but I'm afraid to start all over again. My friends tell me she has changed, but do you think a girl can remember a thing like that? I'm puzzled in my own, and am willing to you for impartial advice. Can you help?

Jim.

This young lady doesn't sound "a good girl" to me, and I think you are doubtful yourself. Even though a happy marriage may have had a chastening effect, there is always the chance she would begin to sulk or unhappy marriage may have had her. And a sulky, pouting woman is a terrible liability.

You're only 27, why not wait for developments? You may find the right one at this very time may prove she's really reformed.

SCROOGE AND THE GHOST ADVANCED TOWARD ONE OF THE HUTS AND PASSED THROUGH ITS WALL OF MUD AND STONE. DARKNESS, CREEPIFUL AND GLOOMY, WAS GATHERED ROUND A GLOWING FIRE, SINGING A CHRISTMAS SONG.

THE SPIRIT DID NOT TARRY HERE, BUT BADE SCROOGE HOLD HIS ROBE AND SPED WITH HIM THROUGH THE AIR OUT OVER THE THUNDERING SEA.

UPON A DISMAL REEF OF ROCKS, ABOUT A LEAGUE FROM SHORE, THERE STOOD A SOLITARY LIGHTHOUSE SHEDDING ITS LIGHT OVER THE TURBULENT WATERS.

Christmas Problems In Family

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

A GREAT DEAL of excitement in homes today, especially among children. The average child, unfortunately, has his attention centered on what he will receive rather than on what he will give. Mere exchange of gifts may be highly selfish. Perhaps Christmas will make him lose more than he will gain of the ideals coming out of Bethlehem. No doubt we all would get more spiritual values if we presented gifts only to those from whom we could expect none. Certainly we would find to have our children offer one such gift.

Observing these problems in our own and our children this year, we might consider ways of doing something about the matter next Christmas.

My childhood training did not include going to church on Christmas morning, and the experiences of my children did not—creatures of habit and family custom. But I do not doubt that my children and their parents would derive rich moral and spiritual values from getting up early on Christmas morning and going to church, as my Catholic neighbors do. Of course, they should remember, as they contemplate the degree of our delinquency, that they have practiced this virtue of theirs for generations and, therefore, can do it with more ease. I really do believe their practice is this respect is worthy of the emulation of more of us Protestants. And we might, certainly, at first, get more out of it than they do, on the assumption that the harder a thing is to do, the more spiritual value you will get from doing it. Perhaps some of my readers will disagree with that last sentence. Their privilege, of course.

When You Travel

Some families with young children have traveled far to spend Christmorrow with relatives. With so many crowded in one house, the tensions tend to heighten, with the brunt of the burden on the mother of the young children, and on the hostess. Older children have come home, too. We hope they pitch in and help.

Dad, do you your share tomorrow. Look after the young children and try to keep their fairly serene under all the strain of excitement. Children old enough to help should be assigned to do so, especially to wash the dishes—and the boys as well as the girls. They might find this task easier if dad would join in the enterprise.

In spite of anything I might say, most children are fretting all too much about tomorrow. The day for the mother and all the family would be far happier if she only planned a simple meal. Nevertheless, she will derive a deal of satisfact

Living Without A Woman

By VIRGINIA LEE

I'VE BEEN holding back on my reader. Some time ago a book was given me entitled, "How to Live Without a Woman". It was written, ostensibly by Alexander Wright. I am informed, however, that there is some controversy as to whether the book was written by a man or a woman, some inclining to the belief that a well-known woman wrote it.

I am quite sure a man did, because while it is quite an entertaining book, it is not, like Marjorie Hillis' two, "Live Alone and Like It", and "Orchids on Your Budget", so enjoyable.

As a matter of fact, neither "Live Alone and Like It" or "How to Live Without a Woman" tell us how to live alone and like it, or how any man lives without a woman. To learn the latter you would have to interview a hermit who lives by himself in a jungle or mountain cave—and not one who lives in an ordinary environment because the latter doesn't live without a woman, by any means. So has women friends who allow him to entertain them, or who entertain him; and who, if the man is that sort and knows his woman, clean up his apartment, cook his meals, help with his shopping, etc. In fact, he enjoys their company and their help in every way except by supporting them—or helping to support them.

Well, as the author says, "more and more men are marrying less and less . . . that an increasing number of males are investigating the single life with increasing satisfaction is not to be denied, look around you. Ask your local real-estate agents. Ask your lady friends. But you can take my word for it, because I've done all that.'

"The main objection to marriage and the family life," continues Mr. Wright, "is that they greatly limit what the male refers to as his freedom. This often is more fancied than real; but the almost-cherished male rules his freedom any less for being fancied."

So does the necessity for earning one's own living and the having to sleep at least an hour or two in the 24, and having to eat and wear clothes limit one's freedom—definitely and really. But we can't seem to get along without them, nevertheless. And if men want their freedom (what is freedom, anyway?) for me, certainly I would not want to marry one of them that felt that way—and I'm

Blisters Give Way To Vaccine

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A YOUNG DOCTOR I know, one of our western cities was bothered with recurrent crops of fever blisters. A few years ago he had charge of a smallpox epidemic in his community, which lasted about six months. He was vaccinated three times during his work, and when the epidemic was over he noticed that he had not had any recurrences of his fever blisters. He looked the matter up and found that smallpox vaccine had been used to prevent recurrence of fever blisters quite extensively in Europe. One or two features of his experience should be noted.

The reason he vaccinated himself so often during the epidemic was that none of his vaccinations resulted in a "take" because he had been successfully vaccinated when he was a baby. It is not necessary to have a take in order to make the treatment successful.

Fever blisters on the lips and chin are known as "herpes simplex". There is another form of herpes, which is known as "herpes zoster", which is commonly called "shingles". They are both characterized by extremely painful blisters forming on the skin. The pain is out of proportion to the size of the sores, possibly because they involve nerve filaments.

There are some curious relationships between these two forms of herpes, and the two vesicular eruptive diseases chickenpox and smallpox. Shingles, or herpes zoster, occurs almost entirely in adults, and it has been noticed that when an adult in a household has an attack of shingles, it frequently happens that one or two children there are likely to come down with chickenpox. Conversely, in a household where children have chickenpox, an adult member is likely to come down with shingles. This happens too often for it to be merely coincidence.

Two Diseases Differ

There is, however, a considerable difference between herpes simplex and her, es zoster. In the first place, fever blisters (herpes simplex) are likely to recur over and over again with barely a week between attacks. Shingles, on the contrary, confers a lifelong immunity with one attack. It never occurs back.

All of these conditions are classified as virus diseases. Fever blisters are spread by carriers, and it is estimated that between 50 and 75 per cent of all human beings are carriers. This accounts for the fact that the condition is so common.

In a series of 35 cases which were treated by smallpox vaccination, only five of them had recurrences, and those at such long periods of time as a year in between. In 30 of the cases the condition cleared up and no recurrence has occurred for over two years. These were individuals who were constantly bothered with recurrent attacks from three to four weeks apart.

At any rate, the smallpox vaccination will not do any harm, and in it we have a possible remedy for this unimportant but very annoying condition.

Lace Trims Fluffy Undies

Intimate Apparel Influenced b y Romantic Trend

By LISBETH

THE LATEST in lingerie may be mass-indulged or the fluffiest, flimsiest of garments imaginable. This applies to the most intimate of garments and also to the pajamas, night gowns and house coats.

The heavier satin and crepe undies may be perfectly plain, with nary a bit of trimming. They will be exquisitely made, however, often hand-made.

But lace, net and embroidery, maybe ribbons, trim most of the lingerie of the day, for the trend is toward femininity in the mode.

The "teddy" shown above is made of fine, champagne colored crepe and net back. It is a beautiful thing. It is designed to be worn under sheers or suits and tailored dresses, so that she need not have the additional bulkiness of a slip. The all-lace negligee is shown with this under-garment, and it has a two-toned sash.

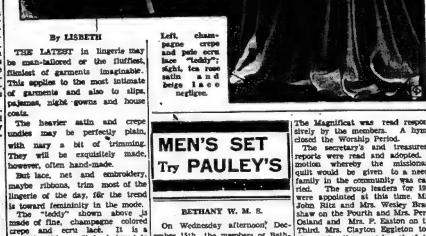
Another new chemise, not shown here, has a tapering lace top, tucked front panel which has a sunburst effect, tied waistline and lace trimmed hemline.

Tearose Favorite Hue

Tearose seems to be the continued favorite in colors liked for lingerie, with white a second. Blue is high style—preferred by discriminating women, and ecru, navy and black are also liked by some.

Negligees are so beautiful this year that they quite take one's breath away. The one pictured here is a true pre-Victorian negligee in tearose satin, with the bodice laced over the front, and full, ruffly sleeves of four flounces of beige lace, which, in the upper most ruffle forms a flattering collar line.

Patterned satin is a favorite in house coats. An orchid design on satin and a calla lily pattern are both used by one firm, which finds house coats are better liked than pajamas, and that the colorful colors in house coats are Siesta rose, wine, Royal blue, navy and copenhagen blue, with printed satin with black background.



Taffeta slips for evening have ruffled hems—lovely for dancing.

Hand-made, imported lingerie—nightgowns, panties, chemises, etc., are, of course, the ambition of every woman. Materials for these garments are very soft, and trimmings are exquisite, every stitch made by hand.

Even the wee ladies like pretty night clothes and undies. There are pretty flower prints made into pajamas, or demure little nightgowns to make the small golden-haired girl look like a Dresden doll.

Poems That Live

NUBIA

A land of dreams and sleep—a popied land!
With skies of endless calm above her head,
The drowsy warmth of summer noonday shed
Upon her hills, and silence stern and grand
Throughout her Desert's temple-bearying sand.
Before her threshold, in their ancient place,
With closed lips, and fixed, masseile face,
Noteless of Time, her dumb colossi stand.
Oh, pass them—not with light, irreverent tread;
Respect the dream that builds her fallen throne,
And soothes her to oblivion of her woes.
Hush! for she does not sleep; she is not dead:
Action and Toil have made the world their own
But she hath built an altar to Repose.

WE SUGGEST— FOR HER

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

ACCESSORIZER for the evening are much appreciated gifts, if you're in need of a suggestion for the last minute.

A handsome bag of antique brocade is pictured here. It is in an unique pouch shape with straps of the brocade for handles, which makes it easy to carry over the arm.

With this bag are three other suggestions. Pastel tinted suede gloves for one—an ever welcome present. White or black gloves in evening length would also be appreciated.

Chiffon handkerchiefs—and get the golden right out of your hand, if you please, that handkerchiefs are very uninteresting gifts. Any visit to the handkerchief counter of a shop will convince you otherwise.

A non-tarnishable silver bracelet is also shown. It has removable clips set with simulated stones —which make it doubly useful.

Finally, an alluring bottle of perfume. These articles make a delightful ensemble, or may be given separately.

Antique brocade bag; suede gloves, chiffon handkerchiefs, perfume and bracelet.

Hastings County Rural League Begins Season's Activities

DON LEE STARS

Scores Two Goals For Team in 4-1 Win Over Combines

Stirling, Dec. 21—(Special)—Hastings County rural hockey league began its season's activities in the Stirling Arena on Tuesday night. Misunderstandings regarding the game resulted in a small crowd of fans, poor ice and lack of condition of the players was the reason for the lack of speed. Brilliant plays budded forth however in both games as the players began to hit their stride. In the first game Corbyville defeated the Combines by a score of 4-1 in a game that sparkling with action at various points but the players of both teams lacking condition tired quickly and the speed slowed down. The Thompson brothers former star forwards of the West Huntingdon team showed well for the Combines and made several brilliant rushes but lacked in team work manship, when the opportunities arose to score. Goalie Gray playing goal turned in a fine game with the mask, that kept him being all-effective.

Walt scored the only tally for the home side though on many occasions outshining the flashy combination of Rowley, Lee, and Sunderland, seemed to lack effectiveness around the nets and muffed several fine chances. The goal for Corbyville played a stellar game netting two of the four counters tallied for his team. Johnny Rowley Timmy Sunderland accounted for the other two. Sinfield played up to last year's form in the Corbyville nets with Bleeckman and Gray teaming up for what will eventually be a strong defence. Thompson brothers and Simpson and Walt were the standouts for the Combines with the latter netting their only counter Sunderland drew first blood of the season, when he rapped home a pass from Gray in the first period. Don Lee led the scoring with his two counters.

The line-ups.

Corbyville—Sinfield, goal; Gray and Bleeckman, centre; Don Lee, wings; Rowley and Gray, subs Sunderland and Gray.

Combines—Gray goal, defence Walt and Simpson, centre Gray wings Thompson and Thompson.

Second Game

In the second fixture Zion's fell before the fast skating Riverside Glen Ross team who trounced them 8-6. The return of Homer Townsend to the line-up of the latter served only to encourage the spirit of his team-mates and they will in the future be right in there. This team is with the exception of Red Townsend all homegrown and the kids are young with plenty of hopes. Glen Ross on the other hand trotted out the usual strong team of fast skating hard checking boys, who are in the pink of condition and they were five goals superior to their less experienced opponents. So opened the Centre Hastings Rural Hockey League and from the first display it is evident, that local fans are in for some rare treats, when the boys really settle down. Rodgers, Fraser and McDonnell looked well for the boys in red as did Miller and Brown for the blue who exceptionally good, gaining a shut-out for his opener in his first game in Canada, marking the best for the first time in three or four years, this boy looked like a real find.

Glen Ross—Donald, goal; defence Brown and Armstrong; wings Delnard and Rodgers, centre Fraser, subs, Hamilton, Miller and Brock.

Zions—Carter goal, Cranston and Dickey defence, Brough Tummon wings, Townsend centre, McAvoy Faulkner, Day subs.

An added feature to the games this year will be the use of a public address system installed and operated by Messrs Cobb Fox and Jack Ormiston. In the absence of President Joseph Wilson the official opening ceremony was conducted by Arthur Duncan Secretary of the league. The last scheduled game of this series will be held on Tuesday night December 28th, when all teams will again participate in a double header. At a meeting of the Executive Committee which followed the game Mr. Fox was elected President of the organization and James Mitchell, Treasurer.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

—By—

Ken J. Calling

The new 1938 O.H.A. rule books have been distributed and we are in receipt of one, sent to us by Ernie Whelphon, who is at present enjoying an extensive holiday in Hamilton. A few changes have been introduced to the winter pastime rules this year. For instance a red line shall be clearly marked across the width of the rink, 30 feet from each goal line. A player being awarded a penalty shot may skate, while in possession of the puck, any distance up to the 30 foot line before shooting, but he must deliver the puck before reaching that 30 foot mark. This eliminates the old penalty shot circle business. Goal keepers are not permitted to "hold" the puck this year, nor may it forward to a team mate. If, however, the goalkeeper bats the puck forward to an opposing player the referee shall allow the low resulting play to continue and a goal scored as the result would count without a penalty being inflicted upon the goalie for his infractions.

Diphtheria .....?

A new anti-defence rule was adopted also. No player on a defending team, equal or superior in numerical strength to the opposition, shall deliberately shoot the puck across two blue lines while defending, although a team with inferior numbers may do so. The intention of this rule is to take away the chance of a defending team would otherwise grab a loose puck and shoot it "deliberately shot" by the defending team equal or more in strength, however. No violation is made when the defending team is lower numerical strength of their opponents, however. Hence stricter penalties are being laid down for the referees to inflict regarding fighting on the ice this year also. Not more than two players, aside from the goalie, may stand stationary inside their own defence area before an attacking team carries the puck into the defensive area of the play, another rule to try and eliminate too much defensive play.

Under the 1938 C.A.H.A. rules the penalty for deliberately throwing a stick in the defensive zone by any player of the defending side, including the goalkeeper, results in the award of a goal to the attacking side automatically. Hitherto the spearing there are not too many other changes of importance, although the O.H.A. stressed the matter of adequate provisions for referees and visiting clubs by the home club and arena.

Efforts to keep the game in motion at all times were brought to the attention of the clubs. There shall be no ragging of the puck, which shall be kept in motion at all times. A defending team may only circle behind its own goal once unless prevented by opposing players. Once the puck is advanced to the centre ice zone, it cannot be passed back into the defending zone of the side advancing the puck in the first instance. The O.H.A. stressed the advisability of all players, coaches, managers and officials knowing the playing rules and abiding by the same.

It would seem things are not so rosy on the inner side of the K.C.A.F. squad these days. Stan Partridge, who was a tower of strength on the Flyers' defence last season, recently decided to retire from active service, despite the fact he played in the first two games in the Ten Horse series. George Elliot, of the K.C.A.F. and former Wheatley defenceman, is trying out with the Bedmen and we understand another of the Abrams desires to join up with the local senior team. Then Hanover has stories emanating from around the Trenton Airport that unless a player possesses an Ottawa complex and Prince Rupert address, there is little to look forward to regarding a hockey future. The signing of Partridge was noticeable when the Flyers fell before Perth recently and four goals were scored, three in rapid succession. Who was it once said—"money fits the head that wears a crown"?

Even the hometown fans voiced severe criticism when two local boxers received the short end of decisions at Trenton on Monday night. Johnny Bonner lost in accord with the decision of the hometown lad. Aurie Hunter over "Shorty" Fisher of Belleville, no more than they were when Shorty of the Airport, was given the nod over Mark Storms, the local lightweight. Storms' office here's been handed the raspberry at the hands of Trenton fans. Shorty Silins, who bound around these parts for years, stayed a comeback to win over the veteran John Anderson, while Ross McKenzie was more fortunate and gained a T.K.O. over his Trenton opponent. The Belleville boxers are supplying the majority of the material for the Trenton shows and the scene is being received well in Trenton. Too bad we can't say the same for this city.

About 30 serious-minded "ten agers" have answered the initial notice O.H.A. call last night and appeared at the arena ready to do or die in an attempt to garner a berth with the 1938 edition of the Belleville Juniors. Such a non-descript outfit is seldom seen, but the boys were serious and entered the fray with zeal. Some likely looking juniors hopped over the fence and went at it shiny style for a full hour. A couple of last year's juniors are still eligible, but for the greater part this year's squad will be composed of new-comers. To single out any particular players would be an injustice, as the kids did not have an opportunity to display their best talents, under the unwieldy conditions. For the greater part the kids knew how to skate and a large number were rather proficient at the art of stick-handling. Some adequate coaching is all that is needed from new on, however.

When the kids arrived at the arena a keen sheet of ice awaited them. The youngsters hooped over the boards and went at it hammer and tongs. No system of attack or defence was employed, the entire outfit of nearly 30 kids being tossed into the fray and it was a case of every boy for himself with sticks and pucks and it was only through good fortune that no person was hurt. Numerous bad shins resulted, however. Aside from getting in an early skating, little else was accomplished. The juniors will practice again on Thursday night and the Redmen Friday.

CHIPS from the SPORT BLOCK

By Geo. H. Carver

Every Saturday you will find her crouched before a radio speaker of the radio . . . Impatiently she awaits the voice of the announcer to bring to her the play-by-play comment of the National Hockey League game being played at Maple Leaf Gardens. . . . In her hand you will find the line-up of the participating squads. . . . Carelessly she will glance at the visiting team quickly but her eyes glue to the clipping that carries the name of the wearers of her favorite hockey team.

For years she has followed the fortunes and misfortunes of Conny Smythe's puck-chasing gladiators. . . . For years she has been absent from the arena in the vicinity of Hockey League and even today ask her where such and such a player is or reference to a player and she will tell you without batting an eye. . . . Harvey Jackson, "The Rubber", as he is known, is her favourite. When the pride of the Leafs cuts loose with a burst of speed and goes down the boards berating up the ice, her eyes glisten, her hands clench and unclench and she rises to her feet as he nears the goal.

A cheer will emanate from her lips if the Rubber finds one past right . . . . Likewise if any of his mates ditto. . . . A few years ago when that famous Boston-bred lad of the gold fans awake until the roosters crowed she never left her radio until Ken Doherty sank the doughnut to ring the knell of the Bruins

Foster Hewitt mentions her in his book "Down the Ice" . . . She prizes letters received from some of the members of the squad . . . She has pictures of them and hockey players of parts. . . . The nights on which Leafs appear in the city up until they return home to get a first hand version of the game.

She hasn't missed a hockey broadcast since their inception . . . Hockey to her what supper is to salt, the cost to the rest. Hutt is to Jeff and rent is to the landlord. Interest in other things is colder than last year's love affair, when Leafs are in the announcer trickles over the airwaves. . . .

This year she celebrated her thirty-second birthday. . . . In connection with which last night she said the "Leafs were the best team in the league, but I don't think they got a square deal the other night." "Being a lawyer, that fellow" (the referee) should have known better. But there is nothing we can say about, they'll come through.

Asked regarding her health she stated that she never felt better . . . "If those Leafs come through it will prolong my life another twenty years she smiled over the telephone. . . . Who is she? . . . She is Mrs. Sarah Clarke of Wellington. . . . And she has never seen a hockey game in her life. . . .

Chiplets. . . . Hockey squads opening the season in the Thorold Arena formed the letters "J. W." prior to the game, to the memory of Jimmy Lafferty's "Sudslingers" . . . Nothing has been heard of the Latimer Lulus as yet . . . . Blaine's gang hold high hopes of retaining the title they won a year ago, when the scorekeeper made two and two add up as six, moving the Bedmen out by the odd goal in eleven . . . The Capitols joined a horseshoe pitching loop last Spring but were thrown out when they got "high-hat" and turned out for practice dressed in riding breeches. . . . Wellington "push leaguers" swing into action next week. . . . Two sections again this year. . . . The Arena over in the lakside village turned in a handsome profit to the shareholders last season with the hockey games being the chief source of revenue . . . And at ten and fifteen cent admission at that.

Hockey's Big Seven

Paul Thompson lifted his total of points to 13 last night when he scored Chicago's goal in a 3-1 loss to Boston but that figure was still two less than the minimum required to make the National Hockey League's Big Seven. Gordon Drillon continues to lead the loop with 19 points while Cecil Dillon of Rangers has three less to lop the American division.

HAPPILY WED FOR 50 YEARS

Mr. And Mrs. A. Swayne, Coe Hill, Honored on Occasion

Surrounded by a large group of their immediate relatives and friends, Mr. and Mrs. Arland Swayne, Coe Hill, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding Monday Dec. 20. Mr. Swayne was born at Ormsby 73 years ago while Mrs. Swayne first saw the light of day at Glasgow, Scotland, just sixty-nine years ago.

At the anniversary dinner held in their honour, the table was decorated with a basket of fifty ammus in a silver flower basket, presented to Mr. and Mrs. Swayne by their grandchildren. In the centre of the table stood a large three-storey cake made by a daughter, Mrs. Fairhead, Kirkcaldy, who has been an invalid for over twenty years. Gold runners and golden candles added further beauty of decoration.

The members of the family who were present included 3 sons and 3 daughters and their families. They were: Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Swayne and two daughters of Thorndale, Ont. Fletcher is the eldest son; Mr. Ray Swayne, stenographer at Tweedsmuir; Mr. Norman Swayne, youngest son, who is inspector for the Standard Oil, Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. William Fairhead and son George of Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Bandy Martin of Belvedere and their son Kenneth and daughters Gladys and Dorothy; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Maguire and 3 daughters, Hazel and Margaret and son Kenneth; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hargreaves and their infant daughter Doreen, of Cobourg completed the family group. One son John Swayne of Iroquois Falls was unable to attend.

In the forenoon a presentation and address was made to Mr. and Mrs. Swayne by their sons and daughters, sons-in-law and daughters-in-law. The address was read by the eldest son Fletcher and the presentation of a purse of money by the youngest, son, Norman.

Following is the address:

Dear Father and Mother,—

We are glad to have the privilege of gathering with you on this your anniversary of 50 years of wedded life and we hope that you may be spared many years to give your counsel and advice.

In looking back over the years, many things stand out most vividly in our minds.

There have been many trials and tribulations, also many blessings and encouragements. And the outshining helped to overcome your trials and tribulations was the fact that from the earliest recollections of our memory the family altar was established in your home and these teachings have helped us all down through the years.

Yes, you have been a godly Father and Mother and as a small token of love from each of us we ask you to accept this purse of money and may you be with us many years to come.

Signed ..... sons-in-law, daughters, daughters-in-law.

The grand children also read an address and presented a beautiful cake of a silver basket of roses and 50 golden years in icing. It was read by Gladys Martin as follows:

Ormsby, Ont.

Dec. 20, 1937.

Dear Grandpa and Grandma,—

We, your grandchildren are with you today to help make the fiftieth anniversary of your marriage an enjoyable event. Although it may have been impossible for each to attend in person they are surely with you in thought. None be us are very old, but we realize it has taken toll of your patience many times in our thoughtlessness as children in days past.

We look forward to any holiday we may spend here with you as a good time, with plenty of sport for us. For we know you are still young in spirit and will always give us a welcome as you have done in the past. We ask you to accept these flowers and silver basket as a very small token of our love for you, and we hope that the future years will be as golden in memories as the past 50 years have been and ever as we older grow.

Let not our hearts more coldness know

But stirring instead, with might and main

Bright days to make for you again.

Signed by your grand children.

A dinner was served at noon to all the relatives. The waiters, Miss Theresa Park, Miss Joy Hackshaw and Miss Gladys Martin were dressed in a gold coloured uniform.

The wedding cake was first cut by Mrs. Arthur Swayne with a silver knife tied with gold ribbon. A very unique part of the events of the day was the christening of the only great grandchild, Doreen Hargreaves of Cobourg. Rev. R. L. Osborne of Napanee, a former pastor of the family conducted the christening in a simple but effective manner. During the afternoon and evening many friends and neighbors were entertained from Coe Hill and Ormsby. Many lovely and useful gifts with a touch of gold were evidence of love and esteem from friends and neighbors. A 5 lb. box of chocolates was sent by the staff of the Standard Oil in Detroit where Norman Swayne has been employed for some years. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Swayne are devout and faithful members of the United Church at Coe Hill. They support every good cause in the community and stand for that which is noblest. Mr. Swayne is president of the Red Cross at Coe Hill. He is also Secretary Treasurer of Ormsby school.

The community values and appreciates citizens of this type and the general wish and feeling is that they may be spared for many years of happiness and service in our midst.

Sunday evening previous, Mr. and Mrs. Swayne and their 5 children, 3 sons and 2 daughters with their families attended service in the United Church at Coe Hill. Rev. Mr. Gault paid fitting tribute to the loyal and faithful service of Mr. and Mrs. Swayne and congratulated them on their long, happy, useful life together. Voicing the feeling and sentiments of the congregation in wishing them many more years of happy, useful life all joined in singing, "Auld Lang Syne" and "Blest Be Our Hearts in Christian Love."

Your golden anniversary

Is rich in happy thought.

Rich with many blessings

Fifty years have brought

May all your sweetest memories

And their plurals always shed

Added joy and true contentment

To the happy years ahead."

CHRISTMAS DAY MENU AT COUNTY JAIL WILL BE MOST APPETISING

Gone will be the ordinary everyday fare of the institution when inmates of the County Jail sit down to their noonday meal on Christmas Day.

For on that festive occasion, inmates assembling in the dining room twenty-five will celebrate Yuletide with liberal portions of succulent roast ham, according to Governor O. H. French. "The boys will dine in style" the genial governor said this morning as he perused the Christmas menu drawn up by the fare for that day will be, besides the ham, dressing, cranberry sauce, apple sauce, turnips, cabbage salad, pickles, bread and butter, cheese, cake and tea. Topping off the meal will be a dessert of mince pie, oranges, blackinose apples, nuts and tea, after dinner divertisement will be cigars for all.

Police Blotter

The wet slippery condition of local streets was attributed to several minor accidents reported today. Generally speaking, however, the traffic situation was good and he matters were amicably settled between the parties concerned.

Skidding on an icy patch of the pavement on East Dundas Street early yesterday morning, a car driven by Murney Eaton, Belleville, collided with a truck driven by Arthur Brooker of this city. The speed of the truck was being estimated by Mr. Brooker as he approached another motor car in advance of him. The left front fender of Mr. Eaton's car was badly damaged. No personal injuries resulted.

Police arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours leaving the cell block at the police station empty for the first time in dozen transients, who sought shelter before last night.

Local and Provincial Police today were asked to keep a sharp look out for a 1937 model Buick sedan, reported stolen in Toronto yesterday. The vehicle was bearing Ontario licence plates number 88-13-56. In the motor car was the owner's licence card also, Mr. Frank West, 58 Glenwood Road, Toronto.

TRACKED IN SNOW TWO ARRESTED

Arthur Heagle and Charles Copeland Charged With Chicken Theft

Tracking their suspects for four miles in the freshly fallen snow, Provincial Police Arrested Arthur Heagle, Montreal, Charles Copeland, Trenton and his 15-year-old son in the latter's home on charges of chicken stealing late last night.

Heagle and the elder Copeland were taken into custody and lodged in the County jail on charges of stealing chickens, the property of Mr. R. Meyers, 2nd concession of Sidney. The teen-aged youth was permitted to return home, but will be summoned into court, the police stated today. Heagle is reported to have been visiting the Copeland's.

Having lost geese and other fowl from his premises of a late date, Mr. Meyers had been keeping a close vigil on his poultry of late and was rewarded for his efforts last night when he heard disturbances in his hen house. Armed with a shotgun Mr. Meyers stealthily approached the hen coop, but was observed. Three men dashed out of the building and ran westerly, Mr. Meyers firing a volley of shots in their general direction. The robbers had successfully made off with seven of Mr. Meyers' fattened Christmas chickens.

Provincial Police were immediately notified. Constables E. Smith and D. Carruthers hastened to the scene of the robbery. Clearly embedded in the fresh snow were foot prints of three persons. The officers, accompanied by Motorcycle Fairclean C. Whitely, Trenton, followed the footprints over the snow for a distance of four miles and directly to the home of Charles Copeland, later stated by the Ontario Intelligencer today. "At times we were knee deep in the snow, but the clues before us were clearly outlined," stated the officers today.

Police contended today that the loot of seven chickens reported stolen had been cached in a culvert by the robbers after Mr. Meyers had discharged his volley of shots in the general direction of the fleeing chicken thieves and before the arrival of the police.

"We only have 5 less geese, but other fowl have been stolen from my property and I was determined to give the robbers something to think about if I ever came in contact with them," Mr. Meyers informed the authorities regarding the discharging of the shotgun when he discovered the three men in his chicken coop last night.

Talented Artists Give Program for Crippled Children

One of the features of the Tuletide season will be a musical treat under the auspices of the Belleville Rotary Club on Tuesday, December 28, in the Collegiate auditorium. A vocal and instrumental program of seasonal and popular music will be presented by John Deacon, tenor, and Mary Cosnett Deacon, pianist, who have volunteered their services to the Rotary Club in order to raise needed funds for the Rotary Crippled Children's Fund. The officers and members of the Rotary Club are very grateful to these talented artists for their generous contribution to that philanthropy which is so dear to the heart of every Rotarian.

SLIGHT FALL OF RAIN MAKES STREETS DANGEROUS WALKS DANGEROUS

A slight drizzli g rain that ashered to the already slippery surface of the sidewalks during the night sent city and trucks and laborers to the rescue of Christmas motorists and pedestrians this morning.

Slipping and sliding on the slippery surface pedestrians at times were hard put to navigate along Front Street. On the sidewalks perilous experiences the same difficulty in making progress. Several tumbles took place as parsimonious shoppers attempted to walk along icy pavements. Motor cars slithered and whirled in the streets whenever until the arrival of the sand trucks and crews advised the drivers to degree of relief from the hazardous driving.

Towards midnight, the rain ceased but low temperatures gave pedestrians and motorists all assurance from the slippery hazardous of highways and remained so, much to those anended by city workmen.

A slight thaw this morning aided in clearing many streets and City workmen and trucks deposited loads of cinders on main thorough fares in an effort to alleviate slippery, treacherous conditions.

STEPHEN WOODS IS RE-ARRESTED

Charged With Assaulting Police Officer at Northbrook

As he stepped from the portals of the Hastings County jail presumably a free man after serving a month on a charge of theft, Stephen Woods, a native of Northbrook, was not only surprised but a disappointed young man, when he was placed under arrest on a charge of assaulting a police officer.

Woods was arrested by Provincial Police on a warrant issued by Chief J. C Hayes, Tweed, charging him with assaulting a police officer in the person of J. C. Hayes, while in the pursuit of his duties. The alleged crime was committed while Chief Hayes was placing making for a substantial increase Woods under arrest on the original charge of theft a month ago at his home, following the theft of a robe from a parked automobile in Tweed. Woods pleaded guilty to the theft charge and was sentenced to serve one month.

Woods was held in custody at the police station this morning and later escorted to Napanee where he was imprisoned in the Lennox County jail awaiting trial on the above assault charge. The alleged crime having been committed in that county.

Less Thieving Noted From Stores This Year

With the weather acting as a barometer, business conditions are well above those of a year ago, Front Street merchants stated this morning. Pre-Christmas volumes of business are increasing as the "big day" approaches, with last minute buying on the part of shoppers while Chief Hayes was placing making for a substantial increase over the same period of a year ago A noticable decrease in petty shoplifting has been noted this year, department store managers in Belleville, or not we are losing our detective instincts it is hard to say, but thus far we have had no trouble along these lines. A year ago there was a noticeable amount of "lifting" of small articles from our shelves and tables, but this has been conspicuous by its absence thus far. Of course Christmas is not here as yet, and we can only hope that this petty thieving although I doubt it very much, is over, stated.

FIRE DESTROYS BARN AS GAS CAN EXPLODES

A garage, implement shed, automobile, thirteen tons of hay, sixty bushels of y ain and other miscellaneous articles the property of Joel Goodmurphy, farmer residing near Wellington, were totally destroyed by fire early this week following an explosion of a can of gasoline.

Two sons of Goodmurphy were repairing the family car when the explosion that ignited the building and the clothing of one of the youths, occurred. The youth escaped with a light singeing.

A general alarm that brought neighbors flocking to the scene was responsible for the saving of a large barn situated only a few yards from the burning building.

Meaning himself, and Scratcher ran and jumper on him wagging his tale, and the colored man said, I'm his popps all rite, did you notice how he reckonize me rite off?

He jumps on everybody like that, I said, and the colored man said, Sure he do, you dont have to tell me that, sometimes we calls him Scratcher the Jumper, where's the dollar?

I'll get it for you, Pods said.

Belleville Boxers Defeated But Crowd Protests Awards

Fisher And Storms Win Favor by Game Contests

NINE GOOD BOUTS

Trenton, Dec. 22—(Special)—Two of the decisions handed down in the nine-bout boxing show under the sponsorship of the Trenton Sports Club in the Capitol Theatre here Monday night were badly booed by the crowd of four hundred or more fight fans who voiced their dissatisfaction when Referee Jack Plisser of Belleville and again when Referee Jack R. C. Clark was announced as the victor of Mark Storms of Trenton. Fryup Jack Fisher of Belleville did like Fisher out-pointed Bauder by a narrow margin. But Fisher's edge over Bauder was so slight that a draw decision could have been handed any clubber. And in the Storms—Storms affair, Storms won a lot of merriment but not first the fight to Storms and rightfully won.

Clean Cut Win

The main event in the evening saw Kenny Ellis known as "Dynamite" of the T.S.C., win a clean cut decision over Jack Lancaster of Point Anne. Ellis who packs a mean wallop in both paws had Lancaster practically slap happy on several occasions and mostly throughout, when he floored the Cement City puncher for the count of nine in the second round. Lancaster was slumbersand, when the bell ended the round. After the minute rest period, Marzalek looked a great deal better and weathered the rain of leather in the third round and almost rousel admirably. Both fighters showed signs of fatigue in the final gong sounded, although Ellis was in far better condition. The referee's decision at the night walks it saved was the Sam Ellis—Ainey Lancaster affair. Ellis won by a 160 pounder did everything but knockout. C. Ainey of the R. C. A. F. during their short engagement which ended in the opening round when Ellis in seconds threw in the towel. Ellis flailed Ainey unmercifully and opened a gash over his left eye, but the Airforce lad has gone in for boxing in a big place after 1 minute and a half of action, and came back jumping after each bombardment.

Boxer Not Pleased

Ainey wasn't a bit pleased with his handlers for stopping the bout, and appeared to be peaved bout the whole thing, when he walked off the stage. The triumph was the second for Ellis in as many starts; and his second short termed meeting also. Miss McKeown of Belleville gave Fritz McMurter of the T. S. C. a severe shellacking, so much so that he had the Trenton boy so bewildered, that he fell and injured his wrist and was unable to continue. The decision was awarded McKenna on a technicality. Joe-Joe Semaine of Belleville also won his second consecutive at the hands of Kid Lister of the T. S. C. in the many encounters and Rod White of the T. S. C. won by a technical knockout over George Clark of Belleville. John Bauder was returned to the flistic wars to after a lengthy layoff. Bauder is fighting under the colors of Graham's Garage Trenton, Anderson represented the T. S. C.—Complete results. Fritz McMurter, T.S.C. vs Ross McKenna of Belleville) 136 pounds, McKenna won on foul. Joe McMurter of Belleville K.O. Kid Lister of the T.S.C. vs Joe Joe Semaine of Belleville 118 pounds. Semaine knocked Lister out. Tony Brummet of the T.S.C. vs Bob Cooke of Belleville, 135 pounds. Brummet, won over Cooke by a technical K.O. BOSTON BRUINS DEFEAT HAWKS

Cooney Weiland and Charlie Sands Combined For Bruins' Goal

Boston, Dec. 22—(CP)—Boston Bruins ran their current National Hockey League win streak to four games last night by beating the third-place Chicago Black Hawks 2-1 to move out four points in front of their division.

Before 12,000 fans the speedy combinations of Cooney Weiland and Charlie Sands gave the Bruins their victory.

Sands scored the first tally late in the second period while the Bruins were playing short-handed. Weiland then passed to the Bruin ace near the Boston net by Wellman and paved the way for that scoress. The second counter came during the last three minutes of play, when the Hawks were pressing with fire forwards.

Sands made the jump on the occasion and, with Weiland on his left, beat the visitors to their nose. Then he passed to the Bruin centre, who fired past goalie Mike Karakas.

The Chicago goal came in nine minutes before the final belt. The Black Hawks, in a last desperate bid, sent Loup Trudel inside the Boston defence and while the rivals were scrimmaging, Paul Thompson, brother of the Chicago goalie slapped in a close-up shot.

EFFORTS MADE TO FORM SKI CLUB

Enthusiasts Will Hold Meeting at "Y" on Monday

Efforts to stimulate interest in the formation of a Belleville Ski Club will be made on Monday evening at the Y.M.C.A. when a public meeting for all interested in out-of-doors recreation of skiing are invited to attend the proposed preliminary meeting for the purpose of re-organizing the local ski enthusiasts. Mr. Fred H. Deacon of this city, has been in direct communication with the Ontario Ski Zone Association, the parent body which is paramountly interested in assisting in the instituting of ski clubs throughout the province. With the many surrounding natural facilities for skiing and other outdoor winter sports it is believed a flourishing ski club would be well received by local interested citizens. SILVER FOX OF HOCKEY CAN'T BE PERSUADED TO DISCARD CHARMS

New York, Dec. 22—(CP)—He's one of the smartest gents in the business, truly the silver fox of hockey, but you couldn't persuade Boss Lester Patrick to discard the little charms—not to mention the "hat trick"—he thinks help keep the New York Rangers riding high in the National League Parade.

Lester, who guided Rangers into ten playoffs in eleven campaigns, says he's not superstitious, but in a cellophane envelope he carries four, five, six and seven leaf clovers. The Boss' son Lynn tapes a four-leaf clover to the stick he wields so expertly for Rangers.

Just to make surewhile fates are with him, Lester carries an 1877 United States "Lucky" penny, sent by an anonymous fan several years ago with a note: "I've got all the good luck I want out of this life. I want you too to have good luck".

Paid to Make an Ostrich

"But wait till you hear the one I pulled on Red Dutton in Ottawa before our exhibition game with his Americans this season," the greyhaired mentor chuckled. "I threw my hat on his bed and Red got raring mad—I mean to him that was the worst of omens. If it was bad luck for Red I figured it must be good luck for me. Anyway we won the game."

Lester still figures Rangers would have won the Stanley Cup last season if his baggy suit had held out. The team won five straight games but hit the skids in the finals with Detroit the night the suit fell out of his pants.

Back in the early days of the Rangers, a black cat the players named "Ranger I" was their constant mascot and luck outlaw. She was found burned to death in the Madison Square Garden furnace and the Club went into the worst tailspin of the season until the last kitten from her last litter became Ranger II.

Cheers Easier to Keep

"She also disappeared mysteriously a few seasons ago, so I figured clover leafs would be easier to keep track of than cats," said Patrick.

Rangers' present goalie, Dave Kerr, and Winger Bryan Hextall both carry rabbits feet in line with their coach's fancies.

Nels Stewart declines to discard the heavy underwear issued him when he joined Amerks last December.

"You couldn't bribe Americans' netminder, Earl Robertson, to shave over a blueline. He skips them and it all started in Mart's play days in Regina when the kid say "skate on a crack and you break your mother's back" as they skip down the pavements.

Cheese Patrons Association Of Hastings Elect Officers

E. J. Fryar Again Heads Society For Ensuing Year

PROMINENT SPEAKERS

The annual meeting of the Hastings County Cheese Patrons' Association was held in the Stirling Community Building on Tuesday afternoon with a large number of members in attendance. During the business part of the meeting which included the secretary's report as presented by Mr. Burt Frinkle, Mr. E. J. Fryar, President of the association, occupied the chair. Mr. C. F. Linn, District Inspector conducted the election of officers, which resulted in the following gentlemen being selected to direct the activities of the organization for the coming year.

President: Mr. E. J. Fryar, Stirling.

Secretary-Treasurer: Mr. Burt Frinkle, Stirling.

Directors: Sidney Township, Mr. Glen Ketchabaw; Thurlow Township, Mr. F. Traverton; Tyendinaga Township, Mr. W. Irvine; Rawdon Township, W. Stiles; Hunting-don Township, Mr. Wallbridge; Madoc, Geo. Cooke; Elzaphirton Township, Mr. Belmont; Marmora, E. O'Connor; Madoc, Chas. Thompson; Elzaphir, Moore; Madoc, F. Mills.

Prominent Speakers Present

Mr. Fryar briefly thanked those present for again appointing him as their President and outlined some of the activities of the past year, also the Provincial Executive for the benefit of the farmer and dairyman.

Mr. H. L. Fair newly appointed representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture was then introduced to the gathering and in his brief remarks he made reference to the excellent work done by his predecessor Mr. Jos. Wilson. He emphasized the fact that his office was established for the purpose of giving service and he looked forward to meeting those assembled in an individual way.

Mr. C. F. Linn District Inspector, spoke of the increase of lower in grade cheese in the District and expressed the hope that more rigid inspection would be adopted next year. Unsanitary conditions such as the use of unfit cans, etc. were in his belief largely responsible for the fall in quality.

English Representative' Reviews Conditions on English Market

The next speaker was Mr. Thos. Graves, who recently returned from England where for the past eighteen months and having made a study of marketing conditions during that time it was his belief at the present time unwise for the industry to continue the maintenance of an English representative. Mr. Graves fully believed the very highest prices available for Canadian cheese were being reserved for all shipments at the present time. The method of marketing must be carried through the regular business channels he thought. These agencies who have been long established control the distiller wholesaler to a certain degree and with a wide range of choices are almost able to state their own terms.

Chief Dairy Inspector Barr

Mr. Barr Chief Dairy Inspector for the Province of Ontario was the next speaker and before entering upon his subject he passed out copies of the Department's report on the cheese industry during the past twelve months in which the Hastings District had dropped from first rating to seventh position: There are the figures what is the cause—? We must do something and do it now for the reputation of the industry in the district mentioned is at stake. Recommendation for the grading of milk has been favored upon by the patrons, I do not think it is wise or fair to ask the opinion of this group on the matter until they have had sufficient time to study it. For that reason I leave with you a copy of the recommendation which reads as follows:

Paying for Cheese Milk on a Graded Basis

All milk used in the manufacture of cheese shall be graded at the cheese factory where it is to be manufactured into cheese, and payment for the milk shall be based on such grades. For the purpose of determining standards for grades of milk for cheesemaking purposes at a factory the basis of grading shall be:

(a) Special Grade,
(b) First Grade,
(c) Off Grade.

Standards and premiums for different grades of milk:

(a) Special grade milk—This grade shall include any lot of milk which is clean in flavour, free from sediment and the acidity shall not exceed twenty one-hundredths of one per cent 20 percent when delivered at the factory, and shall be delivered in bright, clean, sanitary cans ,with close fitting covers.

(b) First grade milk—This grade shall include milk which is clean in flavour, a slight sediment, and shall not exceed twenty-two one hundredths of one per cent 22 per cent acidity when delivered at the factory, and when delivered in cans showing some slight rust.

(c) Off grade milk—This grade shall include milk which is not clean in flavour, shows distinct sediment, has over twenty-two one-hundredths of one per cent 22 per cent acidity, and is delivered in rusty, leaking, or unsanitary cans. Such milk shall be rejected at the weighing stand.

(d) A premium of one cent per pound butterfat shall be paid for the fat in special grade milk over fat in first grade milk.

The following is an example of paying the patrons on this basis for any payment period:

Fat in Special Grade Milk	600 lbs
Fat in First Grade Milk	1,200 lbs
Total Fat	1800 lbs

After deducting all charges for manufacturing, etc. there is a balance of $486. due the patrons.

To pay the amount to the patrons proceed as follows:

Premium for fat in special grade milk—

600—@4—	$476.

(amount due patrons for first grade fat) divided by 1800 represents 29.75 cents (price for all first grade fat).

29.75 cents plus 1 cent represents 30.75 cents (price for all special grade fat).

Proof of accuracy: 1200 lb 30.75c =$372.00 to pay for first grade fat. 600 lb 30.75—123.00 to pay for special grade fat. $495.00 total cost for all fat.

To pay the individual patrons multiply the fat delivered by each by the price per lb. fat in the grade their milk was placed in.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

OBSERVE 60TH ANNIVERSARY OF THEIR WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. John Houston, Shannonville, Are Honored

Shannonville—Mr. and Mrs. John Houston, aged residents of this village, quietly celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary at their home on Sunday.

When interviewed at their home on Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Houston were at their customary places near the large window in their home from which they have a splendid view of the village, with their customary hospitality they welcomed the Ontario Intelligencer representative and responded good-naturedly to the various questions that were broached. Both were in a reminiscent mood and confided many interesting things that occurred during fifty years on the farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Houston were born and raised on neighboring farms and "chummed together when we were young." The friendship that grew as they grew older and ripened in their maturity and they were married at the home of Mrs. Houston (who before her marriage was Sarah Ann Bell) by the late Rev. Mr. Turnbull, As they had no way to go on a honeymoon they returned to Mr. Houston's farm where they lived for fifty years, during which time six children were born although two died and the remaining four, all boys, when they grew older were given two alternatives, either stay on the farm or go to school, with the result that they decided to finish their education while one decided to remain on the farm. Two of the boys are now doctors: David at Seattle, Washington, John, at Vancouver, Clayton is a member of the Town-ip Police Force and Arthur is retired.

About nine years ago they decided to leave the farm and lead a quiet life at their beautiful home at Shannonville where Mr. Houston's flower garden is envied by all the residents. Mr. Houston is eighty five years of age and Mrs. Houston eighty and both appear to be in excellent health.

During their fifty years on the farm when they often worked about from dawn to dark at very hard work they never knew what sickness was, and both declared if they were young and starting life over again they would go back to the farm.

The third weekly party of the Tunkerphin Club was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Thompson on Monday night with the prize-winners being:

Ladies, first, Mrs. R. Toppings; Second, Mrs. Andrew Reid; Gentlemen, Mr. H. Toppings; Second, Mr. Leonard Thompson.

Due to the approach of Christmas and the many resulting festivities the club will not stage any more parties until the latter part of January.

Officers Elected

The L. O. L. of the Tyendinaga Reserve met at the Lodge room on Thursday night for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year with the following list of officers being elected:

Master, Mr. Simpson Brant; Deputy Master, Mr. Stewart Hill, Recording Secretary, Mr. Percy John, Finance Secretary, Mr. Sandy Brant Treasurer, Mr. John Marcle; Marshall, Mr. M. Brant, Lecturers, Mr. Nicholas Hill, Mr. Jake Sero; Committeemen, Mr. Martin Hill, Mr. Frank Maracle, Mr. Nelson Loft, Mr. L. Maracle, Mr. H. Sero.

Brother Francis John conducted the installation of officers.

At the conclusion of the meeting a very enjoyable oyster supper was served the members and their one guest Mr. William MacFarlane, Deputy Master of the Shannonville Lodge.

A very delightful Christmas concert staged by the Central Public School of the Tyendinaga Reserve under the supervision of Miss Lena Bell was held in the Council House on Monday night with a large crowd in attendance, the program consisting of dialogues, musical numbers, recitations and drills were all splendidly arranged. The musical part of the program held the rapt attention of the audience especially the singing of six-year-old Doris Badgley, whose rendition of "Santa Claus is Coming to Town" held the audience spell-bound. The school orchestra consisting of six boys and the teacher Miss Bell were forced to play four numbers before the audience was satisfied. The boys played on spoons, combs and whistles and any contrivance that they could find and the resulting music would cause the envy of a trained orchestra. The following took part in the program:

Noble Hill, Doris Badgley, Miss Bell, Mr. Bruce Hills of Belleville, Victor Brant, J. Hill, Freeman Sero, Lizzie Hill, Alwood Brant, Carl Maracle, Clifford Brant, Dorothy Hill, Velma Brant, Gertrude Bell.

At the conclusion of the program Santa and his reindeers arrived and the presents were distributed. The seats were then cleared away and dancing was enjoyed until the early hours of the morning.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Coles and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Fitzgerald were Friday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lewis.

Miss Elsa Bell was a week end guest of Mrs. Jack Kent.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Stewart and family were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Spencer.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Post of Deseronto were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lewis.

A large congregation attended the Christmas service held in the United Church on Sunday which was conducted by the Rev. W. D. Police Force and Arthur is re-

PAGEANT OF YULE IS HELD AT O. S. D.

Annual Christmas Program is Presented at School

ONTARIO SCHOOL FOR DEAF

Students and staff at the Ontario School for the Deaf paused in their busy preparation for the festive season yesterday afternoon to enjoy the Christmas pageant held in the auditorium.

Arranged under the direction of Miss Keeler and Mr. Alec Gordon, the pageant in a series of beautifully-lighted tableaux told the story of the Christmas and brought vividly to the minds of the children the true significance of the occasion. The pageant had not merely entertainment value, but it was one means of impressing on the boys and girls the events of the first Christmas. It is difficult to explain to those handicapped children by words, but their understanding story of the Nativity, when discussed by the teachers in their classes today will be more accurate after the pageant they followed with such keen interest yesterday.

Against a deep blue curtain, the various tableaux were arranged with artistic effect. The children taking part entered into the solemn spirit of the production and stood, reverentially and motionless, to form the beautiful scenes. A choir composed of women teachers provided musical accompaniment to the pageant with Christmas carols.

The first scene showed the angelic visitation to Mary. The curtain revealed the shepherds surprised by the appearance of the angels. This scene was very well done, the angels with trumpets and harps, white-robed showing in striking relief against the blue curtains.

The scene in the Court of Herod was also very beautiful, the rich robes of the attendants and the kings making a colorful picture. The picture at Bethlehem was splendidly portrayed, and as the Wisemen brought their gifts, the angels stood in rapt attention and the shepherds were grouped about Joseph, Mary and the infant. The cleverly designed star was most realistic.

Between scenes, the Bible passages related in the events of the advent of Jesus were read.

At the conclusion of the pageant Mr. W. J. Morrison addressed the gathering and the visitors learned something of the pre-Christmas program as the School for the Deaf. Christmas parties have been in progress in most of the room, a farewell event before the children going home make their departure. About one hundred and seventy-five leave this week for their vacation and over one hundred will remain at the school for Christmas.

Parcels Arrive

Mysterious parcels of all kinds have been arriving this week for these "story-schools" as parents and relatives remember them with huge packages. Of course, there are a number to whom Christmas would be a very sad day indeed, for their homes cannot afford to send them gifts. But through the generosity of citizens of Belleville who annually send donations to the Christmas Fund, through members of the staff and friends there is a happy Christmas day for everyone.

The children remaining at the school will have a Christmas tree on Saturday morning and will be entertained by motion pictures in the evening. Skating will be in full swing when the new rinks have been completed and a very jolly holiday is being planned for the children staying at the school.

Celebrating their complete occupation of Shanghai after weeks of bitter fighting, Japanese troops staged this victory parade through the streets of the International Settlement. High spot of the demonstration was the throwing of a bomb at the marching troops by a Chinese citizen who was shot dead by the soldiers. Several marchers were injured. Flushed with victory the Nipponese troops attempted to enter the American and British territories only to be firmly ejected.

C. R. Atlee, British Labor party leader, (with glasses) chats with Irish line soldiers of the Spanish government forces, defending the Madrid area, during his recent trip to Spain at the government's invitation Remarks which Mr. Atlee made on this visit were the subject of discussions in the House of Commons, but a possible censure vote upon Mr. Atlee was withdrawn.

With the rugby season definitely over in Canada, the next sport of wide interest to hit the sports page is basketball.

Here is one of the first action photos of a basketball game this season. Isadore Katz No. 6, of City college, has just thrown the ball for the basket, but the sphere totters on the edge for a moment and drops off. The action took place in a game with St. Joseph's college as the New York basketball season, which started recently, got its first big impetus at Madison Square Garden.

Hurricane House

By BRUCE HENRY

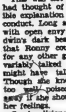
But gradually as she gained in strength, she became aware of an awakening interest in the life going on around her, and in those three kindly persons who had conquered this small, congenial household before she came. First, Dr. Lucille and Mrs. Macallister, who were almost constantly with her—but finally and inevitably she knew Jerry. Jerry Bonny. Then had begun that fight with herself which was to end in the sweetest defeat she would ever know.

As regularly as Bonny had reminded himself of his duty to Lucille, Sandra had said to herself, "I won't let Stephen down. I've kept him waiting so long, I won't let him down again!" Going through that heating struggle week after week, only to admit in the end that she had let Stephen down that night in Emily Stewart's garden and would never be able to make it up to him.

One thing had troubled her and it troubled her even now. This was Bonny's persistent refusal to acknowledge by word or vaguest gesture what she read in his eyes a hundred times a day—that he loved her as she loved him, whole-heartedly, hopelessly. Oh, she was so very sure of this, for now there was no more of that surface smoothness and inner confusion that had been her life before she came to Maple Village. She saw things clearly here. And what she saw in Bonny's eyes was what she felt, throbbingly, through her whole being when Bonny was near....

Bump, bump....!

Bonny Lucille hadn't come back yet. Perhaps they were out there together. Perhaps...?



This was not the first time she had thought of Lucille as a possible explanation of Bonny's altered conduct. Long ago she had looked with open envy upon Lucille Balentine dark beauty, and wondered that Bonny could have had eyes for any other girl. Hadn't Lucille herself talked of Bonny as she might have talked of a brother. Though she knew Lucille was far too well-poised to give herself away if she should wish to conceal her feelings.

Sandra listened intently, for the sounds of muffled voices—but she could hear nothing. Two steps she had heard, nothing more.

Suddenly she rose from the bed, went to the window and drew the shade down a bare inch. Bonny's shadowy figure was perched on the top step. He was alone. Quickly, Sandra moved on tiptoe.

If Bonny knew someone had come up behind him, he gave no sign. Little by little Sandra moved nearer until at last she leaned against the post, so close to him she could have reached his head by lifting her hand.

"Have a nice walk, Bonny...?"

Boris Karloff starred in "West of Shanghai" now playing the Capitol Theatre.

He was on his feet, frankly startled. "Joe—here—what's the idea? And the ripple of her laughter in his ears: "Thought you promised Lucille not to stay up long—thought you were cold?"

"I couldn't sleep," she said, laughter still in her voice.

"Why couldn't you sleep?"

"Oh—thinking about things."

"You're not supposed to do any thinking. Don't you know that?" Her face was a blur but memory supplied every detail that he adored. "Thinking about what?"

"Oh, one thing and another. About you, and you, and you and you...."

It was useless, that invitation. She knew that. But she did love him so.." And then she felt his hands on her arms, and she was cold again until a hot flame swept over her and took her breath away.

"You—you invalid!" Bonny said, and kissed her. Kissed her as he had kissed her in a Greenwich garden one cold December night.

"My sweet, sweet darling!..... I've wanted you so terribly this last week, Bonny. More than ever before and I think I've always wanted you until it hurt."

Bonny didn't say anything. Bonny couldn't say anything. He could only hold her close to him, a hand moving carelessly over the smoothness of her slim back, his lips seeking here, as if from a hunger that could never be satisfied.

Enclosed in their own sweet world, they had neither care nor eye for that lonely figure hurrying along the silent street.

INSTALMENT 24

Lucille was turning into the walk before the squeak of the gate told Bonny and Sandra she was near. Unhurried, they stood apart, the porch post between them. There was nothing furtive in the movement because, for very different reasons, they had no sense of guilt. Sandra thought, "Lucille will be pleased. She likes us both and she must have guessed it was coming before long." And Bonny, watching the slim figure wrapped in shadow coming toward the porch told himself, "May as well get it over with now as later."

Lucille peered up from the foot of the steps. "That you, Sandra? Why aren't you in bed?"

"This is a very special night, dear," Sandra told her, softly. "I knew you wouldn't mind—"

"But I do mind," Lucille's voice was pleasant but firmly reproachful. "There aren't any very special nights for you, Sandra. Not until you're completely well."

Bonny said, "One night can't make a great deal of difference, Lucille."

For perhaps ten seconds there was no movement, no sound. Then Lucille said, "I see. You're served it's a very special night. Well, of course—" She had already started toward the door, but Sandra was suddenly in front of her.

"You don't understand, Lucille, Bonny—" But Bonny seemed clumsy way to tell her, and she was trying to begin again when Lucille said, "I would like you to look your best when your mother and father come Sunday, Sandra. Go to bed now like a sweet child and stick to your schedule these last few days here. After that—well, I can only tell you what you ought to do."

Sandra's face turned toward Bonny, then: "All right, as you say, Lucille.... Good night, Bonny." She opened the door and went inside.

Lucille came back to the edge of the porch and stood looking down out at the street.

Bonny said at last, "I suppose you're holding me responsible for keeping her up. She went to her room under my full, but I—I just couldn't sleep and came out here and found her sitting on the steps. I was wondering why you hadn't come back."

Not turning her head Lucille said, "Do you remember Tom Burton, Bonny? He was in our class at high school, but he didn't finish."

"Yes.... I remember him quite well. He used to hang around you quite a lot—which wasn't exactly flattering because he was far from being a model young man."

She looked at him, then, and said, "Tom never had a chance, Bonny. I always felt terribly sorry for him and very grateful because I let myself in for something—something I've wanted to tell you since the day you drove me to Shellbank."

She went on talking, quietly, genuine compassion in her voice; and, listening, Bonny thought, "Tom Burton is holding her to her promise and she's trying to break it gently."

Tom Burton, Lucille said, had grown into being a tall man every one in Maple Village had known he would grow into—swept, profane, a heavy drinker, always in trouble. His mother had died when he was an infant and his only inheritance had been a dissolute father. Lucille was the only friend he had in town and it was a friendship he scrupulously valued.

"He was as docile and sweet-tempered as a little boy when he was with me, Bonny; and because I knew I could help him, I encouraged him to come to the house and I went out with him, often. You're no idea of the change that came over him. He quit drinking and tried very hard to get a job. But the town was down on him."

And then—she supposed she should have realized it sooner, she said—she found Tom Burton was in love with her. And Tom told her she planned to leave Maple Village make a fresh start—and he wanted her to marry him and go with her.

"I'd brought it on myself, of course. I wanted to help him. But I couldn't tell him that. It would have let him down terribly because you see Tom thought I was in love with him, too.

"I didn't love him," Lucille said, simply, and suddenly brought her head around. "I've never loved but one but you, Bonny. I think you know that." She waited for a moment, then: "And I'll say one thing. "I had always thought you would come back for me and we would be married, the way you used to say we would.... But I hadn't heard from you in years and years and—I think I wanted my own way. I wanted it terribly. I mean I wanted to feel that I'd done at least one decent service and that more I thought of what I'd would do to Tom if I told him the truth, the surer I was that I couldn't do it."

So after putting him off for months, she had told Tom Burton she would marry him. And then without a word Tom had vanished and for months and she had heard nothing from him.

Then you came home Bonny—and the evening before you were to leave Tom arrived.... I made up my mind the minute I saw him I'd tell him at once I couldn't marry him. But he didn't give me a chance. He was bubbling over with his good news. He had been working for a trucking concern in Boston. He hadn't taken a single drink the whole year. He had saved a little money. He knew of a cosy little apartment.... Her voice faded into silence. "What could I do, Bonny? I couldn't marry him and I didn't want to hurt him. I thought if I could get him to wait a few months he might find some girl in Boston he liked, something.." She spread her hands gently. "I don't know what I said, but he went away. I thought, hoped he knew that would be the end of it." She avoided his eyes. "When I went home tonight, he was sitting in his car in front of the house."

Peter Served as The Guide

By HELEN R. BARTON

McClure Newspaper Syndicate

WNU Service.

Peter hadn't really any intention whatever of serving as a guide at the Mountain house. He had, rather, visions of a quiet retreat where he could wander around in the solitude of forest, mountain, and streams with only his pipe and notebook for company!

Peter, you see, was a somewhat famous playwright, and, as is not unusual with highly successful playwrights, he had found it necessary to take a vacation, far from the mob, or else face a long siege at a sanitorium. A determined business-hunting society girl had driven Peter Brant to the wilds of Pitcher mountain in search of an intermissible vacation.

The first person he set eyes on, as he alighted from the fussy little train at Boundary View, was a gorgeous, vivacious brunette who had rushed frantically up to him and panted: "You must be the guide! Is this your luggage?" Just as he had been on the point of denying everything, he discovered that he was the only passenger and that unless he pretended to be a guiding spirit, this marvelous girl would be guideless!

So Peter meekly followed the girl to the waiting automobile and, after depositing his luggage in the rear seat, climbed in beside her. Throughout the ten-mile ride over rough country roads he kept stealing glances at the smooth, clean profile so close to him. And Peter, unlike the woman-hater, began to remodel his theories concerning girls.

When he discovered that Hilda Taylor owned and ran successfully the Mountain house, Peter couldn't have been pried loose from his job with TNT. Because the Mountain house was the sort of comfortable resort that just naturally attracted every sort of person as a magnet does steel, and Peter, whose imagination could picture things in every sort of light, was suddenly afraid that the wrong type of person would eventually come to the Mountain house. Peter did not plan on anything like that happening not while he was there, anyhow!

Then he arose early and guided gibbering girls and women by day, even until dark, over the devious mountain paths, pointing out the interesting views and answering patiently and with infinite courtesy the questions. 90 per cent foolish and 1 per cent idiotic.

He told himself, the first week, that he'd probably die of nervous exhaustion, but instead of a breakdown, he discovered new powers in his soft body; his muscles hardened and his pale face took on a dark tan, a sort of ruddy glow, and he discovered that he no longer needed the horn-rimmed glasses that made him look so much like a college professor.

Not every day did he manage to get a glimpse of Miss Taylor; she was a busy young person with all the marketing and buying and housekeeping on her mind, but once across the path, Peter was warmed for hours after she had gone by the memory of her warm, friendly smile and quick, generous speech. And gradually he began to look forward to these meetings and made numerous efforts to think up an excuse advance something to say to her that might keep her in conversation a while longer, but for the sheer joy of feasting his tired eyes on her fresh, unrouged beauty.

Then, the summer was suddenly gone and most of the Mountain house guests with it, and Peter found himself climbing up to his favorite haunt high above the popular resort. The snow mantle was moody eyes at the great golden disk of September moon as it rose over the mountain, and Peter was forced to the fact that he must go back to town again and leave all this beauty behind him; this peace, and the girl that he had secretly cared two pins about in all his busy, successful thirty-five years!

Peter sighed and turned his eyes from his favorite old briar and sighed a deep sigh. Lowering his head to his folded arms, he sat for long moments, until a soft hand falling carressingly upon his hair roused him with an electric shock. Then the voice of Hilda say softly: "Does it affect you like that, too, Peter?" And he would have sworn that she caught her breath softly over the last word.

"Yes, partly; that and something else!" he said gruffly, as she stood beside him looking out across the moon-drenched valley.

"Then, you mean that being a girl, Peter?" she asked softly, and he thought he must be crazy to fancy sadness in that voice!

"Yes, but she doesn't know I exist. I'm merely a servant!" he said harshly.

"Surely not me, Peter?" she faltered, tears dimming her lovely voice.

"Yes, you, Hilda. Oh, are you blind not to know that I'm worshiped you all these months?" he exclaimed, rising and drawing her into his arms so that her face nestled against the rough tweed of his old jacket.

"Not so hard, Peter," she softly answered, raising her face to his for his kiss, vowing that she must destroy that telegram from the guide's office above, showed up because the date, which corresponded with Peter's arrival might spell her ruination. It would never do for Peter to find that, after she had acted so well the little part she had made up when her swift keen eyes told her that here was Peter Brant, famous playwright!

NEW GOVERNMENT IS SET UP AT NANKING

Autonomous Commission Led by Obscure Chinese With 2 Vice - Chairmen

61-Year-Old Philanthropist Associated With Obscure Chinese

ATTACKS CHIANG RULE

Britain May Not Send Any Naval Reinforcements to Orient

Shanghai, Dec. 23—(AP)—Japanese officials today announced the formation of a new autonomous government at Nanking, pressumably replacing the Chinese regime of Premier Chiang Kai-Shek which fled from the capital a month ago.

The announcement said the new "autonomous commission" was headed by Tang Shao-Yi, whose descent, ascribed by his Japanese sponsors as a 61-year-old philanthropist, will lead the Chinese branch of the Red Swastika Society, a Chinese counterpart of the Red Cross—this Chinese-Japanese hostilities began.

Chinese Cabinet Is Cut.

The commission has two vice-chairmen and eight other members. The vice-chairmen are Wang Chen and Chow Ching Lang-Po, both Chinese.

Japanese said the commission at its organization meeting in Nanking passed a resolution abolishing the former Nanking government for the "leading the Chinese people into an intolerable state of misery and distress during the last decade by pursuing anti-Japanese and pro-communistic policies".

London, Dec. 23 (AP)—The cabinet was understood to have reached a decision against the dispatch of naval reinforcements to the Far East.

The cabinet was understood to have decided large fleet movement now might be considered by the Japanese as unduly provocative. It was believed it decided on a retrenchment policy at least until Japan replies to protests against attacks on British shipping on the Yangtze River. The reply is expected soon.

Board of Trade Report.

The Board of Trade was understood to have completed a report to the cabinet on the scope of British interests in China.

Informed sources said the report showed British trade with China amounted to $80,000,000 in the first nine months of this year. The British investment in the Far East, now including Manchoukuo and the Crown Colony of Hong Kong, was said to have been listed at $1,000,000,000.

Jail Intoxicated Drivers, Order is Given on the Eve Of Christmas Festivity

Toronto, Dec. 23—(CP)—Ontario mapped the most vigorous campaign in its history today to crack down on drunken automobile drivers during the Christmas and New Year holidays.

Faced with possible recurrence of the high death toll that took nine lives in 165 accidents within a 48 hour period last Christmas, the Provincial Government and police authorities planned every precaution to prevent such loss of human life.

Police said the majority of accidents last year were caused by speeding celebrants who crowded into their cars and moved senseless down or ploughed into other vehicles.

There will be no leaves for Provincial Police during the holidays. Leaves have been cancelled for the Toronto police force, and Chief Constable Draper, has issued an ultimatum that all inebriated drivers will be jailed.

Attorney-General Gordon Conant, in the forefront of the drive for public safety, declared: "The toll in most deplorable loss of lives, injuries, suffering and property damage resulting from accidents on the highways is a reflection and stigma on our modern civilization.

"The motor car has been developed to a high state of mechanical perfection and yet accidents continue to take their numbers. Obviously it must be the human element which fails. If each driver of a motor car can be made to realize that safety depends on his safety of himself. His passengers and others he may meet his individual responsibility and his share of the collective responsibility.

"The law prevails at the Christmas season in the same extent as at any other time. The slogan 'vigilance is the price of safety.' That vigilance must not be relaxed at any time or at any period."

FARMER INHERITS BARONETCY UPON COUSIN'S DEATH

Sir Arthur Stonhouse Expects to Remain in Alberta

HISTORY IN TITLE

Sir Arthur is Not Sure Whether He Will Use Title

Red Deer, Alta., Dec. 23—(CP)—Arthur A. Stonhouse, for the last 13 years a farmer in the Pine Lake district 20 miles northeast of here, is now Sir Arthur Stonhouse, Bart.

Notice of his succession to the title was received by Sir Arthur this week from the death of his cousin, Sir Ernest Stonhouse of Radley, Berkshire, England. Sir Arthur became the 17th holder of the hereditary baronetcy dates back to the time of Charles I.

"I do not expect to leave Alberta because of my new title and estate," said Sir Arthur. "Just what changes it will make in my life I cannot say as we have no details yet. But I do not anticipate that it will bring any change in the country where naturally we are now much at home."

Not Certain of Estate

Sir Arthur did not know if succession to the baronetcy included an estate or any other monetary benefits. He said he would keep the title for every day use in Alberta.

"Such things don't mean much here as they do in the Old Country," he said.

"But there is much history behind the title that I am rather proud of. It just the same and it may be that I shall take the name along with the history.

Historic Families

"Once away from the early days of the monarchy," Sir Arthur continued, "there was a dispute in the family, when the third Baron of Stonhouse attempted to exclude his eldest son from succession. There were many Baronetcies for a time, indeed, but the dispute was afterward settled and the Baronetcies were united, with only one live ever since. That was the 14th, in line from the time of the union and the 17th from

Parachute Swept Away Disappears in Water, Rescue Boat in Crash

Series of Dire Accidents Result of Search For Missing Jumper

WIFE, SON LOOK ON

Harold Cranker Lost While Making Contribution to Christmas Party

Boston, Dec. 23—(AP)— Army planes and police boats searched Boston harbor today for the body of United States Army Corporal Harold Kramer, 33, of Winthrop, Mass., whose parachute descended as a flying Santa Claus turned to tragedy last night over Logan International airport when a freshing wind blew him into the water.

Kramer, who flew 100 successful jumps within eight years, plunged to death while his young wife and their 18-month-old son looked on in the midst of a group of army wives and children whose Christmas party he was making his annual contribution.

Fog Resists Dragnet

Kramer hailed out over the airport administration building at 7,500 feet, from a plane piloted by Captain Richard Carroll and Carried aboard by the wind, Kramer disappeared into the fog-shrouded harbor. Only a few spectators realized he was in danger.

The Christmas party's changed to banquet when Cadet Frederick Freeland flare, first indication the jumper had landed not at the airport's edge beyond the floodlights, but in the water.

Two enlisted men commandeered a skiff at the water's edge, but in their feverish haste the craft capsized and they were almost drowned before a coast guard crew pulled them from the water.

Policemen Injured

Meanwhile, a police cruiser dashing across the airfield with flares and floodlights for the search collided with an army plane taxiing to a landing. The police car crashed through the car roof, gashing the face of Sergeant Michael Walsh, police radio expert, fracturing his jaw and knocked out three teeth.

Three army planes, a coast guard cutter and a police boat joined the search but when they reached the scene their flares showed only black water. Finally, at 2 a.m. Kramer's body was found.

Police said they learned Healy struck at Albert Broccoli, 29, at the height of a fray outside a cafe late night of the birth of a son to the comedian's wife. Broccoli told officers he pushed but did not strike Healy.

Police said that since the autopsy showed Healy's death was not caused by blows, they would drop their investigation.

Funeral services were to be held today at Culver City. His widow, the former Betty Hickman of Pasadena, is in a hospital. She gave birth to a son last Friday.

Laughed Off Remarks

"I was standing in the Trocadero (Hollywood cafe) Monday night when Healy entered," Broccoli said. "I knew he had become a father to a baby boy and so I asked him to have a drink. He seemed quite unsteady, turned to me and muttered: 'Who is this fellow?'

"I laughed that off and extended my congratulations. He staggered toward me and struck me on the nose. My head began to swell. The next thing I knew, he had hit me in the mouth and then kicked me in the groin. I fell to the chin, that almost floored me.

"I shoved him away, because I didn't want to hurt him, and attempted to block Healy in order to cool him. Later, the attendants came and took me to Healy's room and I went back and told me Healy was dead. My wife went in and we shook hands. He got into a taxicab and that's the last I saw of him."

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Cold waves! Why do we enjoy a mild weather in winter one week, and enjoy (or suffer from) a cold wave the next? It all depends upon where the air comes from. As a general or baroclinic depression approaches, we have southerly and soon southwest winds. If the centre of the depression passes directly over us the winds will then shift to the northwest and north. The south wind thus imparts a warm air mass, and the north a cold air mass. If the conditions are intense enough, the latter will result in a cold wave. The prevailing weather largely depends upon what kind of air mass has been transported to us as the air masses bring with them the characteristic humidity conditions of their sources.

Insurgent Survivors Make Last Stand in Teruel Towers

Seminary Barricaded in Resistance to Victorious Loyalists

RESISTANCE HEROIC

Hendaye, France—Spanish Frontier, Dec. 23—(AP)—Survivors of Teruel's heroic Insurgent garrison defied conquering government troops today from a barricaded seminary overlooking the ancient Aragon city.

The defenders mounted machine-guns in the huge structure's twin towers. Government forces rolled field guns into the city and shelled the citadel, which Insurgents said might become another Alcazar.

The government's newly-organized fast tank corps, which had played a major role in the Teruel offensive, joined in the assault.

"The Teruel garrison is retaining heroically," said an insurgent communique broadcast in Salamanca. Insurgents announced that relief columns numbering 10,000 men behind "scattered diehards were "shattering enemy resistance" near Villastar, five miles southeast of Teruel.

Government forces, however, said they were committed to being quick end to the siege and prevent a duplication of the insurgent success during the war at Toledo, where the Alcazar garrison held out until relief arrived.

Civilian refugees were being evacuated from strategic objectives in Teruel. The Teruel residential section the outskirts, and a part of the centre of the city were in government hands.

How Will Santa's Reindeer Visit Nome on Christmas Eve?

Sourdoughs Blush to See Streets Almost Bare of Snow

SLEIGH ON WHEELS?

Nome, Alaska, Dec. 23—(AP)— Embarrassed sourdoughs glanced down Nome's main street today—and blushed.

There isn't enough snow around these usually frigid parts to support a pair of snow shoes, let alone a hearty laden sleigh.

And Santa's due tomorrow night. "Reckon old Kris might as well turn in his sleigh for a sedan," mused one veteran of the far north.

Jim Howard, Nome Chamber of Commerce Committee was not abashed.

Santa's coming down main street the Yuletide ceremony—even if his sleigh has to be jacked up on wheels. Special arrangements will draw it.

Though only a measly inch of snow covers the ground this will be a notable Christmas for Nome's 1,500 children, white and eskimo.

The children already thrill at the sight of imported Christmas trees, many seeing a tree for the first time. Not a tree grows within 200 miles of Nome, but today the city is alive with fir and spruce.

Christmas Concerts

ST. THOMAS' SUNDAY SCHOOL

The joy of Christmas was fully realized by the children of St. Thomas' Church Sunday School on Wednesday evening, December 22, when the teachers and officers under the able leadership of Mrs. John Watson, entertained to them a very bountiful supper and Christmas entertainment.

After the refreshments had been served the children enjoyed for an hour a concert which was contributed by Jane Hall who sang several songs, Hilda Illsley who played the piano, Shirley Coulter who danced and recited and Bettie Anne McIlmoyle who also recited.

The usual carol singing was entered into very heartily, Betty Penn and Mrs. Coulter assisted at the piano.

After the concert the Vicar showed a set of lantern slides, telling the story of the Nativity of Christ.

In all such evenings there are many helpers who seem to enjoy to the full just giving others pleasure. Among the was Ernest Fry who helped so splendidly with the lantern and in so many ways.

Throughout the entire evening one was impressed with the fact that Christmas could not be thoroughly enjoyed apart from the realization of its sacred name and origin.

Mr. G. H. McIlheran, the Superintendent of the School, was the chairman for the evening's entertainment.

CHRIST CHURCH S.S. CONCERT

Christ Church Parish Hall was the scene of an enjoyable Christmas concert on Tuesday evening. So large was the attendance that many visitors were unable to get seats. The splendid program was provided through the courtesy of Mr. Everett Smith, superintendent, each class being carefully prepared by its teacher. Mr. Smith was unable to be present through illness, his place being filled by Mr. G. H. Wright, in his interesting address, referred to Mr. Smith's work as superintendent and to his tireless efforts to make the concert a success.

The program follows:

EMMANUEL CHURCH

With the Sunday school rooms of the Emmanuel Church suitably decorated for the occasion, the annual Christmas concert and Sunday school Christmas tree of Emmanuel Church Sunday School was held last evening. A large attendance of parents and friends enjoyed the splendid program of Yuletide carols, drills and readings that were offered by the Sunday school pupils under the direction of their teachers.

A lengthy program was introduced by Mr. Rev. George Marshall, rector of the Emmanuel Church, who acted as chairman throughout the evening's entertainment. Following the program favors and prizes were distributed to the Sunday school members from the mammoth Christmas tree that added to the colorful and festive atmosphere of the evening. Every little present received candy and prizes for school attendances, proficiency and efficiency throughout the year.

The program included the following numbers:

Miss D. Juby, Christmas song; recitation, Mary Ann Phyllis Whittington; Mrs. C. Davis, class song, "Stars of Christmas Night"; recitation, Doris Bunton; Miss I. The committee of the Sunday school consisted of the following members: Miss Fisher, recitation; Miss Gibson, recitation; Harry Davis, recitation; "Jack in a Manger" class; Joan Norridge, recitation; Audrey Rose, recitation; Billie Davis, recitation; "Good-bye" song.

Girls' Clear Voices Raise Sweet Melody in Carols
Visit Lawns And Sing For Sake of Sweet Charity
AID FUND

Perhaps the famous carol-singers of olden times may have had better voices; they may have sung more popular melodies endowed with a little more verve and tonal quality but they never sang with a more worthy purpose than did a group of Girl Guides of the city whose sweet voices floated lightly ring in the "midnight clear" for the past week in various sections of the city.

With a real Christmas spirit reflected in the girlish sparkle of their eyes and the light of a job being well done shining in their faces, the group of ladies nightly paraded the streets, halting at street intersections; at corners and below windows, the glow of which reflected back in the shining faces of the carollers and sang the old carols that have rung down through the years to bring joyful festive season.

Theirs was no ulterior motive. Mighty they gave of their time and their efforts to bring to those unfortunate of Belleville cause deserving of Yuletide cheer that otherwise would be denied them.

Beneath the garish light of street-corner lamps; under the red glow of lighted windows, those young voices rang out in the night air bringing the old familiar carols to their listeners. And many a nightly wayfarer paused on his homeward journey to listen as he heard the young voices in chorus.night.

They asked no personal recompense for their efforts. Many times they were refused as they appealed for silver collections, but a great number of times coins rang in the receptacle offered to their listeners.

Their reward will come on Christmas morning but they will not be there to reap the benefits. This morning these young girls presented to Fire Chief William Lynch the magnificent sum of fourteen dollars which they had collected through their efforts "for the needy families" they said as they pressed the money in the hand of the Fire Chief.

It was not a magnanimous sum, in money per se, but the splendid spirit of these youngsters who generated the idea of bringing Christmas cheer to the unfortunates who will be made glad through their efforts is a Yuletide attitude that will be emulated by more than one grownup.

The names of the Girl Guides and their friends who assisted them in this fine season's work follow:

—Joan Bennett, Jean Cook, Gertrude Poste, Phyllis Barlow, Irene Michaud, Judy Scott, Loretta Stark, Mabel Adams Queenie Bridge and Helen Walker.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE CAPITOL

"Range Defenders"

Three cheers for the Three Musqueteers! They're come through again with another of those spine-tingling, hair-raising western thrillers that emanate so frequently, and with such signal regularity, from Hollywood.

This time it's "Range Defenders" coming to the Capitol tomorrow (Friday) and Saturday Day, matinee and evening.

Bob Livingston, the handsomest Musquiteer, is called upon to defend his younger brother from a trumped up murder charge. Ray Corrigan, the "cute" darling and comedy relief of the trio, and Max Terhune, the funniest, go along to share the thrills and danger, under the old banner, "All for one and one for all."

They find themselves enmeshed in a web of political intrigue, made the more complicated by the fact that the sheriff is a stooge of the local bandits, who are seeking to drive honest cattle men from the country.

Tucson (Ray Corrigan) decides to run for sheriff and right the long list of wrongs that have been committed in the name of justice, but his rash politics a perfect unhealthy occupation, particularly when the bullets resort to gun fire to keep their opponents from the polls.

Livingston's kid brother is apprehended and locked up in the local Bastille. Livingston gets a daring idea, and only succeeds in getting himself locked up too, along with Corrigan and Terhune. The Musquiteers never say die! Ray and Max come to the rescue. They intervene when a stick of dynamite is laid under the jail by one of the tools of the villainy of the outfit in power, they depose them, Tucson is elected sheriff, and the entire bevy of them all is exposed as the real perpetrator of the murder pinned on Bob's brother.

Max Terhune's inimitable dummy, "Elmer" gets his good share of laughs and applause. "Range Defenders" is well worth the price of admission, and charming, and good for a big afternoon.

Added Hits

As added pre holiday treats on the same bill an Earl Gilbert comedy "The Third Wheel," a One Man Band, "Gus Van's Music Shop," a terrytone cartoon "The Harolds," the latest Pathé News Events and an Oswald cartoon "Beach Combers" complete this splendid program.

SANTA COMES TO THE SICK AND CRIPPLED

One of the sweetest things about the Christmas season is the special attention given to the sick and crippled. The excitement of the season of good will quickens the pulse of the world and takes their attention from their ills, temporarily at least, as every effort is made to give them a happy Christmas. Perhaps the greatest interest at this season is centred in the Christmas hoped for, longed for, and actually experienced by crippled children. Special efforts are made every year to make Christmas a very happy time for these crippled children, and in this particular the Belleville Rotary Club is making a real effort and all crippled children in Belleville will be remembered and visited with gifts and kindly wishes. Looking forward to the New Year, Belleville Rotary Club is making plans to extend the club's usefulness in this worthy work. A big entertainment will be held, funds for this purpose has almost been raised, and immediate steps must be taken at once to remedy this deficiency. With this in view Rotarian John Deacon has volunteered to present a musical recital in aid of the Rotary Crippled Children Fund on Tuesday evening, December 28, in the Collegiate Auditorium. A program has been arranged of vocal and instrumental music, which is appropriate to the joyous season and will be varied and sure to please all who attend.

AT THE SELLE

"Night Club Scandal"

Add up John Barrymore in one of the most distinctive roles he has ever played, a cast composed entirely of first-class performers, and an entirely new twist to a mystery plot, and you have Columbia's new thriller "Night Club Scandal", on the Belle screen today (Thursday) and Friday, matinee and evening.

This new film is distinctive in its way of treating the murder which is the foundation of the story. Instead of a busy fumbling through reels of film "Night Club Scandal" shows the spectator the murder at the beginning of the picture, when John Barrymore murders his faithless wife and plants clues to implicate lover, Harvey Stephens. From then on the audience is on equal terms with, if not ahead of the police and reporters who work on the solution of the crime. Complicated plots and counter-plots which are the results of the clue-planting make a gripping mixture at top speed until the final fade-out.

Barrymore's performance steadily as he had planned, much to the grief of Stephens and his sister, Louise Campbell, who by the end of the picture has become a reporter. Lynne Overman, too, proves the murderer's innocence. Overman uses his influence with Detective Charles Bickford and gets prize his life at the Barrymore until another murder brings events to a head. Finally we see a supremely clever man can make a mistake. The swift moving finale will take the breath away.

Three Excellent Shorts

Three excellent short subjects are announced for exhibition on the same program including Columbia's all star comedy Star Personality comedy "Unusual Occupations", a Screen Gems original screen Oddity and "Night in Manhattan", a smart and tuneful musical Revue.

Grand Christmas Show

Ronald Colman stars again on the Belle Theatre, Saturday, Christmas Day, Monday and Tuesday, matinee daily in David O. Selznick's production of "The Prisoner of Zenda," a stirring romantic adventure story of all times.

Lovely Madeleine Carroll and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., head the imposing supporting cast, which includes Raymond Massey, David Niven and Mischa Auer. The Belle latest World News Events and Popeye in "Lou and Foundry" are announced for completion of Saturday program. On Saturday matinee the closing chapter of "Dick Tracy" will be presented.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw—On Tuesday evening of this week the annual school concert of School Section No. 5, Thurlow, was held in Bonarlaw and was a splendid success. The program consisted of choruses, solos, duets, harmonica solos, monologues etc.

Santa Claus also appeared and distributed presents to all the school children from a Christmas tree which was loaded with gifts and presents for everyone.

After the program Miss Pollock, the teacher was called to the platform and presented with a beautiful reclin dish and butter dish (silver) from the pupils.

Mr. M. R. Neal school trustee, acted as chairman.

Salem Sunday School Minto held a successful pie-social on Friday evening last. There was a large attendance and a bountiful lunch was served. A splendid program was given preceding the lunch, consisting of readings by Miss Laurene Scott of Harold and Mr. Chas. Dracup of Stirling and vocal and instrumental music by local talent.

Mr. W. J. Johnston, Sunday School Superintendent acted as chairman.

ISLAND OF CYPRUS

Cyprus, one of the islands in the Mediterranean which has had its share of fame down the centuries because it is in the way of commerce between the Near East and the western world, occupied no small place in the middle ages. Today it is coming again to life in the public news because of its position in the matter of the freedom of the Levant or eastern portion of the great Mediterranean Sea about which grows much of western civilization and east of which is the beginning of the Asiastic cultures and civilizations. The New York Times speaks of the importance of and revival of interest in the island under the heading of "Britain's 'Cinderella'." The Times says:

"After decades of relative neglect under British civilian rule, the island of Cyprus, "Cinderella" of the.. Colonial Office, may again become—as in antiquity—a land of luxurious forest and gardens. This prospect is suggested by Admiral Sir Herbert Richmond's declaration that the fleet must have "a secure base in the Levant," and that an adequate harbor can be built in Cyprus. Evidently Great Britain intends to reinforce its naval and aerial power in the Eastern Mediterranean.

"Few spots in the world have a longer or more varied and colorful past. The third largest island in the Mediterranean—only Sicily and Sardinia are larger—Cyprus first appear sin history as Asi conquered by the Egyptian Tethmosis III of the Eighteenth Dynasty, about 1500 B.C. During the preceding millennium and a half the island was the chief source of copper, and already had its own distinctive art and culture. Subsequent to the first Egyptian conquest, Cyprus experianced successively the rule of Phoenicians, Greeks, Persians (Alexander after the Battle of Issus was welcomed by "all the States of Cyprus"), Romans, Byzantines, Arabs, Lion-Hearted Richard I, Knights Templars, Kings of Jerusalem', Venetians and Turks.

"Perhaps now the picture will be changed. Great reservoirs to store the torrential rain of the Winter, and elaborate irrigation works to water the soil now baked hard by six months of hot sun are projected. Cyprian oranges and other products may yet rival the famous exports of Palestine."

LUDENDORFF PASSES

Another figure of the Great War has gone, this time it is a German commander who has left the earthly scene, General Erich Ludendorff, chief of staff of von Hindenburg. Ludendorff was under fifty when the war broke out and was but little past that when it ended. His days since the war were found them not always odding to his fame at home and abroad. But as a general he is credited with being one of the oblest of the German commanders, with a flair for organization which placed him among the very few great leaders of any age. He had studied in an aristocratic school, where his associates did not neglect to have him realize from time to time that he was not of the aristocracy because he did not posses the title "von." This, it is said, caused him to become an intense student and to press towards the top by sheer force of character and will. At the outbreak of the World War this great student of strategy knew so much of the problems of war, even though certain aspects of war had to be modernized that he was easily the leading German in this regard. One writer speaks of him as competent, ruthless and a bit of a mystic. He is the one whose name is mentioned in connection with the overthrow of the Russians in the eastern theatre of war.

His sponsorship of the Germanic movement in later days of peace helped to create that unique form of neo-paganism which we see in Germany today. He at one time was a foe of the Nazis and wrote against Catholics, Protestants, Masons and Jews. He was successful to the extent that he helped to elevate Hitler to the fushernship of Germany with its sort of worship of things Germanic.

A strange anomaly of fate sent him at the last to a hospital under the care of nurses and doctors of the Roman Catholic faith which with other faiths he had found at times. These cared faithfully for him to the last.

As a tribute to his genius as a strategist, Ludendorff was accorded the honor of a state funeral at Munich.

THE BIRDS WILL MISS HIM.

(Dedicated to Samuel T. Wood)

The birds will miss him when they come again;
He was the first to greet them, for he knew
Their every whim in sunshine and in rain,
And noted all the little things they do:
He loved their verdurous haunts by wood and stream;
'Twas his delight to take them unaware.
Or muse upon them, and with mind adream
Worship the God who thought of things so fair.

The birds will miss him—nay, for with the spring
He shall awaken and go out once more.
His was no death that calls for sorrowing;
His spirit shall go wandering as of yore
Beside the streams in the songful woods.
The genius of his native solitudes.

THE ABOVE POEM WAS WRITTEN by James Lewis Milligan as a tribute to the memory of his editorial colleague, Samuel T. Wood. Both served at the same time on the Toronto Globe editorial staff. Sam Wood was a Belleville boy who went to Toronto, became a valued member of the editorial staff of the Toronto Globe and became widely known for his writings about the wild bird life of Canada and the whole inside world of Nature, articulate and inarticulate. Sam Wood is resting in that city of silent citizens over the hill by the waters of the Bay of Quinte which have murmured their requiem for so many years beside the last resting place of so many souls, humble and great, noble knights, world-famed authors, poets, jurists, parliamentarians, business men, professional men of all kinds, including journalists—all a mighty force in the making of the greater Canada. Sam Wood was a nature lover in all that the term implies, his was a beautiful character and in his quiet, modest way he lived a larger and fuller life than many to whom the world of Nature in the open is more or less a closed book. Now he has added to that wonderful store of knowledge acquired on earth that further knowledge of all that lies beyond the grave reserved for those who hear the well done thou good and faithful servant . . . enter thou into the joy of Thy Lord.

CHRISTMAS 1937 will soon join the long procession of Christmases past and gone and make way for the Christmases yet to come. As a suitable preparation for the Christmas to come we should all read with understanding again that wonderful masterpiece of Charles Dickens, The Christmas Carol. Old Scrooges can have no part in the Christmas festival unless their souls have been washed clean in the Christmas Spirit making them fit to mingle with all the happy throng who see only joy and happiness in this joyous season and another splendid opportunity of making others happy.

HASH HAS LONG BEEN A TERM OF REPROACH, boarding house hash a symbol of all that leftovers mean, peppered, spiced up, and presented with apologies. As a matter of fact hash is one of the finest of dishes, properly prepared, and the great chain of Childs' restaurants feature corn beef hash and poached eggs as one of their most popular dishes. Beef Stew is something else again, and this too has been derided by the ribald commentators of the cheaper eateries as epicures know that Beef Stew is something more than just a joke, and it is no surprise that Old Fashioned Beef Stew has been honored with top-column advertising mention in the New York Times, sponsored by none other than the greatest of eateries, world famed "Longchamps", and here's how the Art Preservative of Arts dresses up Beef Stew until the mouth waters and the stomach rolls over in delight:

"Plump and juicy chunks of real filet mignon, no less; flaky Bermuda potatoes, onions that are child prodigies, vine-ripe fresh tomatoes, tender pink carrots, and golden turnips,—perfectly blended to make it all splendid when the luscious juices mingle. JUST THE STEW FOR YOU AND YOU!

A Songster In the Pulpit

By FRANCES FRENCH

One morning, about a year ago, I stepped into the pulpit, donned my robes, and peddled none too ableishly to the washroom.

At the door I paused, for downstairs I detected the most doleful series of chords ad discords it has been my fortune, or misfortune, to listen to.

They came from Mickey, my favorite canary, who has lived with me almost seven years and who is a rare exceptional singer; his notes are sublime, but his warble has been causing certain parties that morning were more like the weird wailings of a wicked-eyed calliope. They were appalling.

My husband joined me at the head of the stairs.

"Sounds like your whistle, pet!" he remarked.

I found myself blushing in spite of twenty years of wifehood. It was not as soon as he mentioned it I recognized my own notes in those weird calls. Now, I appreciate music. I have the ability to note a discord immediately. But I am not addicted to sing or whistle, I flit with maestro, tenor, ballerinas and dancers as a mad flirts with a handsome policeman.

Honey had been perking his little head to one side and listening to my twitterings for a long time. He could be had discovered how to duplicate them—and that morning he presented me with those unearthly notes to which I had so often given birth.

He still sings divinely, but ever and anon, when he hears me upstairs and feels a desire for close contact, he will speak to me in my own language.

It is surprising how a canary pet will educate himself. Not only will Does Removal of Tonsils Prevent Coughs and Head Colds?

Some parents wonder whether they are acting wisely in having their children's tonsils removed. The next door neighbor had her child's tonsils removed because of a constant cough and head colds, yet the youngster still has the cough and frequent head colds. However the age of the child next door was just four years, and that child is still young.

Does this difference in age make any difference in the results obtained by the removal of tonsils and adenoids?

In the American Journal of Diseases of Children, Chicago, Dr. I. M. Epstein, St Paso, Texas, tells of a study of 540 children between the ages of 2 and 13 years before and 3 intervals for two years after removal of tonsils and adenoids. Some of his findings were: Practically all of these tonsils showed a greater or lesser degree of infection. Nearly all tonsils were almost always infected. Tonsils with crypts (holes) usually contained more cases of infection than smooth and these crypts tonsils usually had abscesses in the crypts. Almost all the tonsils were buried, had holes or crypts, were smooth, large or small, symptoms present or the results obtained from the operation.

"Excellent results were obtained in children of all ages in the relief of sore throat, swollen and inflamed glands in the neck), speedy results in the relief of chronic breathing fairly good results in the relief of cough, and fair results in the relief of frequent head colds. Except in tonsillitis or sore throat, the results in the complaints of a cough and head colds the results were especially poor in children less than 3 years old. More consistently good results may be expected from the removal of removing tonsils and adenoids is postponed until the child is four years old or even later, especially if head colds or a cough is the complaint.

Except in estimating the amount of obstruction, the appearance of the tonsils is unimportant to the physician in deciding whether or not he have them removed.

The thought then in trying to decide about the removal of tonsils is that if the tonsils are an obstruction to breathing they should be removed at any age; if the obstruction removal to prevent cough and head colds in children under six years of age gives poor results as the cough and head colds still persist after operation.

ALL FOREIGNERS

Of the 300 refugees, many were the wives and families of missionaries as Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang.

All foreigners have been urged to remain through another week, it was decided at a meeting here today. Many have already left, but it is expected that the majority will remain for another week with several hundred additional refugees.

Warned to Evacuate

By LLOYD LEHRBAS

Associated Press Foreign Staff

Shanghai, Dec. 23 (AP)—Japanese warships warned Americans here tonight to evacuate Hangchow, thriving provincial capital 125 miles by rail southwest of Shanghai, unless they are willing to remain there indefinitely amid steadily complicating encirclement of the seaport from three sides.

In Walled Town Area

Other Chinese and foreign refugees, meanwhile, were in flight from Canton, Ningpo, Hankow and Nanking, threatened by Japan's spreading attack appeared certain.

Chinese military commanders in Tsingtao said they would resist a Japanese attempt to establish a reclamation for the destruction by Chinese of a power project estimated at $27,000,000.

From Hankow, one of the three cities in which Chinese government offices were scattered before the fall of Nanking, 48 British refugees fled toward Hong Kong aboard H. M. S. Cape Town, an interpreter's express said left for Hong Kong with 134 other refugees.

The Japanese invasion advanced toward Hangchow along the Shanghai-Nanking railway, meeting fierce resistance at Changan, about 18 miles northeast of its objective. The second column closed in on the highway from Shanghai and the third was making a rapid march across country from Anchi, to the west.

The road column claimed captures of Mokanshan, a missionary centre 70 miles south of the Nanking-Hangchow.

Wellington Invalid Builds Beautiful Doll's House

Kenneth Reads Used Jackknife And Saw Only as Tools

CORRECTLY FURNISHED

A beautiful doll's house, complete in every detail with paper on the walls and modern interior decorations, constructed of three thicknesses of three-ply basswood, is attracting a lot of attention of residents of Prince Edward County in general and the village of Wellington in particular, a citizen of the village stated last night.

Taking nine months to complete, the house was built by Kenneth Reads, an invalid of the lakeside village, who erected the tiny structure while lying in bed. The only tools and building materials used were a coping saw jack knife and a pot of glue.

The tiny home contains hardwood floors throughout. The roof is comprised of four thousand shingles cut from basswood of the thickness of one-twentieth of an inch. Windows have fifteen panes of "glass" throughout. The little building is well reinforced with nerves and mortise work making it durable. Windows are reinforced with steel wire.

Two bay windows give the front of the house a most aggressive and dormounting these are three-paned "flat windows". The front door constructed of hard oak has a two paned window over it. The letter "S" forms a letter slot in the front of the door. A small roof projects over the front door and is supported by two small dowels at each side of the entrance. The outside chimney of the two storied little structure is a body shade of cream with green trimming, red chimneys and roof of a natural color.

Excellent Workmanship

The interior of the house is a masterpiece of workmanship. Entirely furnished the little home is a splendid reflection on Mr. Reads ability and skill as a craftsman but as an interior decorator. A beautiful stairway leads from the first to the second floor. Inside the front door to the upper part of the house, the stairway walnut treads with white facings, banister railing and newel post of white, while splendid walnut hand ball is panelled with walnut and has a tiny table at its bottom.

To the right of the hallway is a den. This has a mahogany fireplace and leather lounge, with a mahogany library table, brown leather armchair and a reading lamp for the mantelpiece. Homespun drapes decorate the window.

The living room across the hall is correctly furnished. Here a chesterfield suite is upholstered with gold colored repp, with centre table and floor lamp. Homespun drapes and Venetian blinds add to the beauty of this room.

Through an arch at the rear of the living room is the dining room where a formally correct dining suite is in evidence, consisting of table, six chairs, buffet and china cabinet all constructed from solid walnut.

A compactly furnished kitchen is found through another doorway. This is furnished with a tiny stove, a sink and cupboards. Here too is a breakfast nook as well as a clock on the wall. Even the refrigerator is not here but in the shed.

At the top of the stairs is another hallway, also splendidly bannistered, and spindled in the same colors as that of the first floor. A black leather-covered lounge is the only furnishing here. A bedroom, tastefully decorated in light shades from the hallway. Furnishings here include a bed, bed and dresser, complete with mattress, sheets, blankets and pillows, with box spring, blue silk spread, pillow with lace-trimmed slip cover. Blue silk curtains at the window.

The inside bathroom is a fully equipped bathroom enamelled in a shade of green. A mosaic bedroom is found through another bedroom furnished with walnut, with yellow drapes at the window, yellow paper on the walls, and white trimmings. A nursery completely furnished, and containing a tiny crib leads off from this room. A guest bedroom done in green and white with fine furniture and curtains of the same color, and a white dressing table completes the immaculate picture.

Used Odds and Ends

Many odds and ends were used by Mr. Reads in the construction of the miniature home. Bottle tops served for furniture and mirrors in dressers were taken from old dolls' heads. One lamp is made from a doll's mixing bowl, turned upside down, with a thimble for a base and the top of a pill box, with colored beads for a light shade.

The house is papered throughout and everything in it is furnished with the exception of stove, bath, room set and den washpaper basket.

The house is now on display in the window of the grocery store of Mr. Lorne Sutter where it will remain until after Christmas. A remarkable feature connected with the tiny house, and one which reflects further credit on the builder, is the fact that the house was built to no specifications, Mr. Reads working from plans cut for himself as construction progressed.

Librarian of 'Met' Is Dead at Age of 72

New York, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Lionel Napoleon, 72, who as librarian of the Metropolitan Opera was one of the key men of United States music for half a century, died yesterday.

Born in London into a family that gave Napoleon Bonaparte to the crown since 1740, Napleon was custodian of the hundreds of operas that represent the Metropolitan's history.

Nearly 30 years ago, from a cellar hide above the "Diamond Horseshoe" he made with primitive apparatus the first recordings of the voices of such singers as Melba, Caruso and Scotti. Police are investigating reports that Healy was struck by a Beverly Hills night club a few days before his death.

Thomasburg

Thomasburg — Christ Church Anglican Women's Auxiliary met on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Greenwood, Moira, for their Christmas meeting, with a good attendance of members and a number of visitors.

The meeting opened by the singing of a hymn, followed by "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," followed by prayer led by the president, Mrs. W. Morton. Each member answered the roll call with an appropriate text verse for the season.

The treasurer reported the proceeds of the Dinner and Bazaar to be $61.30, which was an increase over the previous year.

After the business period a very enjoyable programme was given. Little Miss Catherine Coulter sang two solos. Mrs. Clarence Jeffrey gave a talk on the appropriate Christmas speech and everyone for Christmas. The hymn, "Little Town of Bethlehem" was sung.

The meeting was brought to a close with a General Thanksgiving and the Benediction.

A social time was then served and a social time enjoyed by all.

On Monday night last a large number of friends and neighbors of the surrounding community gathered at the home of Mr. Bailey here to bid farewell to a highly respected and lifelong family of the vicinity in the persons of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Adams, Annice, Donald and Robert, and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Brewer who are leaving in the near future to make their home in Belleville.

Rev. R. B. Herrington, pastor of the United Church acted as chairman for the evening and after calling the gathering to order asked Mr. and Mrs. Adams and family to take their places on the platform and after a few words of expression of the regret of the community at their departure from this family from our midst asked Mr. Harold Morton to read the following address:

Thomasburg, Ontario,
December, 13, 1937.

To Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Adams and family and Mr. Harry Brewer and family.

Dear Friends:—

It was with deep regret that we learned that you had found it necessary to take your departure from our midst. We never thought but that you would all your days make here. So it came as something of a shock to us that you are going away. In expressing our regrets at your departure we included Harry for as Jessie is to be with the homestead that we think of him as a part of the family.

We shall greatly miss you all, for you have been active in every phase of the community life, whether it be in connection with the ordinary activities of the home or church life. In all things you have sought to be helpful and it is with the sad that your helpfulness has been appreciated.

We hope that in going to your new home, with all that is involved that your expectations will be realized and that life will be happy for you. We hope you make many new friends and say you as enter into your new surroundings that your life will be as full and happy as it has been here.

Now we would not like you to leave us without some little gift of remembrance. Some expression of our good will to you. So Mr. Adams and family, kindly accept this purse from us, Harry, this ring, and may God's blessing and kind guidance be with you all. And we hope that in making new friends you will not forget the old ones left behind and we hope that you will return to visit us often.

Signed on behalf of the Thomasburg Community, Clarence Jeffrey, Harold Morton, Harry Kennedy, Clare Coulter and Robert Hargadon.

Both Mr. Adams and Mr. Brewer expressed their appreciation for the gifts.

All joined in singing "For They are Jolly Good Fellows" and this part of the programme was brought to a close.

Lunch was then served and the remainder of the evening dancing was enjoyed.

On Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Harold Morton opened their home for the C.G.I.T. and Trail Rider group to spend another social evening with one of their members, Annice Adams, before she left shortly with her parents to make their home in Belleville.

During the evening the following address was read by Evelyn Vance and Marion Bateman presented Annice with Rose Bods of Perfume and a crystal vase, together with a small remembrance from the C.G.I.T. girls.

Thomasburg Ontario,
December 15, 1937

To Annice Adams.

Dear Annice:—

Having learned that you are about to leave us, we, the members of the C.G.I.T. wish to express our regrets of your departure. We shall miss you from our meetings, as you were quite a regular attendant and willing to do your part in the meetings as well as at concerts.

When you go to your new home we all hope to find you will become a member or another group and of some Sunday School class. None of us can become the girl that we want to be, without close contact with the Church, which leads to God. And since you are not going so far away there will be times when you will be back to visit your friends and we would be glad to have you with us in our Sunday School class or at a meeting.

As a slight remembrance from the group we would ask you to accept this gift and you can see in it, may it bring back pleasant memories of your girl friends at Thomasburg.

Signed on behalf of the C.G.I.T. group, Evelin Herrington, leader; Ina Morton, Pres.

Annice thanked the girls for the lovely gift and invited them to visit her in her new home.

The remainder of the evening was spent in games and a delicious lunch was served before the close of the party.

Ronny's Fred scraped on the floor as he shifted his weight.

"I hurried it out, Ronny. I told it I was terribly sorry, but that I couldn't marry him, ever. I kept repeating it, over and over when he could let me talk until at last he realized it was no use to plead. Then—" He paused, with obvious, deliberate, terrible, "this part isn't important, Ronny but I want you to know—he asked me to kiss him good-bye, and I did."

She was very still for a moment, then she moved forward and touched him, and though Ronny was biting his lips until they hurt, he got his arms around her, and held her close.

When Sandra went in breakfast next morning, she found Lucille at the table, alone, looking slightly pale. "Where's the rest of the family, Lucille?" she asked.

Lucille said, "He ate an hour ago, according to the code. Here at the shop, I imagine." And a moment later: "Mrs. MacAllister will be along. I heard her moving about in her room as I came by."

Sandra looked at the girl's pale face, puzzled, but she said nothing. Then Lucille's eyes came up as she said, "I'm going out on a case, Sandra. Out of town. But I'll try to manage some way to see you before you leave Sunday. I wish you weren't going."

Sandra smiled into Lucille's dark eyes. "I'm not going." She added, "Not just yet—either. Mrs. MacAllister refuses to let me stay."

From the all doorway Mrs. MacAllister said, "You'd stay all the time, if I had my way."

Mrs. MacAllister's words were lost for the moment. The two girls were staring at her with wide, incredulous eyes, seeing her coming across the room, very slowly and with a decided limp—but without her crutches.

"Mrs. MacAllister ....." You shouldn't!"

Ronny's mother came on, smiling. "And why shouldn't I? I've been practising in my room for almost a week." She stopped, her hands on the back of the chair Sandra had drawn back for her. "Doctor's don't know everything. I'm going down to the shop in an other week and give Sandra and Ronny a hand."

It was minutes later, when they had recovered from this delightful surprise, that Lucille suddenly turned to Sandra. "I didn't even tell you how glad I am—that you're going to stay. I wonder what she'll say when you come back." She saw Lucille's eyes rise from her plate and come to rest on her face and for some reason she herself did not understand, Sandra's heart obeaks grow warm, her eyes burn. There was a certain tenseness in Lucille's face, a restrained excitement.

Mrs. MacAllister noticed that Lucille was eating with unusual haste and said, "There seem to be in a awful hurry, Lucille. Are you going somewhere?"

Lucille smiled pleasantly as she got up from the table and started toward the door. "Yes," she said, "I'm going on a case—out of town. I hope you two manage all right." And was gone before Mrs. MacAllister could ask where she was going.

When Sandra reached the Guardian office, she found a note from Ronny saying she had received a wire from New York and was taking the early train down. But he might at least have called up to say he was going. She read on:

"I'm listing the jobs that are most important, but don't try to do more than you conveniently can in your half days. I'll be back not later than Sunday morning and will manage to catch up somehow."

He signed the note "R." No "Love." No word or reminder of their moment on the porch last night.

For a long while Sandra sat staring at it the wall; presently she was remembering everything she had observed in Lucille's manner this morning....that strange anxious thing in her lovely face, her poorly concealed eagerness to get away as quickly as possible....that questioning gaiety in her dark eyes—which suddenly Sandra saw in restriction—when she, Sandra, had confessed she had decided last night, when she was with Ronny, to go back to New York with her parents.

It was all too ridiculous, and yet, thinking of last night, she told herself she had almost thrust herself into Ronny's arms, had deliberately gone out on the porch to him after he had repeatedly made it clear he preferred to leave matters as they were. She went to the, telephone and called a telegraph office, but there was no wire there for Mr. MacAllister.

She had had a message for him early this morning.

"Not today, I haven't." the voice said, grumpily. "Haven't had no message for Ronny in a week or more."

Through the remainder of the day and all of Saturday Sandra worked, feverishly, but she hardly knew what she was doing. Not by the time she looked up late Saturday afternoon, she was telling herself that of course Ronny was back in New York and Lucille was at the bedside of some sick person; every thing was as it should be and she was a jealous little fool.

They were having supper when Ronny walked into the house, sober avoiding their eyes, and ten minutes later Lucille arrived, that anxious expression of her dark face greatly intensified.

Sandra stopped breathing, waiting for them to look at each other.

Ronny had stuck his head in the dining room door, said, "Howdy, folks,...." and vanished. Five minutes later he came into the room, kissed his mother and sat down, facing Sandra across the table. She kept his eyes on his plate and when his mother asked if he had had a long trip, he merely nodded.

"Go to New York about your radio job, son?"

He nodded again. "Yes, Mom." Offering no explanation, no encouraging questions.

Sandra said, "I've had a grand time at the office, Ronny. Worked all day yesterday and today. You don't have to do a great deal to catch up, I'm glad to say."

Mrs. MacAllister said, "I worked all day, I asked you not to."

"I'm going to be painfully bright, by, "but I felt like doing it. I'm equal to it now, Ronny. I think I'm all strung up over the wire."

There was a long silence. Then Ronny said, "Guess I'll go down to Lucille to Ronny and back to Lucille again.

Lucille said she had stopped at home to leave her bag and change, plate and come to call on her face and for some reason she herself did not understand, Sandra beates.... And still she had not spoken to Ronny, nor had Ronny spoken to her.

Mrs. MacAllister asked as Lucille sat down, "Heard anything about your patient, Lucille?"

Lucille drew a slim hand across her eyes. "He'll live, but—he was badly mangled. He was in an automobile accident. I'll have to go back tomorrow morning."

Sandra thought, "Why don't you tell us who it is, and where he is? What's the secret about your patient?"

But no one asked and presently Ronny said, "Reckon did you go, Lucille?" It was the first time he had looked at her, the first words that had passed between them.

"Friday morning." Lucille said. "You ought to know, Ronny. He's been here since, have it?"

"I went to New York Friday morning," Ronny said, "and I walked in hardly an hour ago."

To Sandra's ears that little exchange between Ronny and Lucille had a mechanical ring, almost as if it had been rehearsed.

"You look tired, Sandra," Lucille said as they were leaving the table. "Haven't been breaking rules, have you?"

Ronny answered that. "She worked all day yesterday and all day today."

"And," said Sandra, forcing a smile, "I'm paying for it. I've a miserable headache."

"Then straight to bed," Lucille told her. "You're mother and father will put me down for a very poor nurse."

When Sandra had gone to her room and closed the door, Lucille motioned Ronny out on the porch. "Let's take a walk, Ronny. I've something to tell you—something that can't wait."

Ronny called to his mother, he and Lucille went out to the street and walked off, slowly, arm in arm. Sandra leaned against the closed door, hearing their footsteps on the porch; hearing the rasping whine of the gate—explaining this, as she had explained everything this morning, in the light of what was no longer a suspicion but a positive conviction.

Chet said, "It's incredible the progress you've made, Sandra." And he thought, "She's not completely well, however. I don't like that worried look in her eyes."

They were in the yard, behind the House, ostensibly looking over Mrs. MacAllister's garden, but Sandra had led him there wanting to have him to herself for a little. Leaning against the wire fence, she said, "I want you to do something for me, Chet. They're all been so sweet to me here I've really hated to think of going away and a day or two ago I told them I wanted to stay a few weeks longer. But I don't—now. I want to go back with you and think."

"And you want me to be very hard-boiled and take you back whether you want to go or not. Is that it?"

"You know how to do it." she nodded. "Talk to Mrs. MacAllister and tell her you think the change would be good for me. Anything—so I shan't have to explain that I've changed my mind about staying."

Chet took her face between his hands and made her look at him. "Why have you changed your mind, honey?"

"Oh, I can't tell you, Chet. I don't want to think about it."

"You've had your feeling hurt." "If I have, it wasn't necessary. Ronny did nothing deliberately hurt them. People aren't responsible for what they do in this life. They do things in spite of themselves, in spite of what they want to do very often."

Chet dropped his hands. "So you've made that discovery at your age," he said. Sandra knew he was no longer thinking of her, but of Ronny and Enid. And knowing this, Sandra heard herself saying what never in this world she would have said had she not blurted it out, on impulse as she did never borrowed from Anthony Ascoli and the condition you served in, and I think you'll do it endlessly."

Chet's eyes narrowed. He said, "And shouldn't have told you that."

"Perhaps not, but—we're all conceited. It means the end of everything."

The Patient and His Son

By HELEN GREEN
McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

It was so quiet in the big mare hospital room that even the slow breathing of the single patient in the high white iron bed sounded unusually loud.

Little Nick Rooney glanced into the still room and after a long look at the motionless figure on the bed, stood her bronze curls and sighed unknowingly.

Outside, the world was a riot of beautiful, summer sunshine, fragrant vegetable gardens everywhere proclaimed the lavish hand of nature's extravagant activity. It made no appeal whatsoever to the inert patient in "21." Only that morning, doctors had proclaimed that there was nothing lacking in Nick's sturdy physical condition to make a most speedy recovery, yet he lay, day after day, not gaining or losing—simply lying in silent apathy.

That night Miss Rooney, Miss Rooney aside from being the most efficient graduate nurse at NOH was also quite unquestionably the most ornamental adjunct the institution had ever boasted.

And thus far Miss Rooney, in all her five short years of utter feminine adorableness, had failed, quite, to register on the stony heart of Nick Rooney, Sr. The doctor was in despair.

He'd been married; and his wife is still living."

Reported Miss Rooney to Doctor Hadden.

"Divorce, most likely. Think he's worrying over that?" he asked with brief efficiency.

"Oh, no; he says that women don't count in his life," replied Miss Rooney. "His wife left him when the baby was born. He's sympathies with the mother. And he has money."

Doctor and Doctor Hadden strode down the corridor for though.

Two weeks slipped by and conference was called in "21." With genial frankness" Doctor Hadden told Nick the truth:

"You've got a fighting chance to fight that thing and get back again on the job, if you'll only want to. You can't do it all, son. You've got to carry your share—and more than your fair share."

Doctor Hadden stopped abruptly at the vacant look in his patient's eyes.

"How long must I stay in this room?" came from the tightly drawn mouth of the patient.

"Not more than a year—if you make up your mind to fight!"

"Oh." No encouragement; no resignation. Just complete indifference. Three months had elapsed since his accident.

Whatever lay behind his tortured brown eyes, no one could guess. He was as unfathomable as the sphinx. At times Miss Rooney could weep with despairy at other times she longed to take the poor black head to her breast and croon to him in tender sympathy.

Monday morning broke clear and flawless: a perfect day for the laying of the cornerstone conferred for ECH. Nick lay watching a tiny fleecing white cloud sailing slowly over the tall elms of the hospital yard. His bed was out on the porch and the only evidence of interest he showed in his surroundings was to stare with moody apparently unseeing eyes at the sky over the tall swinging elms. Suddenly from the rear of the building, came a series of puffs and staccato exhaust explosions, culminating in a long peculiar "cough" of a steam shovel. Nick slowly turned his head and rang the bell at the side of the bed. Again he rang violently and Miss Rooney put in a startled, hurried appearance.

"Sir, Mr. Nicholas?"

"Go to the rear of this building and get that shovel is on. Quick, please, Miss Rooney! Get busy, please, and don't stand there staring like a clam!"

Miss Rooney jumped at the note of brisk command and fled down the hall, her cheeks tingling.

"Why she stamped her foot, herself. "he's wonderful—so forceful, so masterful!"

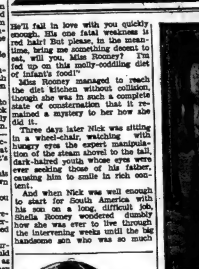
"Mr. Nicholz," she said a moment later,

"Well, hurry up and say it, is it an Orin?" demanded Nick peacefully.

"Yes, and the foreman wants to speaking it waved to me, and he looks the most marvelous hair and eyes you ever saw. I'm wild about him."

"Yes, yes, of course. His name is George, and he is my son! Go ahead and fall in love with him

Scene from "True Confession" featuring Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray and John Barrymore, coming to the Belle Sandog midnight, December 26.



He'll fall in love with you quickly enough. It's one fatal weakness I've red hair! But please, in the meantime, bring me something decent to eat! You will, Miss Rooney? I'm fed up on this molly-coddling diet of infant's food!"

Miss Rooney managed to reach the diet kitchen without collision, though she was in such a complete state of consternation that it required a master effort to her how she did it.

Three days later Nick was sitting in a wheel-chair, watching with hungry eyes the expert manipulation of the steam shovel to the tall, dark-haired youth whose eyes were ever seeking those of his lady, causing him to smile in rich content.

And when Nick was well enough to start for South America with his son on a long, difficult job, Miss Rooney wondered dimly why how she was ever to live through the intervening weeks until the big handsome son who was so much like Nick should return and begin his college career. Still dreams he had confided to Sheila Manchuria have announced that no American pictures will be shown there as long as all movie matters are controlled by the new government monopoly.

THE STURDY BONG OF THE LIGHTHOUSE KEEPERS RANG IN SCROOGE'S EARS, AS WITH A RUSH OF WIND, AS THEY SPED AGAIN OUT TO SEA AND SPIED A SHIP IN THE DISTANCE.

IN A MOMENT THEY LIGHTED ON THE SHIP. THEY STOOD BESIDE THE HELMSMAN, THE LOOKOUT, AND OTHER SEAMEN AT THEIR STATIONS. EVERY MAN HUMMED A CHRISTMAS TUNE, OR HAD A CHRISTMAS THOUGHT, OR SPOKE TO HIS COMPANION ABOUT SOME MEMORY OF A PREVIOUS CHRISTMAS.

SCROOGE, GREATLY SURPRISED, THEN FOUND HIMSELF IN A BRIGHT, DRY, LIGHTED ROOM, WITH THE SPIRIT, LOOKING UPON HIS NEPHEW'S CIRCLE OF FRIENDS ENJOYING CHRISTMAS FESTIVITIES.

SCROOGE BECAME AWARE THAT HE WAS THE SUBJECT OF THEIR CONVERSATION. "I WAS ONLY GOING TO SAY," SAID FRED, "THAT SCROOGE MAY RAIL AT CHRISTMAS TILL HE DIES, BUT I'LL KEEP GOING THERE YEARS AFTER YEAR, WISHING HIM A 'MERRY CHRISTMAS'."

Rawdon—A unique affair in the form of Carol singing was sponsored by Miss Mary Sharp, school teacher at Wellman's, when two sleigh-loads of young people numbering twenty-four started out early Sunday evening and journeyed through Wellman's, down as far as Mr. Wilfrid Shaw's where up at the concession to the town line and then down to sixth concession to Mr. Burnett Johnson's, a happy house by the light of flashlights and lanterns they sang beautiful Christmas hymns. Messrs. George Watson and Harold Sharp each piloted the teams and sleighs to convey the young people about. Soon after nine p. m. they all enjoyed a delicious lunch at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Johnson. Later on they hope to spend another evening visiting the homes in the east of Wellman's.

Several folks in the Community were very appreciative of the singing and the young people have been highly complimented on their carol singing.

"Dear Friend,

Received the clothing and everything O. K. and it certainly was a blessing to get it. Thanks very much. It was so fine a carful that there must have been a bunch of good hearted people to fill a car like that with everything in it that could sustain and add a lot of fruit which we enjoyed. I think of you people when we sit down to eat.

"It was one of those on the coming through that everyone got a share. All the goods had to be distributed by the time we reached there when I left the Old Country. I went to Toronto and in Streetsville. I know you get more with than what we get. Well, I have been here since 1911. I have never seen as tough a year as this. I had two hundred acres in, but never a spear between dry weather and grasshoppers and crop worms which cleaned us up. It was hard on the livestock. Now I do not think the people will want. They never had the collars full before for a long time and to wind up, between the Governments and the farmers I do not think the people will suffer this winter if I can judge by the cars that I see coming from Belleville and district. I would ask you to thank those good-hearted people who donated for the people of the West. We appreciate it very much for the kindness they showed us. I trust we shall never have another season like this.

The letter closed with the wish for the best of luck for 1938. It will have the best of good fortune and never a year like the past year in the West.

"Christmas will soon be here, so here is wishing you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year."

CHRISTMAS JOURNEY

I wandered down the streets of time
Along the byways of the years,
And witnessed scenes of sordid crime,
Beset with tears and gnawing fears.

I sauntered down the streets of time,
In hand with coloured history,
I saw the knight, I heard the chime
Strike hard and free for liberty.

I drifted down the streets of time,
By many a door in distant clime
I saw joy drain away to pain.

I ventured down the streets of time
And nowhere in my search I saw
A face unleashed, devoid of grime.
My scene grim law each work a flaw.

I wandered down the streets of time
And watched with shepherds on a hill.
Behold a star in faultless climb.
Shone clear and still, glowed warm and still.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, Dec. 24

According to certain adverse configurations on this day, it is likely that employment and commonplace matters may have a setback or impediment. But there are excellent auguries for finances, gain, expanding influences and benefits through elders, persons of importance and friendly co-operation. Much pleasure and festivity is in store, success and advancement are high tension.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday is to-day anticipate a year of expansion, and progress, with finances stimulated and business advanced through elders' important contacts with large interests and through personal popularity and good fellowships. However, there may be obstacles and delays to contend with resolutely and hopefully.

A child born on this day may be capable, studious and ambitious, but may have obstacles and frustrations to combat in life. It's personal popularity and kindly and friendly nature will definitely assist in this effort.

Shore and Joliet Only Two Of First All-Star Team Left

Both Played Have Spent Entire Careers With Same Team

Toronto, Dec. 23 (CP)—Like "Shooter" Big Eddie Tennyson's "Shoot" in the shore and little Aurel Joliet seem to go on forever in a hockey way. Few performers have seen such long service in National Hockey League ranks as the husky Bruin defenceman and the mile Canadien winger.

As for top-rating stars of seven years ago, these are the only two members of the first All-Star N.H.L. team picked by The Canadian Press at the end of the 1930-31 season who still remain in the thick of big time hockey's fight.

Big Eddie, after a somewhat inactive season last year owing to an injured back, is leading the Bruins' defence forces again this winter while little Aurel still wheels and trails at left wing for the colorful Canucks. Neither has seen Major League service with any other team.

Of their team-mates on that first All-Star team two have died and two have taken up coaching positions, one with a Major League team.

First to leave the ranks of that mythical "dream" aggregation was Charlie Gardiner, Chicago's great goalie, who died suddenly in Winnipeg, June 13, 1934. A brain hemorrhage following a brief illness took one of the greatest goalers of all time.

Clancy, Cook in Management

The others continued their Major League careers until last season when Frank Clancy, the incomparable King-of-Clubs and Toronto Maple Leaf rover, retired in the fall season. The King is coaching Montreal Maroons this year.

Then came one of the saddest blows of all. Babe Siebert, Montreal's Stratford Streak, recovering in a Montreal hospital from a broken leg, died in a plane June 26, died from a sudden heart attack. The Canadien speedster had been named centre on that All-Star outfit.

At the time of the accident Morenz was in the process of staging a miraculous comeback with Canadiens, the team that gave him his first professional contract. He had spent the two previous seasons with Chicago and New York Rangers, apparently at the end of his hockey trail, but, brought back to a revamped and rejuvenated Canadien club, Howie had been showing much of the same old brilliance, darting and was responsible for much of the Montreal team's success after several lean seasons.

Right winger on that 1930-31 All-Star club was Bill Cook of New York Rangers, one of the smooth-est skaters and passers in the game business. Bill continued to play a star role in the Rangers' many successes until this spring when he retired to take over coaching duties with Cleveland Barons in the International-American League, a minor loop.

GOODYEARS WIN OVER OSHAWA

Oshawa, Ont., Dec. 23.—(CP)—Toronto Goodyears held undisputed first place in the Senior A Division of the Ontario Hockey Association today, four straight wins without a defeat this season giving them a two-point margin over Oshawa G-men, their latest victims.

Goodyears beat the M-Men 2-1 here last night when the League Leaders met to decide the Senior A Kingpin. The only other Senior A game this week comes tonight when Port Colborne Sailors play at Kitchener.

Scotty McArthur opened scoring last night at 19:06 of the first period and his was the only shot to flash a red light that period. In the second session Obs O'Brien scored on Don Metz pass and in the final period Metz scored with Blondy Sutcliffe getting an assist when Eddie King scored unassisted.

Play was fast as the two top-notch teams battled for first. Body checking was handed out hard and often and sticks were quiet high for most of the game. In the final minutes Art Whittaker, Toronto, and Al Barton, Oshawa, drew major penalties for fighting.

Both Art McQuesten and Glen Sadler Goodyear defence men added outstanding stops when needed most, their poke sliding over into the nets for several successful stops.

FALCONS EASILY DEFEAT HAWKS IN CAGE FINALS

Winners Forced to Play Four Men Against Seven

SCORE IS 28 TO 16

Second Games of Series Will be Played on Wednesday

Short-handed and forced to play four men against the conventional five made no difference to the Falcons in the first game of the Y. M. C. A. House League cage finals last night, as they continued their string of undefeated games to decisively trounce the Hawks to the tune of 28 to 16 in the Campbell street edition last night. The game was the first of a two-in-a-row series for the city basketball championship, the Falcons and Hawks advancing to the finals by virtue of semi-final victories last week.

The Falcons took to the floor with four players, while Art Martin trotted out a completely equipped Hawks. The numerical disadvantage made no difference to the Falcons as they counted the scoring and were never headed. The winners were leading at the short score of 11 to 9 at the halfway mark, however, and in the second half the Falconers ran in rapid baskets that gave them victory. The tilt was keenly contested throughout.

Class told as the Falcons were in possession of the ball for the greater portion of the pastime and were much superior when it came to floor work. The Hawks were repeatedly missed scoring opportunities when in position. The entire Falcon squad played without a substitute, each one displaying strength in no individual star gleaming on their horizon. Wickerson, Dickens and Semple were the chief luminaries for the losers. The second game of the series will be played next Wednesday night at the "Y".

The box score:

Falcons—	G.	F.	P.	M.	F.	P.
Cole, E.	1	1	3
Scott, C.	2	0	2

By Geo. H. Carver

Jake Kilrain is dead.....The last of the famous old school for barroom knuckle fighters heard the final count.....And who knows, he just revived a host of stories regarding the belcyon days when bare knuckle pushers stood toe-to-toe and slugged it out for several hours or rounds without benefit of leather.....

One of the immortal Jake's most memorable battles was the seventy-five round affair with John L. Sullivan at Richburg, Miss., in 1890.....Under a blazing Mississippi sun the fighters slugged each other until their hands were a bloody pulp according to the story told by Jimmy Wakely, Sullivan's manager, to a friend, Major Ed. Hughes who told it to Sullivan's corner slipped a generous slug of "Fighting Liquor" in Sullivan's water bottle.....

Sullivan welcomed the spiked tonic—it and cash—and promptly every time it was proffered.....Suddenly, he was taken ill and as Wakely expressed it, the entire clergy across the ring like a whale!.....Kilrain immediately yelled "Give up, John I've got you licked!" But Sullivan with the light of liquor and battle in his eyes yelled back, "Come on you-so-and-so. I can lick the whole of you!".....

Again Sullivan "spouted" When he returned to his corner he complained that he "had been poisoned".....When told what had occurred he said "O.K. Major, forget it, I'm not looking lighter for what has happened".....So then turned the immediate task of knocking the stuffing out of Kilrain.....Hughes wore no last during the fight—he was grey and sat and under the blazing sun all afternoon.....His head dreaded of hair as the eight-ball, and when the fight was over it was burned to a blister.....

When he reached up to rub the top of his head at the end of the fight, he left a scrap behind.....All of which is not only a story but has considerable "meat" to it for you sparsely thatched gentlemen.....

Kilrain and Sullivan were arrested and fined or in default of payment, sentenced to a term of imprisonment following this fight with John L. Sullivan in 1889 in the land in that Mississippi Valley, Richburg, Miss., to be exact.....Later, in a lonely field on the outskirts, Kilrain fought 106 rounds with no decision in a scrap that was called on account of darkness.....He always had a warm feeling for Sullivan, and a few days before he died supported to the visit that his old friend who passed on seventeen years ago could be with him.....

That's in a name.....Nothing much perhaps, but the name of the case of two Pittsfield Mass. bears a striking resemblance to the way to New York to see the picture Ina Ray Hutton and her Melodears "Hey, that ain't Lou" one shouted as the picture flashed on the screen.....When they saw Australia Lou Nova was not to do with their hero, Max Baer, they demanded their money back and got it.....

And speaking of names, English writers will have the following incident with which to confound New England meet Cherbo-Slovakia in Association soccer battle.....Marshall Kopecky, Jan Sibra, Stastny Ourecky, Frantisek Klec, Jaroslav Boucek, Voltech and Vaclav Jezdik, or Cayenne pepper placed gently but firmly inside, the starboard nostril will quickly silence anyone who has difficulty in pronouncing the line-up.....

When two Eskimo teams clash for the Arctic championship at Point Barrow game held at King Island, Alaska, on New Year Day, the timekeepers will have to use a different system, one of the gadgets sea-captains use to "shoot the sun" with, or a new type report from the Whalebone Station Observatory.....What we are afraid of "said Mr. Levin, coach of ill ching Island Polar Bears," is that in the heat of battle the ice field may break away. Then if Pigtok, my star fullback makes a wide sweep around end he may end up on the other side of the international date line, 75 miles away.....That would bring the game into January 2nd.

It was with a degree of satisfaction we learned that certain business and professional men in this city are keenly interested in the sponsorship of a juvenile hockey team for Belleville and are studying the prevailing conditions surrounding such a proposition. We have been approached by several business and professional men relative to the matter all ready. These men desire certain information however, before they will commence further plans towards organizing a juvenile club. If a juvenile hockey team is organized for competition in the J. O. H. A. we must look to the local I.C.-I. league for assistance. If the Ki-Y Leagues carry on their good work in the basketball, midget and juvenile groups our burden would not be so heavy. If this idea of sponsoring a juvenile team is carried out the very first matter to be considered is the appointing of a coach, who knows hockey and can impart his knowledge to the boys," added our interested business man today.

On Tuesday night some thirty managers turned out to the Initial Junior O.H.A. practice at the Arena. No doubt a large proportion of these boys were under the age of 18 years and would be ideal for a juvenile club in the city. Although no grouping would be available for a local juvenile club, practice hours will be afforded the players elected from the various clubs in the Ki-Y League, while it has been suggested that exhibition games with other Ki-Y league clubs be arranged in order to provide practice for the players before they enter the J.O.H.A. playdowns. By selecting their material from the various Ki-Y league teams it provides some initiative for the youngsters while playing through the Ki-Y schedules. If the boys know their efforts will be rewarded by the management of a city juvenile team they will be more keen hereafter during group games which should benefit all concerned and assist in generally elevate hockey in the city.

Commencing tomorrow it will be open house' to be followed by the boys reunion at the Y.M.C.A. for a full week. The citizens of Belleville are cordially invited to drop around at the "Y" and really see what the Association has to offer. Everything is in full swing and in operation nightly, with special events for the entertainment of the visitors. Once a year open house is held at the "Y" and with the idea in mind of more fully acquainting the general public with the activities of the "Y". Everything is gratis and all are welcome. Informs instructor Fred Hickey of the day. Gymnasium classes, swimming classes, handicrafts and all other activities will be seen in action.

Jake Kilrain is dead. Remembered by the old time fight fans as the man who fought John L. Sullivan 75 rounds in the old bare knuckle days of fighting, Jake Kilrain's name was always linked with the immortals of the fight game. Kilrain was a gallant Irish scrapper and a credit to the game of all times. In his memorable fight with Sullivan, Kilrain could have knocked out the "Boston Strong Boy", when Sullivan was doubled over with uncontrollable nausea, but refused to take the unfair advantage, as he termed it. Sullivan later rallied to win by a K.O. in the 75th round, however. The passing of Kilrain brought back old memories and resulted in old timers once again reminiscing over the good old days that used to be".

Sullivan was never defeated under the London Prize Ring rules of bare knuckle fighting, but later lost the title to James J. Corbett, under the first Marquis of Queensbury rules with gloves. Corbett knocked out then-aging Sullivan in 21 rounds at New Orleans on Sept. 7th, 1892.

After some variances relative to scoring rules in the N.H.L. the league governors met yesterday and endeavoured to clarify matters. It seems there has been considerable fault finding going on in the big league, especially by the home town scorers. In the future assists will be given on goals scored on rebounds which should clear up a point of contention both in scoring. In the future a player must assist in a play beyond the attacker now within reach from the archives of basketball, was the introduction of league coaches being compelled to provide the referees with a written list of their starting men, before each period commences. This should eliminate stalling before periods commence, when the coaches let the hockey about in order to out-guess their opponents regarding the starting line-up. President Calder was appointed as the N.H.L. representative with the C.A.H.A. officials to draw up a new agreement between the amateur and professional bodies.

Coach Carling-Reilly's R.C.A.F. Flyers' took to wings and literally flew to a 6 to 0 victory over the Belleville Redmen last night. The Airmen's victory and by the same margin broke their league leadership once again. It was a case of the Flyers' day for the Redmen were pretty much. Ernie Sagard five of them in the opposition. With his brother Eric notching the sixth. One agreeably surprising feature was the work around the net of Red-men's camp, however. The second line of Bob Bowman, Baines and Mac-Guire looked to be a vastly improved trio, Baines finding the range with perfect results for a bullet-like shot, and knows how to play hockey around the nets, a decided asset to any man's band of pucksters.

The Redmen carried the play for the greater part of the evening and with better success than usual. The affair was a fairly open game with several personal contacts that saw a couple of out-breaks. The clubs, especially the Flyers, should realize the new anti-defence rules are to be rigidly enforced this year, each and every clause, as the players and coaches throughout the province might just as well adjust to them first as last. When a strict outside referee steps into town some fine evening and firmly enforces these rules, the game may find themselves at a disadvantage.

Frank Calder Presented With Silver Tea Service

New York, Dec. 23.—(CP)—Hockey—men who paused to honor the first 25 years of service in the game by a "plucky Scot", Frank Calder, looped today he would continue at the helm of the National League which he nursed from infancy to a sturdy adult.

The League's Board of Governors paid glowing tribute to their leader at a testimonial dinner here last night. The men who have often battled with Calder for years and many times balked at his decisions admitted their greatest problem was how they would replace him when "that invitable time" arrived.

The quiet spoken, 60-year-old former schoolteacher and newspaperman was deeply moved when the historic occasion was climaxed by a presentation of a silver tea service.

"Excuse me if I take a big breath, I suspect you are talking about another person," He told the International gathering of 50 hockey notables and newspapermen.

Despite the fact he recalled the League in its "puny days" immediately following its formation in 1917 and then braved its growth.

PROVIDENCE REDS' SECTION LEADERS

Draw With Syracuse While Cleveland Nose Home Haven Eagles

(By The Canadian Press)

Providence Reds can sit down to a good hockey meal this Christmas Day secure in the knowledge they have the top position in the Western section lead in the International-American Hockey League for the next seven days at least.

The Reds haven't much of an edge right now, being only three points ahead of Philadelphia Ramblers for the top spot in the Eastern section, but the Providence play one more between now and the Rangers' day on New Year and even a victory in that game would leave them behind the Reds.

The Providence team made sure ing, 2-2, with Syracuse stars and was one point behind last night by drawing, 3-3 with Syracuse stars and streak to five games. In the only other game Cleveland Barons blasted New Haven Eagles 3-1, to move into a fourth place in the Western Section behind stars.

DAY OF MOURNING

Melbourne, Dec. 23 (CP-Reuter)—While Australia celebrates next year the 150th anniversary of the first white settlement, the Australian Aborigines' League plans a day of mourning for the Black men.

"While white men are throwing their hats in the air with joy," it was said at a meeting of the league, "Aborigines will be in mourning for all they have lost. It is hoped that the day of mourning will direct the attention of Australians to the desire of the Aborigines for full rights of citizenship."

New York, Dec. 23 (AP)—Pensions for poets were urged today by Edgar Lee Masters, who accused the United States of treating its "great literary minds and artists like bootblacks."

Flyers in First Place in the VanHorne Series by 6-5 Win Over the Belleville Redmen

Ernie McNeeley Scores Five of Six Goals Registered

FAST CONTEST

Second Line of Redmen Play Consistent Hockey

The scoring punch of the McNeeley twins with Ernie carrying the torch was sufficient to defeat the Belleville Redmen 6-5 in a Van Horne series game at Kingston last night and by the win the Flyers advanced into first place in the standing and practically made themselves sure of a playoff. Ernie McNeeley was really going to town scoring five of the six goals registered and only one, the second goal, could be called a soft touch. He was picking the corners and had Watt beaten all the way.

Belleville Redmen on the night's play were more outfinched than outplayed with the second line on Storms, Baines and McGuire being the best trio, that Eddie Thomas hoisted over the boards. Bill Jackson, who has been sick for the past three weeks was considerably below his usual form and the line of Jackson brothers and Bobby Wilson did not function as smoothly as in other games but were always dangerous. Murphy and Bentley played well behind the blue line with only a couple of errors while Watt was fairly consistent all evening. The team will get better as well to hockey during the contest until the last period, when high sticks, elbows and the odd butt end was observed which finally ended in a mixup, which put Murphy off the duel. The Flyers were a little smoother in their play but their substitution at times catching the Redmen flatfooted, made on the Redmen's play of the same nature, they did not have the polish to finish off their scoring drives although "Wink" Wilson was robbed on two occasions. The ice was heavy, the puck sticking to the ice, which made carrying extremely difficult. The defence of the Flyers was not as strong as formerly due to the absence of Ken Parsons but Jamieson his substitute tried hard all the way.

Two Quick Goals

The Flyers put themselves in the ball game early in the first frame with two quick scores, Ernie McNeeley handing Ernie McNeeley a pass and brother Eric sniping past Bert Leeming. The Redmen came into the picture with a nice play Storms handing Baines a perfect rebound when he shot after working by the defence. Ernie McNeeley put his team in front with a pass from Legrie but Baines after McGuire clicked on a nice combination effort, Fred Bentley evened the count, when he took Jackson's pass after breaking away from a scrimmage.

The second period was a slow affair with Ernie McNeeley scoring on a pass from Legrie and Baines notching one from a combination effort with Storms. Legrie provided the setup for Ernie McNeeley to score from close in. Play warmed up at the start of the third frame and there was a parade to the honeygow but the referees soon cooled their ardor. After 19 minutes of play Ernie McNeeley broke from a ranging attack and cleanly beat Watt with a hard drive to the corner and shortly before the bell Clayton Jackson clinched the counter of the game with Baines setting the assist. Baines was the high scorer for the locals with two goals and an assist with Storms having two assists and McGuire a goal, which gave the second line a healthy average for the night. The lineups:

Flyers—R.C.A.F.: Goal, Gibson; defence, Lalonde and Jamieson; centre, Legrie; wings, Ernie McNeeley and Cowley; subs, Lecompte, Eric McNeeley, Halward, Baldwin and Deming.

Belleville: Goal, Watt; defence, Bentley and Murphy; centre, Jackson; wings, W. Jackson and Wilson; subs, McCreary, Johnson, Baines, McGuire and Storms.

'AGE OF SPEED' SAYS PATRICK

New York, Dec. 23 (CP)—"More speed" is Lester Manhattan's Master Hockey today as he leaned back in his comfortable office chair. "It is the age of speed."

In 13 full way Lester Patrick saw room in the National Hockey League for new wrinkles to please the crowd. He would revamp the penalty shot and speed up defence formations.

The master strategist of New York Rangers admitted the penalty shot had not come up to expectations. But it was a good play, he insisted. It could be bettered by moving the firing mark five feet nearer the goal.

"That should get us one goal in every three tries," said Mister Hockey. "The shot would be the present 20-foot drive but a line between the goal. Anyway which no penalty marksman could evade, would allow free fast for players' momentum and so improve shooting."

Patrick dwelt on the present speed in NHL, forward only long enough to admit they are undoubtedly fast. Then he dropped back for a little theoretical defence conversation.

"As in the case of the penalty shot, the defence perhaps could stand a little injection of scoring punch," he said. "Hockey is becoming familiar to the fans. They have seen forwards scoring. The next move would seem to be high scoring defencemen."

Mister Hockey visualized little future use of defencemen who perform only behind their own blue lines. He pictured defencemen as a secondary offensive force.

"The best rearguards would be well-weighted forward to launch scoring attacks from the back," Patrick figured.

"They would be as fast as the forward line, defencemen forwards would be ready for goal for goal with the forwards at every possible opportunity for an offensive thrust."

CANADIAN RACER FORCED TO TURN BACK FROM TRIP

Eric Chitty, Motorcyclist, is Unable to Continue Journey

FRIEND OF PEPPER'S

Toronto, Dec. 23—(CP)— Eric (Nickey) Chitty, young Canadian motorcycle racer who made good on England's exacting speedways, was not a pin when the chances involved were his own life, but when his wife's health is at stake, that's a different matter, so much so that he turned down his big chance to carve out talents in another continent. His father, Art, told the story today.

Members of the West Ham club team that won the British National Speedway championship this year, he was ready to sail from Vancouver this month for Australia, under contract for the big Sydney track.

But the slim, Toronto-born cyclist whose temper smile and daring riding aroused the enthusiasm of weekly crowds of 60,000 to 90,000 at the English speedway, has cancelled his engagement after doctors forbade his wife the trip.

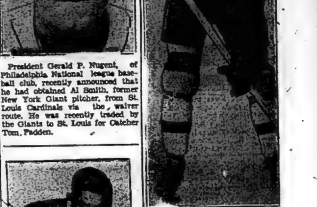
Instead the couple travelled by train from California for a holiday, where they are now. In March, after a flying visit to Toronto, they will return to England for Eric's third professional season in that country.

Twice given up for dead after terrific crashes, the 26-year-old Canadian has suffered multiple injuries time and again in his brief racing career. In 1930 at Tuxpire, after a wreck that left him in hospital for months, doctors gave him no "stop riding on two wheels or else" youll soon be riding on four."

Reported Dead.

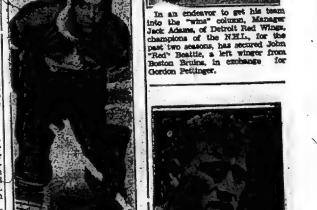
Despite this grim warning, he persevered. He afterwards had other accidents. Once in Wild Haze, after he had "cracked up", he was reported dead. The minister of the parish collected funds for a wreath and bore the memorial to the hospital. There he found Chitty very much alive, though a trifle damaged.

Holder of the Dominion hill climbing championship, the Canadian dirt track title and many track records in the Province, Chitty before going to England, established his prowess on speedways in Ontario and the United States.



Accompanied by his wife and baby, he landed in Britain with but $7 and for a time found the going rough. But his first season at West Ham showed his ability and he has, as he expresses it, "gone ahead, ever since."

Known to his club mates and to thousands of British motorcycle racing enthusiasts as "Rickey, the scorching speedway rider", Chitty makes recordings of his vocal efforts, during the lay-off he is successful his recording contract has been renewed in England.



Besides his racing ability became a fast friend of George Pepper, local motorcycle rider who is in England at present. It was through Chitty's efforts that Pepper was induced to take up dirt track racing and abandon road racing with surprising results. Pepper has already signed a professional contract and strange as it may sound, will take with Chitty on the West Ham track team next spring. Pepper speaks highly of Chitty in all correspondence received at home, stating the Canadian is considered as one of the best dirt track riders in the world.

President Gerald P. Nugent, of Philadelphia National league baseball club, recently announced that he had obtained Al Smith, former New York Giant pitcher, from St. Louis Cardinals via the waiver route. He was recently traded by the Giants to St. Louis for Catcher Tom. Padden.

In an endeavor to get his team into the "wins" column, Manager Jack Adams, of Detroit Red Wings, champions of the N.H.L., for the past two seasons, has secured John "Doc" Romnes, left winger from Boston Bruins, in exchange for Gordon Pettinger.

During a game between Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Americans, Red Hamilton, young defence star with the Leafs, suffered a badly gashed and broken nose. Accordingly to Hamilton, Dr. J. W. Rush, the wound could only have been caused by the butt-end of a hockey stick. Hamilton will be out of action for a couple of weeks at least.

Decomposition of an egg is mainly chemical, due to the sulphur in the composition, while decomposition of ordinary foods is due to bacterial action.

Connecticut is being invaded by death watch beetles—the same pests that once cost England half a million dollars, for repairs to the damaged roof of Westminster Abbey.

For the fifth year, Alabama's Crimson Tide are riding toward the great football classic of the year, the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena, Calif. This year's Alabama team is the lightest team ever sent out by the university, yet it is probably the strongest defensive squad in all its long history of super football teams. On their four-previous trips to the Bowl, they defeated Stanford, Washington, Washington State and tied the Bowl, they defeated Stanford, Washington, Washington State and tied Stanford in 1927, thus piling up the best record of any bowling team. In the above layout, several of the outstanding stars, who will match their strategy against California's Golden Bears, are shown.

The life of a giant pugilist is no bed of roses as Primo Carnera, former heavyweight champion and giant, can testify. One day he was in Budapest hospital, sick and broke, the next day he was just sick. His manager, Leon Sorrel expressed a willingness to cable "The Primo" $10,000, which is all that is left of a $42,000 bundle that was held up for months by litigation.

Here are three members of the so-called French murder ring, disclosed when Eugene Weidmann, a former Saskatchewan resident, was arrested and confessed to killing Brooklyn dancer, Jean De Koven, after they had been taken into custody by French police. At LEFT is Renee Tyrol, also known as Colette, who was sought as the mystery blonde in the case. She turned out upon arrest to be a brunette. Roger Million, at the RIGHT, is claimed to be leader of the band which allegedly slew at least five persons for financial gain. Weidmann, who confessed that he was executioner for the gang, is being taken to his St. Cloud villa, outside Paris, to search for bodies of the victims in the centre panel.

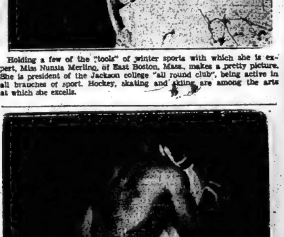
In full uniform, delegates to the first Santa Claus convention in New York drink a toast to each other. The only one who appeared minus a beard was busily booed by his fellow Santas. More than a dozen department store St. Nicks attended the conclave which was called to elevate Santa Claus standards. But what would a child say coming upon all of them at once?

Two of the international clashes which daily threaten to involve outside nations in the Sino-Japanese struggle are graphically pictured here in photographs from Shanghai. At the top French Consul-General Auge (RIGHT), is strenuously arguing with Japanese representatives against their request that military supply trucks of the invading army be permitted to pass through the French concession. At the LEFT is Japanese Vice-Consul Fukuda and in the background an army officer. Britain is involved in the incident shown below, as a body of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, moving up to investigate the throwing of a bomb in the International Settlement during Japan's victory parade, are halted by Japanese troops. The British commander is arguing his right to proceed with the Jap. sentry. The Fusiliers won their point and moved on; France finally permitted passage of the military trucks with stipulation that they be accompanied by an armed French escort.

This soundphoto, taken by a crew member of the German freighter, Fresson and rushed via Manila, Philippine Islands, shows the palatial Dollar Line steamer, President Hoover, aground on a reef off the island of Formosa. Latest reports indicate that the $8,000,000 vessel is breaking up under constant pounding, with salvage tugs unable to refloat her. Her 500 passengers were disembarked and transferred to a sister ship The liner was stranded while following a course from Japanese ports that was designed to keep her out of the Chinese war zone where earlier this year she was severely bombed.

Unrest in Egypt, smouldering since young King Farouk and the cabinet of Premier Mustapha Nahas Pasha (LEFT circle) clashed over status of the Wafd (Nationalist) party youth groups and appointment of senators, was partially alleviated by compromise on both sides. The king withdrew his insistence that one-third of the senate be named by him and Nahas Pasha agreed to dissolution of the blue-shirted Wafd groups. Previously Farouk had given the cabinet only a few hours to new to his will or be dismissed.



Clashes had already occurred in the streets of Cairo like the riot pictured (below) which took place when Egypt was agitating for freedom from British rule. King Farouk (at RIGHT), is shown as he reviewed troops after his recent coronation. Cause of Britain's interest in the dispute is indicated by the map which shows the sphere of British influence in Egypt and Africa and in the Suez canal and Mediterranean zones.

This Spanish Loyalist tank was pressed into service as a troop transport as it moved up toward the front lines in the government's early winter offensive. The drive, sudden and unexpected as deep snow covered much of the battle front, was climaxed by capture of rebel-held Teruel spearhead of a dangerous salient directed at Valencia.

Nineteen years of carrying the mail for Uncle Sam has not dimmed Miss Frances Anderson's ardor, especially around Christmas time, for she gets as much kick out of toting that heavy mail bag around her Duluth, Minn. route as ever. In fact she wants 11 more years in the service before she retires—then she's going to take up farming. At one time she was the only woman in the country with a regular mail route.

Holding a few of the "tools" of winter sports with which she is expert, Miss Fumia Merling, of East Boston, Mass., makes a pretty picture. She is president of the Jackson college "all round club", being active in all branches of sport. Hockey, skating and skiing are among the arts at which she excels.

Manufactured by a Canadian company in Toronto, this training aeroplane is the first of 20 ordered by the department of national defence for use by the R.C.A.F. The machines are built with enclosed and heated cockpit as an advance over the open type training aeroplane now in use and are designed for Canadian flying conditions. The 20 machines will be delivered to the R.C.A.F. within the next few weeks.

Earl Sande, who rode three Kentucky derby winners, is shown with The Chief, being trained by the former jockey for the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap in February. The Chief, owned by Maxwell Hoyard, has been assigned to carry 101 pounds in the Santa Anita big money race.

Mr. Justice J. A. McEvoy, of the Ontario Supreme Court, is reported critically ill of pneumonia in a Toronto hospital. Mr. Justice McEvoy is shown ABOVE.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was the last cop home today, and she put her packages down and said, Pa, unburdened, I'm worn to a shadow. I feel as if I'd never be the same again, such an experience, such an afternoon, such a day.

A certain person told me that she was going to get her shopping done early this Christmas and avoid the rush, pop said. I'm very poor at remembering names, but her face and figure were strikingly the yours, he said, and ma said, Really, I mean really, I've been battered from pillar to post like a cork in a raging sea. I dont see why women cant have a little consideration, even in a crowd, instead of pushing and shoving and treading on each other like the dust under foot, she said.

Well, I'm sick and tearn, or at least I've, pop said, and ma said, I thought I'd never get through alive to bed the last, and even yet I'm not quite sure I have. One woman actually started to jab me with her elbow like a threshing machine as the Japanese Kimona sale, and I said to her, Please, madam, take your time, please don't hurry on the same look, I said to her, but her only answer was another shower of jabs, and so I left.

You came home tuiterened and bare from the shopper was I, Christmas and you never can again, pop said. High ho, history repeals itself, only worse, he said, and ma said, O dear, now I know what a wreck I look like, if that's any consolation.

Then pop said, Just asks why didn't you get your Christmas shopping done early? pop said, and ma said, Well, after all, Willyum, it probely wouldn't feel like Christmas if it wasn't for the last minute and bussle.

It's a womens world, pop said. And he got behind the sporting page and stayed there.

Board Room Gossip

The public is starting to give more attention to the heavy industry stocks, things seem to indicate that such an attitude. Great Britain's armament program will not start down for another four or five years, while the United States, as a result of developments in the Far East, is expected to embark on a naval program of huge proportions. From this it can be gathered that the demand for such products as steel, base metals, etc., should gain momentum in the not distant future.

Even the Dominion will maintain its comparatively moderate armament scheme and although this will not expected to help the unemployment slack, efforts may be made to develop a trading scheme which should be a great boon to business. It is the international market attitude at the moment does not appear warranted, particularly in view of the depressed levels of many of our leading equities.

The Brazilian government has revised the Hanna Steel and Coal. New York, that the present economic situation has compelled it to suspend repatriation until a new agreement could be reached. In this connection the company's service report, since Dec. 15, 1937, on the 5% twenty-year funded bonds of 1931 has not yet been received by the paying agents.

In connection with the reorganization of Nova Scotia Steel and Coal, definite details are expected to be announced early in the new year. In the meantime, the company's bonds and debentures have scored a very sharp run-up.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 22 —(CP)— The setting was more pressing than the buying throughout the early session on the local list today and the and prices were forced downward moderately in practically all groups. Gold and Western oil shares displayed the main weakness. Pamours was slow from the opening. Early gains in the base metals Steels, including Algoma and Dominion Steel, Senbury Consolidated and Lake Shore was strong.

As the session progressed the junior ore issues displayed more vigor and some of the most active, including Osisko and Calgary, Edmonton, registered minor gains.

Industrials, off creeping, were dropped and in the golds the Dominion, Steel B and Dominion Bridge, lost ground.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 23 (AP)—Stocks continued to give ground in today's market with losses ranging to 2 points posted for leaders.

The usual pre-holiday slowness characterized dealings, the principal activity being confined to issues quoted at less than $5 a share. Near the final hour the ticker tape was almost at a standstill. The turnover was at the rate of about 1,100,000 shares.

Bets have a bonding institute, and have been known to fly 65 miles back to a favorite roost.

Cappe Gold Mill Now in Operation

J. C. Hessler, consulting engineer for Cappe Gold Mines has just returned from the property in North Carolina, after spending 2 months completing installation of the 100-ton cyanide plant in the mill and which is now in operation.

Minewise everything is satisfactory, with a face opened up at No. 2 shaft from the 195 to the 195-foot level, in ore, average value being $17 across width of 5 feet.

At No. 5 shaft, a raise from the 250-foot level it up 100 feet in ore showing values up to $70 across mining widths and should average close to $20 across drift width.

TURKEY PRICES REMAIN FIRM ON CITY MARKET

Building Crowded in Latter Hours by Last Minute Shoppers

BIRDS PLENTIFUL

Any ideas that residents of the city may have had regarding shortages of turkeys for Christmas were quickly dispelled at the city market today when King Gobbler in all his majesty, in state as varying as the prices quoted, held court before a crowd of Christmas dinner seekers that towards noon reached proportions that practically eliminated standing room.

There was no excuse for potential purchasers going away without a bird of some description. For vendors and purveyors of turkeys, geese and other fowl promised a veritable display that provided birds to suit every table and pocket book.

Alberta's new baronet came to the province first in 1903 and after some years of farm life in the country south of Red Deer, 100 miles south of Edmonton, went to Mexico, where he was liberated for a time in mining. He also travelled extensively in the United States. In 1932 he returned to Alberta and settled permanently at Pine Lake, where he is now farming 700 acres of land.

Sir Lindsay, 41 Queen's

Sir Arthur is 52 years old and married with one son, a student at Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., and three daughters at home.

Besides farming in a large way, and successfully, Sir Arthur has taken an active interest in public community affairs since making his home at Pine Lake. In 1935 he was Conservative candidate in the Provincial election for Innisfail Constituency but was defeated.

While the baronetcy was originally created in 1628 for William Bruce, House, High Sheriff of Berkshire for Charles I's reign, the family established prominence long before that.

Henry Stonhouse was member of parliament for "Guildford 12" in Edward II's reign, and George Stonhouse, father of William, was one of the clerks of the Privy Chalk under Queen Elizabeth.

Sir Ernest succeeded to the baronetcy in 1894. Sir Arthur is the 11th Baronet.

PLEDGE BROKEN SAYS MACAULAY

Claims Contracts Negotiated Without Consent of Legislature

Toronto, Dec. 22.—(CP)—Leopold Macaulay, Orillia, member of the House Leader, issued a statement today charging Premier Hepburn had broken his pledge to the people by negotiating new power contracts with Ontario municipalities without consent of the Legislature.

Dispute between Mr. Hepburn and Prime Minister Mackenzie King was called a "smoke screen" to distract the public's attention from the broken pledges.

Following is the text of Mr. Macaulay's statement:

"Only Diversion"

The row about exports of power and the calling of names by Mr. Hepburn is only a smoke screen or, as called in military tactics, "a diversion", to distract the public's attention from the broken pledges by Mr. Hepburn on the power question.

For three years, and especially prior to the last general election, Mr. Hepburn has been preaching about the original hydro contracts being "conscription". Indeed he signed behind closed doors, without the knowledge of the legislature or of the hydro municipalities.

He even had it put into the preamble of the legislation Bill that the original contracts were "illegal, void and unenforceable" because they were negotiated by the legislature or the union of hydro municipalities.

Now we find that Mr. Hepburn has negotiated new contracts for substantially the same amount of power and for the same or longer periods of time without the consent of the legislature or the union of hydro municipalities.

...and many a one of the fastest games played, it is also one of the most thrilling and anxious pastimes for both players and spectators. This action picture, taken during a game between New York Rangers and Montreal Canadiens on the former's home ice, is a good example of the anxious moments to be had while the puck bounces crazily around the oval mouth. With Dave Canadien goalie, can be seen lure, lying on the ice with the puck just careening off his pads. Butch" Keeling, No. 10, of Rangers, is also pictured as he tried in vain to score a goal during the game which, ended in a 2-2 tie. Neil Colville, speedy forward of the New Yorker's is pictured second from the left. Cowley, while the Canadien player is defencemen Walter Buswell.

School For They Two

The closing exercises Wednesday afternoon at the special Student Nurses classes in St. Agnes Manor for the fall term under the direction of Mrs. J. A. Wilkin took place from two until four o'clock. About a score of regular pupils were in attendance accompanied by proud mothers, fathers, aunts and uncles, grandparents, playmates, younger brothers and sisters, older and juvenile friends. Mrs. Wilkinson, to the invitations issued showing keen interest and appreciation, filling the little quarter downstairs to full capacity in a most happy manner.

Most the surroundings of the week's work in school room with blackboards and designs the following program was rendered in recalling much original talent and skilful training for those of mature years of age to produce viz.:

Recitation, "A Welcome" — Lily Bell Mayo; Solo, "Jolly Old Santa"; Folk Dance, "Will You?" Solo, Dora Wrong; Chorus, "Ask to Keep Awake"; Solo, "Once There Was a Little Kitty," Barney Shaw; Quintet, James Freeman, Dorothy Dickey, Joan Faulkner, Kaldwell Mercer, Douglas Kerr; Tap Dance, Kathleen Morrell; Folk Dance, "Sing a Song of Sixpence"; Solo, "Hang up the Baby's Stocking" Ann Brenn; Folk Dance, "Three Happy Children"; Trio, "The Wonderful Tree" Douglas Kerr, Barney Shaw, Joan Kerr; March, "Capt. Sassy Bunch" Barney Shaw; Recitation, Joan Faulkner and Jane Freeman; Dramatization of "Wedding of Jack and Jill"; Folk Dance, "I See You"; Trio, A. Brenn, Joan Faulkner, Jane Freeman; Recitation, "Table Manners," Shirley Elaine Murray; Solo, Dorothy Dickey.

One of the pleasant surprises of the afternoon was the most everyone the showing of a few reels of was the showing of a few reels of Pop Eye moving pictures of the kindness of Mr. Browne of the Big A and Stewart-Warner Radio and Atomic Corporation here—At the hands of Mr. Ralph Ketcheson the apparatus was set up quickly. Windows were darkened and a roll screen utilized. This was particularly enjoyed by young children, how they went into embarrassing fits of delight could be heard as well as seen.

Following the period of entertainment they were escorted upstairs to the private apartments of Mrs. Wilkin which were handsomely decorated with Yuletide effects. After the older folk were seated in the dressing room the young hospitals invariably served their mothers and others individually at restaurant tables with delicious cakes, candies and one or more cups of delicious tea also. In this regard Miss Caulfield too as only youngsters can do when measuring up to the standards of an affair and not entirely strange if removed entirely from the home environment.

Further treats were in store for the little ones when Mrs. Rich on participating in the school activities was presented with a jolly basket of candies at the hands of Miss Elinor Bernstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernstein, as a token of affection to her associates. Then Mrs. Kathleen Mercer, daughter of Mr. Morrell of the Belleville Fruit Store, gave a basket to each one's juvenile associate. A bag of candy from Mrs. Starling, Bridge Street, and dressmaker considerably completed this phase of the proceedings.

A beautiful Christmas tree was then unladen of many gifts. In a sense Miss. Wilkin played the role of Santa Claus. Through a method arranged for drawing numbered slips of paper and one other on an exchange list of mementos for the latter. A number of guests from the hostess was bestowed upon each of the pupils. Many remembrances directed Mrs. Wilkin's way as a mark of regard for her arduous efforts over the operations of Tiny Tots School. It was quite evident yesterday that the public relating care is executed over the rudiments of education in this kindergarten undertaking. More than the usual seeking, out-cost and novice work is attempted, greater than reading and writing is taught, by thoroughness, firm orderly direction and deep interest good deportment is quite manifest around the opportunities for individual and small class privileges for moulding such tiny ones.

Able assistance in the afternoon's variety was rendered by Miss Helen Sulman and Miss Lois Wilkin.

Grateful expressions on all sides were bandied in at the close of the pleasant gathering by Mrs. (Dr.) J. A. Faulkner.

Why the Weather?

Science Service Meteorologist Climate! The complexity of climate is readily realized when it is realized that it depends upon so many things. The most obvious is latitude because that determines the intensity of sunshine. Then comes the relation of a place to land and ocean; we all know how its sea, especially when it lies west of a place, modifies the climate. Mountains in sequence to winds, the differences between climates on plain, plateau, and mountain. Mountains, mountain barriers are very effective in making differences of temperature and rainfall on their two sides. The prevailing winds, ocean currents, the prevalence of storms (cyclonic depressions) are also prominent factors.

THE WEATHER

Mayor Arnott Honored with K. C.

Included in the list of one hundred and seventeen Kings' Counsel appointed yesterday by the Hon. Gordon D. Conant, Attorney General of Ontario is the name of Richard D. Arnott, M.L.A.

Mayor Arnott, or "Dick" as he is familiarly known to his associates and friends, is one of the youngest K.C.'s in Canada, and wears his new honour with characteristic modesty. Interviewed this morning his worship smilingly refused to comment on the distinction placed upon him, and talked of matters other than the one in question.

"Dick" Arnott, one of the city's most popular child-lovers, first saw the light of day under a Belleville roof. Graduating from public schools of the city, he at once entered Belleville Collegiate Institute from which institution he graduated with honors. But his boyhood was not confined to things scholastic alone. Sports played a prominent part in the moulding of the character of this clever son of Belleville, and for a number of years he participated in many phases of athletics.

Articled to Local Firm.

Leaving school, the intricacies of the legal profession appealed to him and he became articled to Mr. E. J. Butler of the firm of Porter, Butler and Payne. In 1924 he attended Osgoode Hall, Toronto, graduating from that institution in 1927.

A full-fledged lawyer, "Dick" joined the firm of Porter, Payne and Arnott, with which he is now associated.

Turning to things municipal, he offered his services to the electorate of the city by running for alderman two years as alderman. In 1937 "Dick" started for the mayoralty, five honor in the city and was elected as Chief Magistrate by an overwhelming majority.

In the recent provincial elections he was chosen by the Conservative candidate for the riding of West Hastings, opposing Hon. Harry C. Faulkner, Minister of Health. Electoral by a small majority "Dick" is now a member of the Legislative Assembly at Queen's Park.

The new Kings' Counsel was the recipient of a host of congratulations on his new honor this morning.

Fraternally he is a member of Ionic Lodge, No. 224, A.F. and A.M., and socially a member of the local Kinsmen Club and honorary "member" of the Kiwanis Club.

FAMILY TROUBLE FLARES AT PARTY

Father Said to Have Shot Wife Later and to Have Suicided

Castor, Alta., Dec. 24—(CP)— Tragedy followed a Christmas tree party in this community southeast of Edmonton and today a father and child were dead.

Nick Solcronka, 62-year-old Russian farmer, was found dead in his farm home last night less than 12 hours after his wife was shot fatally at the same farm of a son, Roy, who told police the father threatened to kill the family.

Solcronka and his wife had been separated "unofficially" for years. The woman was living at Roy's home. The trouble flared at a Christmas tree concert in a local school on Tuesday night and Roy said the father threatened to kill his wife and children. The elder Solcronka was arrested Wednesday.

Nick Solcronka was reported to have shot through a window of his son's home yesterday morning but missed hitting his wife. Then he set fire to the house with gasoline, shot and killed the woman as she stumbled from the burning building, reports said. The fire burned out with serious damage.

Roy said he escaped while his father was reloading a rifle.

TRUCKS SPEED CHRISTMAS CHEER TO MANY HOMES

One Hundred Hampers Distributed by Fire-men

MANY TRUCKS USED

Also 700 Children Are Given Toys by Firemen

Fire and city trucks sped swiftly away from Fire Hall No. 1 early this morning bearing the first loads of Christmas baskets to the needy families of the city. Members of the fire department worked all night packing fruits, vegetables, meats, candies and other goodies that go to make up the baskets. Over one hundred families will enjoy a merry Christmas day by the kindness shown them by the firefighters this year. Included in the baskets given to these needy families were, potatoes, beef, tomatoes, carrots, beets, parsnips, macaroni, honey, oranges, apples, bread, nuts, candy, cheese, cakes, table sauces, flour and other articles.

Pitchal No. 2 likewise was a hive of activity as loaded trucks and cars swept away on their mission of good will, furnishing toys to upwards of seven hundred underprivileged children of the city. Under Deputy Fire Chief Gerald Vance, distribution of the toys at early hour yesterday afternoon went forward with precision and despatch. Firemen arose with the sun this morning and continued their mission of cheer. It is thought that all families and children will receive their good cheer, clothing and food by an early hour this afternoon.

Airmen who lost their lives in the crash were Flying Officer J. A. MacLean, Pilot Officer R. L. Douglas and Flight Sergeant R. P. O'Connor.

London, Dec. 24—(CP Cable) — Bits of blue sky and sunshine cheered London's shoppers today as they entered the harrowing struggle in streets and stores to contend with Christmas crowds for the last time this year.

Fort Erie Editor Killed in Crash

Fort Erie, Ont., Dec. 24—(CP)— Lt.-Col. Leonard Le Sueur, 52-year-old editor of the Fort Erie Times-Review, weekly newspaper, was killed last night when the automobile he was driving plunged into the ditch three miles east of Douglastown.

Siddall was returning from a visit to Buffalo, where he had received Christmas gifts from his mother. Accompanying him was Gordon Needham, 15, who had hoped to attend a late meeting here to arrange for distribution of baskets in connection with Fort Erie's community Christmas.

Not seriously injured, Needham said Siddall took his eye from the road ahead when he took a fur lap-boot from beside him. The car wheels caught in a rut on the shoulder of the highway, throwing the machine into the ditch. Siddall's neck was broken.

Interest is fairly keen, reports from the northern municipalities state and in all likelihood well attended meetings in all municipalities will follow the nominations.

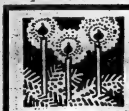
Santa Visits V. O. N. Clinic

One hundred and twenty-five children of pre-school age had a fascinating afternoon yesterday at the Well Baby Clinic annual Christmas Tree. The rooms had a festive air with their lovely Christmas decorations, artistically arranged, and the beautiful tree, brilliant with lights and Yuletide decorations.

Santa Claus arrived promptly at two o'clock and the excitement of the little ones was at its height. Every tiny visitor was presented with a gift. Santa in his exit from the Clinic was followed by a crowd of older children who had collected outside.



Solemn-eyed infants watched this unusual visitor intently while their older brothers and sisters shyly confided their Christmas wishes to him.

MEMBERS THANK RETIRING MAYOR FOR FINE SERVICE

1937 Council Adjourns Sine Die After Business Transacted

REPORTS GIVEN

Special Parking Committee Reports on Progress Made

Belleville City Council adjourned sine die on Monday night after holding the last regular meeting of the year. The 1938 council will be inaugurated early in the New Year and will have a personnel considerably different from the one now in office. Goodbyes were said by Aldermen Armstrong, Baldwin and Clapp, while Aldermen Greenlee and Harvey will also retire although neither of these Aldermen were present at the meeting. Very little business was transacted the council cleaning up a few details left over from the year's business.

Before the council adjourned Mayor R. D. Arnott, who is also leaving the council expressed his appreciation of the fine loyalty given him by the members of the council and the city officials and employees during his year of office. "I have made friendships and contacts during my term of office that will ever remain with me", said Mayor Arnott and "I thank everyone for the fine co-operation that has been given me this past year. I will not single any individual out because that would be unfair but I congratulate you all for the fine work that you have done and the business ability we have brought to the Aldermanic Board."

To the Mayor he expressed his thanks for the honor that had been conferred upon him and wished for all a Merry Christmas and a Prosperous New Year. City Clerk Wilfrid Holmes replied for the officials and stated the Mayor's thanks would be conveyed to the staff.

Fine Co-operation

Burton F. Jennings told the Mayor that the fine co-operation that had existed was only due to the fine spirit exemplified by himself in presiding over the council. The department chairman was allowed to run his department and you were always in the background willing to lend a helping hand", said Ald. Jennings. "It has been a year of pleasure to work with you and on behalf of the council extend to you and your family all good things at this Christmastide. Ald. Clapp also corroborated the sentiments expressed by Ald. Jennings stating that the Mayor never meddled into department affairs and was always a guiding star in any matter of business.

Alderman Baldwin stated he came into the council as a green hand but that he always tried to do his best and "matters were simplified very much for me by your fair and square handling of the questions before the board", said Alderman Baldwin and "for this I salute you." Alderman Armstrong told the members it had been a pleasure for him to sit with the council of last year and for the six years he has been a member of the body. "You have always been fair and used good judgment on every question", said Alderman Armstrong and "you treated everyone on the square. I regret leaving the council for I have made many friendships that I hope will remain with me for life. There is a fascination of being a member of the council and I believe the business of the past year has been handled satisfactorily and in the best interests of the ratepayer, whose guardians we are. The affairs of the city are in good shape and I wish for the incoming council lots of luck and prosperity in the coming year." The Alderman also extended his thanks to the city hall officials, who in every instance were willing to assist in every way possible. Alderman Baldwin led in three rousing cheers for the retiring Mayor.

Presented With Cheese

On the desk of each Alderman and the dias of the Mayor, there was placed a package of Canadian Cheddar cheese, given by the Central Ontario Cheesemaker's Association and the thanks of the council was expressed by Mayor Arnott and the clerk was instructed to acknowledge the gift with thanks. Turning to the business of the evening, Jack Robbin, custodian of the city clock was given a raise in stipend beginning the first of January, Mr. Robbin will now receive $100 a year instead of the $80 as formerly. The agreement with the Hastings Arena and as outlined by Mr. S. R. Burrows in his letter to the council last meeting was accepted by the council and a recommendation that the said Arena Company be immediately. In return the Arena will allow children to skate free on each Saturday afternoon and Saturday morning and also pay their taxes and water rates each year. The agreement is quite satisfactory both to the city and the Arena.

The council was in receipt of $30 from Ameliasburg Township to defray expenses incurred by the Fire Department in a run to a fire in that Township some time ago. The council also expressed their thanks for the co-operation shown in controlling the fire by the Belleville department. An account of an employee with the hospital was ordered paid by the council although objection was made by Ald. Baldwin, stating the debt was incurred in 1935. Ald. Armstrong in the chair told the members the council was bound by the statutes of the Compensation Act. A gas mask complete with all attachments and speaking diaphram was ordered purchased for the Fire Department at a cost of $70. A by-law ratifying a deed or conveyance was passed through the various stages. All indigent accounts will be presented to the incoming council and placed in the hands of the rent collector for collection according to the motion passed. The corporation is legally bound to pay indigent accounts and these have to be collected from the recipients providing it can be obtained.

A report on special parking was brought in and was ordered filed. The report is as follows:

Special Parking

The special parking committee, whose members are Aldermen Jennings, Barlow, Lewis and Cushing, beg leave to submit their report as the work of the committee for the year now ending.

We wish to say that there has been much difficulty in securing the necessary releases from the owners of the properties which are so much needed for special parking. Some have argued against signing saying that the municipality was trying to acquire title to their property. We have assured each and everyone that the city does not wish to acquire, nor has it tried to acquire title to any of the properties in question. The city desires only, that for the improvements now being made and to be made to the various properties without cost to the owners, that they will in return allow the use of those properties for extra parking to relieve congestion of traffic on our business streets. We wish to add that the releases are in effect, having been signed, will give employment to at least eight or ten men and a foreman until some time late in January, and cover practically all the available space suitable for parking, from near the Lower Bridge north to the old raceway.

While there has been considerable delay in improving the several sites, this delay has been from a shortage of relief labor throughout the Spring and Summer. Only recently has the work been going forward, but in that short space of time the work of removal of sub-standard buildings followed by proper levelling and grading has been steadily moving ahead, making most satisfactory progress. Already parking has been started in a portion of the new area.

In closing this report, we wish to point out to the tax-payers that this Council is not making any capital expenditure for these improvements. The work was commenced with the distinct understanding that relief labor should be used throughout. This being viewed, stated in the recommendation, it was unanimously passed by the Council.

6th Sidney

6th Sidney—Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Rose entertained to tea on Sunday night Mr. and Mrs. George Rickley and children and Mrs. Annie Rickley of Wallbridge also Mr. and Mrs. Copeland and children.

The Christmas entertainment which was held in Scotts Church on Monday night was well attended.

Mr. Murney Bell of Murray was a Sunday guest at the home of his aunt Mrs. George Bell.

Mr. and Mrs. D. V. Monk of Kingston, also Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Sunborn of Picketale were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sokal.

THE First CHRISTMAS CARD

Christmas without greetings? One can scarcely imagine it! Yet the happy custom of sending cards began only 91 years ago. In 1846 the famous artist, J. C. Horsley, R.A., designed an inspired Christmas message for Sir Henry Cole of England, who distributed 1,000 copies.

This year The Mutual Life of Canada reproduces this design as a warm greeting to policyholders and friends. Its beautiful theme "feeding the hungry" (left panel), "clothing the naked" (right panel) and "creating good cheer" (centre), portrays the spirit of MUTUAL effort, not only at Christmastime, but year in and year out since 1869.

The policyholders are the owners of this Company, and they or their beneficiaries have received Sixty-Nine Million Dollars in Dividends and a total of over Two Hundred and Thirty-One Million Dollars in death claims, matured policies and other payments. How welcome this income must have been to families and individuals in time of need!

To make sure that your family will always have a Merry Christmas, arrange for life insurance protection through one of our representatives.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, 148 Front Street, Belleville.

W. R. HORTON, PUBLISHER.

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

The merriest and happiest time of the year has come and in the spirit of the ancient greeting, the Ontario Intelligencer wishes its readers and everyone a very Merry Christmas. This salutation which has been honored in the lives and deeds of men and women for centuries still expresses as no other does the spirit of this season. The change of time has not meant a change in this greeting, for it contains all that can be said to express goodwill and brotherhood. From early days of the English language this phrase has come and down it will go to last as long as the English tongue is spoken to bear good wishes in the full meaning of the word Christmas with its blessings.

CHRISTMAS COMES AGAIN

Christmas Eve has come again, heralded by a glorious company of hopes and fancies and imaginations, built up through the weeks which have passed and on the basis of Christendom's honor to the day when its Master was born. Richest in fancies of all the festivals of the year as Christmas is, Christmas Eve is the greatest in lively structure of imagination, fancy, religion and custom to which all are so accustomed. Christmas Eve brings mankind together in great measure into one company and the idea of brotherhood seems apposite. In numerous homes weeks of preparation go into plans for Christmas Eve and for Christmas Day, and the absorption of thoughts at Christmas is shown by the fact that no national holiday, no fete of any other character can engenders the mid-winter festival of this glad time.

The beginning of the celebration of Christmas is not exactly dated, some references having been made to the festival as flourishing in the 160 A. D. In the first certain mention is in the time of the Emperor Commodus, 180-192 A. D. Early in the third century it is spoken of by Clement of Alexandria. The early church had no fixed time to celebrate Christmas. The ultimate choice of the season was due. It is said, probably to the recognition of the winter solstice as the turning point of the year, all things after that seeming to prepare for a new life at activity after the winter sleep of death. Celtic and Germanic tribes held the season in high veneration from the earliest times. Many ancient beliefs have crept into Christmas usage, such as the lighting of the Yule log, a custom once widely prevalent but now fallen into disuse, being an inheritance from Lithuanian lore. The practice of decorating churches is said to have come from earliest times and the mistletoe which was so generally used for that purpose was the sacred plant of the Druids. The custom of presenting friends with gifts dates back to the days of the ancient Romans. It was the aim of the Christian church to "ennoble any customs which had survived from bygone ages, above their heathen associations and with this object their noble liturgy was framed and many dramatic representations of the birth and early events in the life of Christ were instituted. Hence there arose manger songs and Christmas carols. Many customs, familiar in the Middle Ages, were lost, and revived by Charles Dickens the novelist. Then there are the Christmas box and the Christmas tree, a relic from Roman days. Santa Claus, Father Christmas, Pere Noel, Robin Goodfellow St. Nicholas, or Knecht Ruppreckt is one of the outstanding developments and has lasted to this day despite those who would dethrone the merry spirit of Christmas as represented by the little fat man, dressed in red and bringing gifts to good children.

In present times, the entertainment, the return of friends and the family gatherings are all marks of Christmas, but the period is for only one or two or three days, because of the complication of modern life.

With the high festivities, the religious aspect of the festival is not forgotten as the churches and Sunday schools increase the spiritual significance to the world of the birth of the Founder of Christianity. In some churches there are midnight services and in more churches there are services on Christmas Day. This age which has heard so loudly the burden and the cry of the distressed and under-privileged has not neglected to regard at this season the thought that man is his brother's keeper and that those blessings which have come to the race through the event which is celebrated on Christmas Day, should be shared. Therefore there is no small stress upon regard for the poor in the preparation of festive fare for the less fortunate.

In some aspects, that is, in some of the customs, Christmas may not be observed as it was in the past but today perhaps it bears a closer relationship to the original purpose, that of honoring the day of Christ's birth which has influenced life more abundantly and fully than any other event in history.

CHRISTMAS BELLS

O, Christmas bells are pealing
O'er mountain, lake and hill;
They chime a joyous message
That bids the heart be still.

They sing of Eastern shepherds,
Who watched o'er flocks by night,
A-trek as holy pilgrims,
Led by a Star's new light.

They sing of shepherd's honor,
Ere morning sun arose,
To find in lowly manger
A Child in swaddling clothes.

O, Christmas bells are ringing,
O'er countries far and near;
They peal a joyous message
To the list'ning drinking ear.

They waft to ev'ry Nation
O'er mountain, lake and glen:
"Glory to God in the Highest,
And peace, goodwill, toward men!"

MABEL BLACK MYERS in Montreal Gazette.

EACH CHRISTMAS BRINGS NEW WONDERS, and this Christmas will be a far cry from those of the childhood of the parents of today. Hanging up the stocking has become a mere symbol, for most modern children would scorn to hang up just one stocking and be satisfied to find in it just what their parents or grandparents did many years ago—a candy cane, an orange, some mixed candy, raisins and fancy cakes, perhaps. Now gift giving has been scaled away up to motor cars and diamonds. Who said hard times?

WHEN WE STAND AT THE CROSSROADS OF LIFE and gaze back over the wonders of the years and the many contributions to human comfort and happiness which have marked life's journey, with bright beacons we should rejoice with the Psalmist David, who in awe and admiration, no doubt, expressed himself in the eighth Psalm thus:

O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is Thy name in all the earth; Who has set thy glory above the Heavens.

When I consider Thy heavens the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars which Thou has ordained;

What is man that Thou art mindful of him? and the son of man that Thou visitedh him...

For Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and has crowned him with glory and honour.

Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands; Thou hast put all things under his feet;

O Lord, our God, how excellent is Thy name in all the earth.

BIRDS SINGING; GRASS GROWING, SUN WARM, TEMPERATURE 70-80 DAILY. ALL GAMES GOING ON OUT OF DOORS. Such is the message just received by the staff of The Great Family Journal from C. M. Reid at St. Petersburg, Florida, with Christmas greetings. The South is having a big season and Florida is having a rich harvest from tourists who have flitted south with the swallows, trailers, hikers and pikers, robins and robbers.

GOOD WISHES HAVE FLOODED THIS GREAT FAMILY JOURNAL for several days and the flood shows no signs of abating. From far and near come expressions of good will, and sincere friendship, with the ever welcome expressions of appreciation at the continued efforts of the management to make this a Bigger and Better newspaper, every day in every way better and better. Messages from a distance include one from C. M. Reid who sends kindly remembrances from Florida for the Belleville colony wintering there or thereabouts, Mr. and Mrs. W. Wright (Mae Herity) send greetings from Dallas, Texas; Bernie Heid, genial publicity manager for the Cole Brothers—Clyde Beatty Circus which visited Belleville last June, sends kindly remembrances from Hot Springs, Arkansas. Bernie is getting boiled out for a strenuous season, and getting ready to plan a big comeback for next season with the Greatest and Grandest Show on Earth. Now that the great Dexter Fellowes has gone into permanent winter, quarters in that glory summer land, we beg leave to nominate Bernie Head for the position just vacated by Dexter that of Dean of that illustrious constellation of brains and bonhomie the Amalgamated Order of Confirmed Boosters and Truth-Loving Embellishers of the Naked, or Otherwise Truth, human and otherwise, the Circus Publicity Men of North America. Here's to you Bernie, may your placid good nature never be ruffled by anything more serious than a bull elephant gone berserk and on the loose or a cagefull of young lions loose in the menagerie tent just before the matinee performance.

Birds With Stooges

Ed Pega etc.

The great lover of the animal world, it turns out, is the black-crowned night heron.

The only bird that habitually has a "stooge," the hero employs in courting a routine of reception, play-acting and psychological domination, says Dr. Kingsley Noble of the Museum of Natural History.

A typical heron love affair, Dr. Noble disclosed, in a lecture entitled "Courtship Feeding," study goes like this:

Soon after birth, herons join in pairs, without regard to sex; each member of each pair dominates the other demonstrating his head-higher than the-"stooge";

In the mating season, a male approaches a female and, taking the submissive role, tries to inveigle her into marriage by the "bargain" system.

When the female indicates tentative approval, the male at the psychological moment reverses the roles and starts dominating. If he doesn't the female will leave.

Then to demonstrate his prowess as a potential husband, the male heron for days goes through calisthenics, handicapping himself with his beak—he never does anything with them—they just symbolize all the houses he could build," Dr. Noble explains;

Finally if he has carried the show off properly, the female consents to a permanent match.

Men in the Kitchen

He may have been jesting a bit, but the confession made by Leslie Hore-Belisha, British Secretary of State for War, that he had never married because his cooking required such a variety that he had never been able to find a wife who met his high standards, is the latest in the epidemic of a noble but harsh statement of fact. In fact, the whole, this complaint about women has been made for centuries by discerning male gourmets as well as by clumsy men who merely like to have something to eat. Virtually every domestic establishment of size and with pretensions to good living depends upon a man cook. It is fundamental.

The common experience of almost every man forms up evidence which argues against the fitness of women in the kitchen. Most men, among the accomplishments can name several excellent cooks—men who are as proud of their ability as the lovely wife would be of playing Brahms, Rachmaninoff or Beethoven's thrilling down Fifth Avenue with Mrs. Astor or doing any other artistic thing perfectly. But the women are few. Even the dim memory of the proverbial Aunt Hattie, or the good things at Grandma's house, is probably distorted. And how many men, inviting a lovely woman out to dinner, have been disappointed and disappointed because she would eat nothing except a mess of field salad? Sometimes men feel that women, in their hearts, are really opposed to food.

Observe what women do when they let themselves go and try to impress their sisters. Either by fixing up something fancy or giving the world a new recipe. Simplicity soundness and flavor—the basis of good cooking—go out the window, and in their place far too often for comfort we find horrible, fantastic and completely inedible creations. Even Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, the great feminist, concedes cheerfully that it is still a man's world and this survey is true in the matter of cooking. And although, according to our accredited prophets, we shall not have to marriarchy for another thousand years, when it is, I suppose it will mutiny that the men will be ousted from the kitchen. By that time, doubtless, our women will be honest enough, and strong enough, to admit that they want nothing to do with cooking. Men will at last come into their own, the cook—New York Herald Tribune.

Waiting Fee

Isn't THE SOO a wonderful place? Here good sense and good will among our many races prevails. We have Anglo-Saxons, Italians, French, Germans, Poles, Finns, Indians and other peoples living in peace together, enjoying equal opportunity and tolerant of each other's views. And as the years go by we hear less of prejudices. We discover the good points in our neighbor and give him credit for them, for we see that he is doing his best to contribute to good Canadian citizenship. No man suffers because of his race or religion, and he is treated on his merits as a man. We have discovered in fact that to have friends we must be one.—Soo Star-Beacon.

Books

A book and shoe survey in the United States shows that bathroom boots, once so popular with a section of the male population, have vanished from the scene. Some old-time dealers report that they have not stocked them for 15 or 20 years. The fact is a reminder that the elastic side boots, with straps fore and aft to pull them on, likewise are seldom or never seen nowadays, and where are the little Wellington boots with the copper toecaps which used to nickles the small boys with indulgent fathers? They, too, seem to have gone with the wind.—Montreal Gazette.

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

"... and the loveliest Christmas Bell was the TELEPHONE BELL"

How could Sally Watson be expected to catch the Yuletide spirit? Jack, her own Jack, was five hundred miles away and Christmas just wasn't Christmas without him. If Church bells chimed their joyous message; sleigh bells jingled merrily; infectious gayety and laughter bubbled all around her in vain.

Then the telephone bell rang and Jack was calling his Christmas Greetings to a sparkling, starry-eyed Sally. ("... the loveliest Christmas bell this year was the telephone bell" said Sally afterwards.

East Seymour

East Seymour, Dec. 24.—Rev. J. A. McMillan was called to Glengarry County to see his mother who is very ill.

Burnbrae St. Andrew's Sunday school held their annual Christmas tree concert on Tuesday evening. The basement was comfortably filled with interested parents and young folk. The school sections Nos. 11 and 4 furnished the program largely with the splendid training of their teachers, Misses Fern Weatherell and Claire Curtis respectively. The program of choruses, music, recitations, etc., were given but of course Santa arriving, all the young folk were delighted as each received besides other presents, candy and nuts. Mr. Alex Milne, superintendent of the Sunday school, presided.

Miss Fern Weatherell, teacher of S.S. No. 11 had the usual Christmas treat for her pupils in the school on Wednesday. There was also an exchange of gifts and games in which the children enjoyed themselves and that finished the term before the holidays.

Friends sincerely sympathize with Mr. Fred Peake, Jr., in the sad bereavement of the loss of his devoted wife, whose death occurred so soon on Wednesday, Dec. 22. The deceased had been in ill health for a number of years, suffering from diabetes but only a short time confined to bed. Of an amiable disposition she had many friends who will deeply mourn her loss. Her sorrowing husband, two daughters, Mrs. Jack Rannie of Maple and Jean at home, two sons, Donald and Ted, and her father, Mr. George Riddell, survive. Mr. Riddell who recently passed his 85th birthday is seriously ill in the home of the deceased. The time of the funeral is not known.

Friends on the sixth line of Rawdon and of Seymour East regret the sudden passing of Mr. Ernest Woolston which occurred at the home of his elder daughter, Mrs. Shoemaker,

Temper Your Criticisms of A Child

By LISA GRENELLE

The Wellington children, when appearing for Mother's "once over" before venturing into the world or down to Sunday dinner, never had that guilty, rebellious apprehensive look that distinguishes most children under like circumstances.

Moreover the Wellington children never really resented any of Mother's reproofs. Undoubtedly if they didn't always agree with her, or even consider her criticisms always quite justified, they never bore it against her.

Mother Wellington's criticism was accepted and taken good-naturedly because it didn't come too often, too continually. She was not always "harping" on things. And her praise always came first. She had never been known to open the scene with a reproof. As Delia's entrance for that day would never begin with, "Delia! You can't go to school that way! It's disgusting—all those spots down the front of your dress!"

Compliments First

Instead, Mrs. Wellington would begin with, "How clean you look, Delia. It's so becoming brushed back that way." And withhold the criticism until Delia was filled with compliments and eggs—in a fresh, relaxed and receptive mood.

Then Mother would assume that, of course, Delia hadn't noticed the spots and assure her that she had plenty of time to change to her blue checked dress that was her favorite, and just back from the laundry.

It's the first words that count, that set the tone for the entire session coming home from school, or shopping really.

Can't it wiser to have those first remarks wonderful and appreciative? "It's a lovely day, isn't it?" or "How well you look." . . . "I heard something nice about you yesterday," etc.

Off the Defensive

After that, the person is off the defensive. Then, properly stuffed with cheer and compliments, or after an hour's peaceful privacy, he can "take it". In fact, feeling reserved, appreciated and fed, he may even welcome a suggestion as to how to improve himself. It may even take his mistakes as humorously as the rest of the family, nevertheless resolving not to give them that particular opportunity for laughter again.

Very seldom does a child or adult who gets his share of praise and love has reason to feel appreciated, resent criticism. Become defiant, rebellious, determined to have his way just to "show them", no matter how he suffers for it.

ZION W. M. S.

The annual meeting held at the home of Mrs. Chalmers Thompson, opened with a very inspiring Devotional period. A Christmas worship song by Mrs. Cranston was followed by secretarial reports and business for the year, which showed a successful year's work accomplished. The treasury also was fielded the sum of $5.36.

Mrs. Cranston favored with a solo and Mrs. Ralph Sills gave a Chapter from the Study Book Mrs. Thite, then took charge of the election of officers for 1938, with the following officials:

President, Mrs. R. Bunnett; 1st. Vice-President, Mrs. Ralph Sills; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. Harold Beatty; Treasurer, Mrs. Wm. Thite; Recording and Press Secretary, Mrs. Clifford Ketcheson; Corr. Sec., Mrs. Harley Sargent; Sec. Mrs. H. Casey; Monthly Sec. Mrs. R. Cranston; Temperance Sec., Mrs. H. Sloane; Sec. Mrs. R. Beatty; Baby Band, Mrs. W. G. Ketcheson; Mission Band Leaders, Mrs. A. Cranston and Miss M. Treverton.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Mourning

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I—My father passed away three months ago. I would like to know whether or not it is proper for anyone in mourning to send out Christmas cards.

2—Also, inform me what to do in case my family receives Christmas cards?

M.

1—If you especially wish to send Christmas cards to your relatives and close friends, it is proper for you to do so, provided you choose paper cards carefully. You wouldn't send them broadcast, for this would obviously seem opposed to the spirit of mourning. Nor would you send any but the most conservative and conventional of cards.

Instead of sending a Christmas card, you might be interested in the idea of sending a brief, friendly note of good wishes, written on a large, plain white card or on white semi-note paper. Just a sentence or two perhaps like this:

Dear Mary:

This is just a message to tell you that I am thinking of you this Christmas-time, and am wishing for you many happy days in the New Year.

Devotedly

2—It is not taken for granted that Christmas cards are thankfully for. But of course it is gracious to thank them. A note like this perhaps:

Dear Betty—

You were kind, very kind, to send me such a friendly and sweet message of greeting at Christmas-time, and I thank you with all my heart for your thought. Thank you too for being such a true friend to me these past months.

The happiest of New Years to you

Affectionately,

Presenting the Bride

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—In a few weeks I am to be married and I would like to be given away. The closest male relation who can be present is my brother-in-law, by father who died a few years ago. Would it be proper for my brother-in-law to give me away under these circumstances.

2—Is it proper to have the wedding dinner for the immediate families as the groom's parents intend which, of course, shares the expense? The reception will be held at the bride's home after the ceremony.

3—What type of clothes should be worn by the groom and ushers at a four o'clock wedding?

K.

1—Yes, it would be entirely proper for your brother-in-law to present you in marriage. But perhaps a better plan would be for you to have your brother-in-law with you down the aisle, and then have your mother present you in marriage. Undoubtedly your mother would wish to have this honor and special privilege. At the proper time in the ceremony your mother steps from her place in the first pew on the left, of the aisle, presents you in marriage, and then steps back to her place in the pew.

2—It is always the best plan for the bride's family to plan and to pay for the post-ceremony festivities. Since you are having the reception at your home, it is not necessary to have the dinner also.

3—For a formal day wedding—that is, when the bride wears the traditional white wedding dress and veil—the ushers and the wedding party wear attire consistent with this formality: cutaway coats, dark striped trousers, and appropriately formal accessories. For an informal wedding, the men wear dark business suits, or dark striped trousers and short black coats.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Color mounts in importance for millinery, and a new hat is in light blue suede with a swirl of coq feathers reaching to the shoulder.

Back to school wearing a little coat of brown corduroy with beaver collar and cuffs. The dress is of beige wincheen, with belt of dark brown suede.

At least, one dinner dress should be in the wardrobe of the woman who goes out a great deal. A charming model is in black bengaline, the skirt high-waisted, long and slim. The draped bodice is formed of mother-of-pearl sequins. There is a black baghera bolero.

No need to worry when wearing an all-white dress. A beauty is in lack net with slim bodice and full skirt marked by black velvet diamond shaped appliques.

Twilight glamor is important this year as cocktail frocks register strongly. These frocks are in crepe or velvet with sequin or gold trim, while others have fringed detail. Black is usually first choice. The skirts are invariably of street length.

Just tops in luxury is the evening coat of velvet with voluminous bracelet sleeves of silver fox.

An ancient Chinese walled city is to be reproduced at a cost of over a million dollars for San Francisco's 1939 world's fair.

MAY THIS CHRISTMAS BRING ADDED PLEASURES OF TRUE HEALTH AND HAPPINESS TO EACH AND EVERYONE OF YOU, AND MAY THE COMING YEAR BE ONE OF LASTING JOY.

Another Remedy For Migraine—One Sided Headache

As there have been so many "cures" for migraine—so-sided headache—many of which have not proved satisfactory in the course of time, most research physicians today like to try their discoveries in a number of cases and allow a period of time before giving their findings to their medical organizations or Journals.

Some months ago I recorded the results reported by Dr. Mary Orbell Hivan, New York, in stopping 1000 cases of one-sided headache at Bellevue Hospital by the use of ergotamine tartrate over a period of two years. In 1936 a total of eighty-five patients were benefited. It completely checked 1042 headaches in eighty-nine persons. It was found that the ergotamine tartrate was not a cure for migraine nor would it prevent attacks but it never failed to stop the attacks in ninety-two per cent of the cases.

The ergotamine tartrate is given by injection into the muscles. Even when taken by mouth the size of the dose should be as ordered by the physician. This preparation is given different names by the different drug manufacturers.

What may prove another source of help in migraine when ergotamine tartrate is not successful is reported by Dr. H. S. Robinstein in Archives of Neurology and Psychiatry. As this drug had helped many cases of intractable neuralgia, Tic Doloreux, Dr. Robinstein tried it in migraine also.

"Over a period of a year I have closely observed the effect of trichloretylene treatment upon six patient suffering with migraine headache. Judging from the results of these cases it would seem that this drug may be a valuable help in the treatment of migraine. While this drug has been effective in treatment, nevertheless the search for the cause of migraine should continue. Fifteen drops, obtained by crushing an ampule in a handkerchief and having patient breath it in, is the usual method of treatment. The patient should be lying down as in some cases there is a momentary loss of consciousness—never over a minute. Relief is usually obtained within an hour and often relief is obtained immediately. In addition to the relief obtained at the time of the attack, there has also a distinct tendency to prolong the interval between attacks."

Dr. Robinstein states that six cases is not a large number and a year is not a long testing period, but nevertheless tri-chloretylene appears to be a valuable remedy in migraine.

Dickens' Christmas Carol

ADAPTED BY C. D. VORMELKER

Illustrated by Alfred J. Boescher, CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

EVERYONE FORGOT SCROOGE, WHEN FRED STARTED TO PLAY THE PIANO AND HIS NIECE SAT DOWN AT HER HARP, WHILE TOPPER GROWLED AWAY IN HIS DEED BAGS. SCROOGE SOFTENED AND THOUGHT HE MIGHT HAVE CULTIVATED A FEW KINDNESSES HAD HE HEARD MUSIC MORE OFTEN.

AFTER THE MUSIC THEY PLAYED BLINDMAN'S BUFF AND TOPPER STUMBLED OVER ALL THE CHAIRS, BUMPED AGAINST THE PIANO AND FINALLY CONNERED FRED'S PLUMP SISTER.

THE SPIRIT'S TIME WAS FLEETING. THOUGH SCROOGE BEGGED TO STAY, THE GHOST WHISKED HIM AWAY, TO FOREIGN LANDS, TO HOMES OF THE POOR AND THE RICH, TO ALMSHOUSES, JAILS AND THE BEDS OF THE SICK. WHERE MAN HAD NOT HARRED THE SPIRIT OUT, HE LEFT HIS BLESSINGS AND TAUGHT. SCROOGE HIS PRECEPTS.

MOMENTARILY THE GHOST LOOKED OLDER. FROM HIS ROBE HE DREW FORTH TWO MISERABLE CHILDREN. "SPIRIT, ARE THEY YOURS?" ASKED SCROOGE APPALLED. "THEY ARE MAN'S," SAID THE SPIRIT. "THE BOY IS IGNORANCE, THE GIRL IS WANT; BEWARE OF THEM BOTH," AND WITH THESE WORDS HE DISAPPEARED.

REDMEN TO OPEN HOCKEY SEASON ON MONDAY NEXT

Meet Peterboro in Opening Game of Group Schedule

BAND PRESENT

Eddie Thomas Has Team That Will Make Every Team Hustle

Intensive pre-game opening ceremonies with Mayor R. D. Ross, M.L.A. officially facking the puck to introduce a new hockey season and with the Belleville Band in attendance to add color to the occasion, King Hockey takes the limelight at the Belleville Arena on Monday night next, when the Senior O.H.A. season is opened with the Belleville Redmen, 1937 Intermediate O.H.A. champions, meeting the highly touted Peterborough Hockey Club in one of the season's big tilts.

Manager Eddie Thomas announced today his team was in splendid condition and ready to entertain the hockey fans of this district. "Our six games in the Yan Keane series have just put the boys on edge and they are ready to really go to town on Monday night and make the opposition of their lifetime. I frankly believe I have a much better squad to toss over the boards against Peterboro on Monday night, than we had when we won our first provincial title last spring," emphatically stated Eddie Thomas today.

Coach Frank Rickland, of the Peterboro has added "Pud" Glass, well known Western Ontario hockey coach to his staff of assistants and hosts of other well known players and three former Peterboro juniors, stolen from last summer. The Peterboro team has been built around Bill Cowan, former Peterboro junior, who will be remembered by Belleville fans for his sensational performance with the Peterboro Juniors last season. Cowan is a former Belleville Bantam star and hails from Belleville

Christmas

Shepherds engaged in nightly task
Guarding their flocks beneath the mask
Of midnight calm, behold a star
Gleaming in brilliance from afar.

Full of wonder they saw the path
Of divery light that cleaved a swath
Of brightness over darkened hill.
Hopefully they followed until,

They reached a stable near an inn
Where two wand'rers rested within.
In the manger the Christ child lay,
Whom they worshiped in humble way.

Wide-eyed and wondering a crowd
Of folk gathered round Mary, bowed.
And wise men entered her presence
Bearing gold, myrrh and frankincense.

The luminous star born that night
Gave to the world persistent light,
That each his way might better wend,
Till the approach of his destined end.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hamilton and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wilder and Mr. and Mrs. Mabel Nobel had Christmas dinner on Sunday with Miss Annie Hamilton.

On Sunday morning at Sunday School, Mrs. Fred Prindle gave a Christmas reading. Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Wagar gave a duet with Ralph Wagar as accompaniment and Mr. Frank Hicks gave a nice address. Attendance was 78.

Deepest sympathy is extended to Mrs. John Black and family from this community in the loss from monday of a loving husband and father.

A number of cars have seemed to take a liking for the ditch between here and Belleville recently. Mr. and Mrs. R. Rollins entertained on Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Orval Rollins, Mr. and Mrs. J.hn Rollins and Mr. and Mrs. James McCreary.

A big gas truck went into the ditch on Tuesday after it had unloaded its contents at Mr. Creepser's. It met another car and got off the road too far and it took some time to get it out again.

Bertha Goes to the Dance

By JOHN GRAY

McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

It was the day before the all-important dance at Tilton college. On the "spare room" bed in the Denby farmhouse lay the pink chiffon frock that Bertha had bought for the occasion, the satin slippers and stockings lay beside it.

The whole house was in an air of expectancy and even the cows and chickens in the barnyard and pasture must have sensed that something was in the air from the happy, preoccupied air of Bill Denby, gruff and usually indifferent, as he went about his daily chores. Bill Denby was Bertha's brother; her elder by ten years, who, though he avoided society himself, never seemed more content than when his pretty sister was included in the festivities at nearby Tilton college.

Then George Fulton came with the news that changed all this air of pleasurable expectation to one of gloom and dejection.

"I've done the thing that seems most honorable," he announced, "it means that I can't take you to the ball." And with, much faltering and many hesitations he proceeded.

"Last summer I met a girl who lives out in Wyoming. We played tennis together and went in swimming and sailing and—well before we parted I asked her to go to my junior ball with me. That was before I had met you. Well, we wrote once or twice and nothing more was said about the ball, and then we didn't write any more. I had met you and she didn't seem to care whether I wrote or not. This morning I had a letter from her. It just says: 'I'm coming for the ball. Will arrive at five Friday. I know you haven't forgotten your invitation.'

"It's too late to prevent her coming—she is already here. I didn't know what to do. Of course, I want to take you more than anything else. But I made up my mind that the right thing for a fellow to do in the circumstances was to go to the girl he really cared for and tell her."

It was not till George had gone and Bertha had time to nurse her grief in sight of the pink frock laid out so neatly that she permitted tears to flow. Bill Denby, who had looked in vain for his sister downstairs, found her in her spare room. Bertha explained.

"I don't care so much about going with him," she fibbed, "but I wanted to wear the dress. I never had such a pretty dress before."

"I'll take you," Bill said firmly.

"But they won't let you unless you're an undader."

"See here," said Bill, shaking a defiant finger in her face, "you said this George is the boss of the dance. I'll show him. I'm no collar-side this time. I'm going."

In the thirty hours that were to elapse before the dance Bill found only a few for sleep. There was a hasty trip by motor to Tilton in quest of evening clothes.

He came back with numerous bundles. "Here's everything from soup to nuts," he announced: "dancing pumps, silk socks and everything. Now start in and show me the steps."

The next evening at half-past eight, when Bertha, dressed in her pink chiffon, started off with her brother to Tilton college, she was inclined to think that this smooth-shaven, well-dressed young man must be some one else than her brother.

It was an uncomfortable moment for Bertha at the door when the student whose duty it was to receive tickets, barred the way and looked skeptical when Bill said he would see the chairman of the committee, who would fix things up for him. George came forward, sensed the case in a flash, and escorted the Denbys past the dismayed door committee.

What followed in ade Bertha fest as if she had suddenly been swept off her feet. "Ye gits beautiful" stately and brunette, but certainly older than Dorothy Dodd, left Bill's hands in hers.

"What a wonderful surprise," she said. "I was going to send for you tomorrow, but I never knew you'd be at the dance." Then she and Bill gravitated to some chairs behind some palms and when the music started for the first dance, and George was expected to be the first on the floor, he did not even try to find Bill and the mysterious girl from Wyoming, but stepped out on the smoothly waxed floor with Bertha.

They danced for a few minutes and then sought two chairs at the side of the floor. "That's Helen Dawson," George said. "She's the girl Bill was engaged to. One of the boys was out in Wyoming a few weeks ago and told her about Bill—how he'd never married and didn't like girls, so she decided to come and look him up. She found out when the dance came off, remembered it—ask her, and took that as an excuse to come East. She didn't think how she might have spoiled things for me. But everything is going to turn out all right, I guess," added George, as he looked over in the palm-shaded corner of the room where Bill and Helen Dawson were still talking, oblivious of music, dancers and possible onlookers.

And that night when Helen and her new-found friend, Bertha Denby, whom she had seen once before as a little girl, said good night, Helen whispered to Bertha that she was engaged to Bill and Bertha announced in a tone whisper that she had just accepted George.

Joan's Motherly Sacrifice

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Service

Joan was not anticipating with the usual eagerness her sister Carol's homecoming from college.

Continually there loomed before her mind the end of the vacation when she would be faced with two alternatives. Either that or telling Carol she could not afford to send her back for the rest of the college year or of saying "yes" to Stephen Trent for his money.

For three years Joan had scrimped and saved out a primary school teacher's salary that her young sister should have the education she herself had missed.

And now all the small reserve had been swept away by the recent hospital illness of which she had kept Carol in ignorance. Foolish to worry the child just at examination time, especially as Carol was none too strong herself and was not having the best of luck in the world, repeling up with her work. This loss of the job had hoped to replace by tutoring. Her next month's check would barely meet expenses. No, Carol simply must have college.

Ever since the death of the girls' parents in an automobile accident, young Trent had made himself an older brother to them. A month ago he had astounded Joan by suggesting that he would drop that role and take on one of a more intimate nature.

"Bang it, Joan!" he had exclaimed. "Can this school-marm stuff and marry me this afternoon. Makes me sore to have you slaving away the best years of your life when I might be taking you and Carol for a cruise on the Mediterranean!"

But Joan knew she had only a sisterly affection for Steve, and told him as much, with the understanding, however, that she would let him know at once of any change of heart. But Joan knew what love was. It was the emotion she felt toward John Randolph, the young interne at the hospital, who had dropped in now and then during her convalescence to cheer her.

John had called several times since her return home and intuition told her that he loved her even as she loved him, but there had been no mention of love between them. How could there be when it would be years before they could think of marriage?

Were it not for Carol, Joan would have asked no greater blessing than to keep on teaching while John finished his internship set out his shingle and built up practice enough for two.

When Carol stepped off the train and Joan took the slender, bobbed-haired girl in her arms, Joan she must carry on somehow for this dear sister. Marrying Stephen wouldn't be so dreadful. That is, if there were no John!

The next few days Joan threw herself into making Carol's vacation one to remember. Never was she so lively, so interested in all Carol had to tell. If she felt a strange reluctance behind Carol's usual bluntness she passed it by as one will who has greater worries to brood over.

The day before Carol's return a picnic had been planned with Stephen up the Hudson.

Now, either as a culmination of unquiet nights or as an aftermath of her late illness, Joan woke that morning with, as she expressed it, a "zip snorter of a headache."

"You go with Stephen, Carol dear," she urged. "Peace and a wet cloth on my forehead are all I want."

In the end Carol had yielded. Such a glorious day! Steve would be so disappointed! If Joan was sure she'd be all right.

Twilight had come before Joan, who had recovered from her headache towards afternoon only to fall into a miserable despondency, heard the familiar hum of Stephen's car. Wanly she reached for her traveling cloth.

Then, as she turned to greet them, she was ruined by Carol and Stephen simultaneously.

"Darling, I'm Mrs. Stephen Trent!"

"Joan, dear, forgive me, but I married Carol this afternoon in Connecticut and we sail at midnight on a round-the-world cruise. Scold us now but bless us in the end!"

There were more disclosures before the day was over. Carol, with sudden wifely authority, settled Stephen with the evening paper and drew Joan out into the kitchen. "I've been dreading the end of vacation so because I would have to tell you this. That I failed in every examination and am flunked absolutely out!"

Then Stephen had a word with Joan later. "Young Randolph came to see me, he said, as head of the family and asked me if I thought it would be all right for him to ask you to marry him. Naturally there would have to be a long engagement. Why, Joan, you love him! You are blushing!"

That night she stood with John and watched the great liner, bearing Carol and Stephen, slowly detach herself and move out to sea.

She was thinking that Stephen would hardly have married Carol unless he loved her. Surely he would not have done it that she might be free to marry John! Yet if any man would do that sort of thing it would be Stephen.

She drew close to her young doctor. "I hope they are as happy as you and I are," she said wistfully.

4 Norwegian Sailors Rescued After Difficulty

Valetta, Malta, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Four exhausted Norwegian sailors were rescued 15 miles off the coast early today after drifting in an open boat for four days, half the time without water.

The men were members of crew of the 1,137-ton Norwegian freighter Kronprins Olav, which broke its propeller shaft. The vessel had no wireless and the four men were trying to reach land—to obtain aid when they were almost run down by the British Auxiliary ship Olynthus which had heard their cries in the darkness.

The Olynthus turned to search for the disabled freighter.

Pontiff Deplores Persecutions Of Faithful in Germany

Defends Church Against Charge of "Playing Politics"

RELIGIOUS TEACHING

Vatican City, Dec. 24—(AP)—Pope Pius, in reply to Christmas' Christmas greetings, today explored religious persecution in Germany and defended the church against accusations of "playing politics."

A semi-official summary of the Pontiff's remarks said:

"After thanking the Cardinals for their good wishes, the Holy Father said he wished to add two serious words of fact and of principle.

"The word of fact consisted of affirming that real religious persecution exists in Germany and declaring that one wished be insipid say otherwise.

"The word of principle consisted of denying the accusation made against the church that it is not doing its religious duties, but is playing politics.

"Against this accusation the Pope protested, solemnly reaffirming that the church in all its activities does not play politics but promotes religion."

The Pope illustrated all this by referring both to accusations made before Hitler against Germany and to replies the Redeemer made to those accusations."

The Pope told the Cardinals the persecution in Germany was "such as there rarely has been." He said the charge or politics was used as a "justification" of persecution. The Pontiff denied this allegation not less than four times in his remarks.

One local family may be minus their Christmas cheer tomorrow.

His morning the disappointed and chagrined Geddes St. resident was still minus his Christmas bird. It paid for the bird and left my address with the farmer" explained the citizen when reporting the incident to the police today. The subscriber stated they would receive no light on the matter and suggested he call at the market next week in an effort to locate the man who sold the turkey. "They're the farmer lost your address" commented Sergeant Arthur Harrison.

"That's all very fine, you may get San Dogue another bird but I'm going to do for our Christmas fowl now!" concluded the citizen.

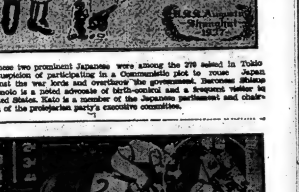
Capture Japanese Fishing Vessel Near Los Angeles



Los Angeles, Dec. 24 (AP)—The United States navy tightened its guard over the entire Pacific coast today following seizure of a sheaf of letters, described as of a suspicious nature from a Japanese living here and of Japanese fishing boat by customs agents.

Destroyers continued their patrol of San Pedro harbor, principal navy base. Mare Island navy yard at San Francisco was ringed with 100 extra guards.

Reports of a raid on the Japanese liner Tatsuta Maru by customs agents just before sailing time at San Francisco were confirmed by United States Attorney Frank Hennessy.

The agents garnered a sheaf of letters, supposedly connected with operations at the Bremerton Navy Yard on Puget Sound yesterday. Hennessy said he did not know the letters' contents.

The government men acted in secrecy, but the San Francisco Chronicle understood the letters had been forwarded to San Francisco from Seattle, across the Sound from Bremerton. The latter bore no stamp, the Chronicle reported and had been entrusted to an unidentified person aboard.

FLYING GLASS CUT SHANNONVILLE MEN

Herbert Brant and A. R. Westcott, both of Shannonville, sustained facial lacerations when the automobile in which they were riding skidded on the icy pavement east of Shannonville on Highway No. 2 early last evening, and crashed into a telephone pole owned by Harry Brown, Toronto. The injured men were treated by Dr. H. R. Eckardt, of Shannonville. The motor car was being driven easterly by Mr. Brant, after which it suddenly skidded on an icy patch on the highway as he was meeting a large transport. The skidding vehicle missed the cab of the transport, but struck the telephone pole. The Provincial motor car was badly damaged during the impact, stated Motorcycle Patrolman San Ervine, who investigated.

AS THE BELL STRUCK TWELVE, SCROOGE LOOKED ABOUT FOR THE SPIRIT, BUT INSTEAD HE BEHELD THE THIRD OF THE GHOSTS, WHOSE APPEARANCE HAD BEEN PREDICTED BY OLD MARLEY'S PHANTOM. THE PHANTOM AND CAME ALONG THE GROUND LIKE A MIST.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS FUTURE LED SCROOGE TO A GROUP OF BUSINESS MEN. "WHEN DID HE DIE?" ASKED ONE. "LAST NIGHT," REPLIED A VERY FAT MAN. "IT'S LIKELY TO BE A CHEAP FUNERAL FOR I DON'T KNOW OF ANYONE TO GO TO IT." HE CONTINUED.

THE PHANTOM LED SCROOGE INTO A MISERABLE QUARTER OF THE CITY. IN A JUNK SHOP HE LISTENED TO THE DIALOGUE OF A CHARWOMAN AND AN UNDERTAKER'S MAN AS THEY DISPOSED OF HIS CLOTHING AND BED-CURTAINS. HIS HORROR WAS AS GREAT AS THOUGH THEY WERE SELLING HIS OWN CORPSE.

THE PHANTOM ALSO SHOWED HIM HIS OWN GRAVE WITH "EBENEZER SCROOGE" ENGRAVED ON THE STONE. WHEN SCROOGE PROMISED HE WOULD OBSERVE CHRISTMAS THE PHANTOM DWINDLED AND SHRANK INTO SCROOGE'S OWN BEDPOST. To Be Continued

DEACON COMPANY HOSTS AT PARTY

Staff And Guests to Number of 110 Partake of Banquet

One of the main factors of the success of the affair but demonstrated the fine spirit of friendliness and cooperation that exists between executives and employees.

Mr. F. H. Deacon, in jovial mood occupied the chair for the evening and his fine personality and efforts in creating a homely friendly atmosphere was a fine contributing factor.

The "Deacons" orchestra, located in which are Phil Huddleston and Reg Bleasby furnished a fine musical program, while the ever-popular Fred Jobson, whose inimitable manner as a community song leader is not surpassed in the city led the voices of the assembled company in many familiar Christmas and other tunes.

An outstanding feature of the affair were vocal solos by Jack Deacon whose splendid tenor voice was heard in several numbers. Mrs. Deacon accompanied him in her usual brilliant manner. Special guests at the affair were the Rev Dr. James Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church, Mrs. Semple and W. B. Deacon.

Following the banquet the guests were entertained at a theatre party by the management of the firm.

HANGCHOW FALLS

The Japanese spokesman also announced a strong Japanese force had crossed the Yellow River in Shantung Province, obtaining a foothold on its southern bank. He did not state where the crossing was made, but indicated it was in the vicinity of Tsinan, provincial capital.

Since Japanese had declared at Tientsin that Chinese who had destroyed Japanese mills at Tsingtao, Shantung Province seaport, would face "drastic punitive action," it was believed the Japanese had begun a general Shantung offensive.

Fifth City to Fall

Hangchow was the fifth of China's great cities to fall into the hands of the invaders, who already had hoisted the rising sun flag in Peiping, Tientsin, Shanghai and Nanking.

United States authorities meanwhile made strong representations to the Japanese over the reported throwing of the United States flag into the Yangtze river at Wuhu Dec. 13. Consul General Clarence Gauss asked an investigation of the incident at the Yangtze river port 60 miles upstream from Nanking.

Independent reports received here said Japanese soldiers completing occupation of Wuhu seized a ship owned by an American-operated hospital there, pulled down the United States flag, and threw it in the Yangtze.

Thus far, it was estimated, the Japanese invaders has cost China at least $750,000,000 in property damage, thousands of civilians killed, and dislocation of trade resulting in unemployment and starvation for other thousands.

In addition, British, Americans and other foreigners have counted losses running into millions in the fighting at Shanghai.

FOUR DEATHS IN EARTHQUAKES

Mexico City, Dec. 24 (AP)—Four deaths were attributed today in a series of earthquakes that left widespread minor damage to buildings and panicked a shiverbreg shock that rocked all southern Mexico yesterday was followed by two other slighter quakes last night.

Dispatches from a dozen southern States told of panic, minor damage and several cases of personal injury.

PANAY WAS SUNK

Hughes' initial chronological story was dispatched by wireless from Shanghai in advance of the findings of a formal board of inquiry. That report will be published tomorrow.

Hughes related:

Japanese Officer's Inquiry

1. Three hours before the first unexpected aerial onslaught by two naval planes, the Panay was boarded by a Japanese army officer, who vainly sought information on the movements of Chinese troops.

2. The first attack came without warning from two Japanese naval planes, which power-dived from an altitude of "about 4,000 feet."

3. The Panay, marked by two horizontal United States flags 18 by 14 feet freshly painted on her top decks, was anchored to 3 minutes of intensive bombing and machine-gunning. The Commander estimated the little ship must have received 24 direct hits.

Lay Wounded on Shore

4. Hughes, severely wounded by the first bomb explosion, said he was informed ten small boats bearing wounded to the river bank were machine-gunned by the attacking planes.

5. Lying wounded on the shore after his sinking ship had been abandoned, he heard the rattle of machine-guns and was informed that an armed Japanese boat was firing on the Panay.

6. Everyone aboard the gunboat loaded with diplomatic officials and refugees from Nanking, 30 miles downstream, "acted with fine courage and initiative." Three men had their lives.

Hughes said the Panay was conveying the Standard Oil river steamers Meiping, Meihsia and Meilan, the miscellaneous launches and junks. He stressed the precautions taking to forestall any attack due to mistaken identity.

The oil boats went down with the Panay, or were beached.

AT THE BELLE

"The Prisoner of Zenda"

As the author who wrote a perfect motion picture story a long time before the motion picture was a commercial reality, Anthony Hope Hawkins who wrote under the name of Anthony Hope, would possess one sound claim to distinction, were he lacking any other.

This is the belief of John Cromwell, who directed Hope' most famous work, "The Prisoner of Zenda", David O. Selznick International Feature, which comes to the Belle tomorrow (Christmas Day), Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily, with Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and C. Aubrey Smith heading the cast. Says Cromwell: When Zenda was written at the turn of the century motion pictures were indeed in their infancy, so Hope could hardly be accused of writing with one eye on Hollywood, which was then getting but a cable range with a few scattered fruit groves.

Has Every Element

"A critical analysis of his story today reveals, however, that it has every element required for a successful picture, while its transference to the screen is simply a matter of condensing its details to camera technique. For screen purposes, it couldn't have been written any better if Hope had been raised on a motion picture lot and had written the story directly for the films.

"The story is crammed with action, presented in smooth, continuity and building to a smash climax. It has suspense, great romance, spectacle, comedy and an ingenious plot. What references could ask for more?

Hope was a British novelist, the second son of a London clergyman. He was educated at Marlborough and Balliol college, Oxford University, where he was president of the Union Society, and soon after graduation began contributing stories and sketches to the St. James Gazette.

"Zenda" Was Blue Penny

His first novel, "A Man of Mark" was published in 1890, to be followed by "Father Stanhurst", 1891, "Mr. Witt's Widow", 1892, "Change of Air" and "Sport Royal" and other stories, 1893.

"The Prisoner of Zenda" published in May 1894, brought him an immense popular success, and its dramatization at the Lyceum Theatre increased his fame.

Treating as it does of royal intrigue among the courts of Europe, highlighted by an impressive coronation ceremony, the story has the timeliness and freshness which made as if it were written from today's newspapers' headlines.

Gripping Mystery

"Night Club Scandal," a gripping mystery story with a new twist, and studded with laughs is announced for exhibition at the Belle tonight for the last times along with an interesting screen oddity, a funny Willie Howard comedy, and a smart musical Revue.

Hurricane House

By BRUCE HENRY

They were silent then. Chet spoke at last. He said, "I've got defense, Sandra. A thousand times since I've wondered if were in my good senses that night. And yet——" he paused, his mouth a hard, straight line, "when I put my name to Ancell's note, I felt that the end justified the means. Very foolishly I let Ancell persuade me to go into the market, but he made it appear that if I followed his system I couldn't lose. . . Well, I lost, everything. So it was a case of accepting or giving up our pleasant way of living and, inevitably, resigning from the firm—or finding some one who would lend me money to crawl out."

Sandra nodded, said hesitantly, "If only it hadn't been—Ancell, Chet."

"Ordinarily," said Chet, "Ancell would have been the last person in the world to whom I would have obligated myself. Even then, I didn't go to Ancell; he came to me, all generosity, offering me any amount I wanted. It was only at the last minute that he revealed his rotten motive." His resumed after a little pause: "You see I hadn't anything to put up for collateral for a loan from the usual sources; and as soon as the story got around that I was insolvent, and why—thanks to Ancell—I couldn't ask any one to go on my note. Under those circumstances, you understand, it was a choice between borrowing from Ancell, on his own terms, and—poverty."

"How horrible he should have to extricate all this to me," Sandra thought— wishing she had never told him she knew of the loan. But, she said, "Poverty might have been good for us, Chet."

He said quickly, "Not for your mother. You and David and I have managed, but not Enid." He said then, an almost plaintive note in his deep voice, "You must try to see this, Sandra —I accepted Ancell's condition and took his money because I could not deny your mother what I thought she wanted, what I believed she needed to be happy. I knew Enid had been seeing Ancell on consulting those last few weeks and Ancell told me that night Enid wanted a divorce. So why not? By accepting Ancell's loan, I saved her the humiliation of finding herself destitute and—by the same act promised her her freedom." Abruptly his eyes came up: "I hope I'm not pitying myself as a martyr, Sandra. I agreed to the infamous arrangement and I've simply tried to make you understand that in doing it I had no faintest hope of personal gain. Ultimately I must face ruin anyway, for Ancell's money must be paid back, every cent—if I have to admit it down his throat to make him take it."

"Poor Chet. . .Oh, darling!" Her wet eyes closed. Sandra tried to fight back the rush of tears. But it was no use for Chet, suddenly got his arms around her and she was sobbing, "Chet. . .I'm so—so sorry. . ." Sorry for her father, of course, but Chet who through four long months had denounced himself for a vicious irresponsible, understood anybody's feeling sorry for him. Then the next moment he understood well enough, for Sandra's head came up and she cried, "You couldn't do anything else, Chet. . .It's all Enid's fault. . ."

Enid said, "We've had a delightful day, Mrs. MacAllister, but Charles has an appointment in Boston tomorrow and he isn't a fast driver." And seeing Sonny coming in from the porch: "I wonder where he and Sandra disappeared to?"

"They're just coming up from the back of the pasture," Sonny said. "There's a little creek back there and Sandra loves it. I suppose she told you she and I decided to stay on here for a few weeks?"

"Why no," Enid said, surprised. "I'd rather counted on her going back with us. We've missed her more than I can tell you."

"But it's only for a little longer," Mrs. MacAllister said, persuasively. She's done so well in the short time she has been here and I honestly think she enjoys the work at the store."

Sandra stood in the dining room doorway. Chet behind her. She made room for Chet to pass, but conscious of the tell-tale red of her eyes, remained where she was. She said to Sonny's mother, "Chet thinks I ought to go home with them, Mrs. MacAllister." Submission in that slightly husky voice. And not only submission, Sonny thought, puzzled, but a certain eagerness.

INSURGENTS HOLD OUT IN FLAMING CITADELS

Defiant Group Housed In Seminary and Bank Hoping Vainly for Relief

Italian And German Officers And Insurgent Sympathizers in Towers

PROLONG SIEGE

Some Sources Say Insurgents Crack Ring of Federal Troops

Hendaye, (Franco-Spanish Frontier, Dec. 27 (AP)—Insurgent troops and civilians held out in two flaming citadels today against Spanish government attackers in control of the rest of the ancient Loyalist city of Teruel.

Government advices said the massive Teruel Seminary and the Bank of Spain, both on fire, still housed a defiant garrison of Italian officers, German officers and Spanish insurgent sympathizers.

Grip Tighten.

The attacking forces had tightened their grip on the strategic city 193 miles east of Madrid by successfully storming the civil guard barracks, leaving only the two strongholds to be conquered.

Besieged remnants of the insurgent garrisons clung to protecting the siege in the hope shock troops under General Varela could still hammer through government lines to relieve them.

Kingston Doctors Perform Unique Operation

SKIN TO EYELIDS

Sharbot Lake, Ont., Dec. 27 (CP)—Kenneth Donnelly, 14, slept with closed eyes on Christmas Eve for the first time since he was ten months old when he suffered burns which left one arm practically useless, disfigured his face and scorched off his eyelids.

Three months ago he was taken to Kingston where Dr. L. Noble Armstrong, eye specialist, and Dr. Stuart Hendrie, plastic surgeon, took diamond shaped pieces of skin from two inches in depth from his leg and grafted them on to his eye-lids.

Kenneth can now open his eyes only slightly as yet, but officials at the stage of development reached in the operation are gratified.

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 27 (CP)—Eye lids grafted on the eyes of Kenneth Donnelly, 14, Sharbot Lake, Ont., who lost his from burns when his clothes caught fire, opened part way for about three years, Dr. L. Noble Armstrong, eye specialist, said today.

He was brought here three weeks ago and the skin grafted on Christmas Eve in the operation, the second of its kind in Canada, was performed. The first operation was made in Calgary, Alta.

The accident thirteen years ago left one of Kenneth's arms practically useless, disfigured his face and ruined loss of his eyelids. He thus was saved at that time by Mrs. Hallie Sudsbury, Kingston, despite his handicaps, Kenneth is cheerful, bright and popular. He is now in the entrance class.

HIGH WINDS FILL COUNTY ROADS WITH LIGHT SNOW

Main Highways Remain Open Without Any Trouble

TRAINS ARE CROWDED

Farmers and residents of the district reeling in the out-of-the way effects experienced difficulty in passing their Christmas celebrations with some being practically isolated for a while but generally speaking it is mainly filled sideroads and byways of the district with drifting from two to three feet nearly four feet.

While the main highways were practically clear with the high winds sweeping snow to the ditches, fields and ditches, sideroads and laneways conditions caused a headache for the faulty shovels in order to clear a roadway. The northern part of Prince Edward shovel their way to the main roads in order to spend Christmas with relatives.

In spite of more or less adverse conditions however, a great number of city and district residents took to the highways and railways on Christmas to take part in the many family reunions.

Travellers returned today report highways congested with traffic from Christmas Day. Many motorists took extra sections of fast trains in preference to the slow and at times passenger traffic.

Perhaps one of the main highways in fairly good condition although careful driving was necessary in places.

STORY OF HELP BY HILL, DESERT PURELY MYTHICAL

Japanese Realize Aid Via Gobi Desert Impossible For Chinese

'FATHER OF THOUGHT'

Route Over Mountain Ranges And Caravan Trails Impracticable

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—A good deal of importance is being attached by some to reports Russia is playing Santa Claus to China by sending war supplies to the hard-pressed Celestials.

The idea is fascinating. It smacks of red-blooded adventure—the sending of aid down through towering mountain passes, along caravan trails so old that their origin is lost in antiquity and across the drifting wastes of the Gobi Desert.

Whitened Bones Mark Route.

Still, for those who have pondered Chinese geography it is a case of wishing father of the thought. That northern-western area marked by the whitened bones of thousands isn't practicable for rapid movement of large quantities of supplies. It doesn't worry the Japanese military command much, of course.

What the Nipponese are worried about are transportation of supplies which they charge are reaching the Chinese through Hong Kong, far to the south. This British crown colony is one of the world's greatest seaports.

Strike Towards Far South.

A couple of months ago the "coun-cil of war" in Japan's capital city of Tokyo placed though unofficial group of more than 30 Japanese—issued a warning in Tokyo to Great Britain. The council alleged that Britain was aiding the Chinese, and intimated that if this didn't cease Japan might have to resort to diplomatic breaches.

Recent indications have been that the Japanese army command, having conquered northeastern China, intends to strike into the south. One purpose of such a move would be to cut the Burma road, and so shut off the streams of trade into China. That road is a motley collection, though it could be carried out without laying violent hands on British territory.

Even in ordinary times trading junks from all parts of China steam-ream the waters of Hong Kong. A huge amount of trade points into the Chinese interior through this funnel. The colony, in British hands for a century, has 391 square miles and has a million inhabitants. Its trade is enormous for its size in the great harbor. It is a free port, open to all nations on equal terms.

IRWIN MAY NEVER STAND HIS TRIAL

Mad Sculptor Kills Girl, Mother and Brother Easter Sunday

New York, Dec. 27 (AP) — The New York Times said today that Robert Irwin, 30, mad sculptor, will never stand trial for the Easter Sunday slaying of Ronnie Gedeon, artist's model, her mother, Mrs. Mary Gedeon, and a boarder named Frank Ferrara.

The newspaper said District Attorney-elect Thomas E. Dewey will take office Sunday, was disposed to believe that Irwin, who is under charge providing a life sentence instead of the present charge of first degree murder.

"Mr. Dewey does not believe that any real social purpose will be served by sending Irwin to the electric chair, for the first-degree murder conviction were obtained after a trial, which probably would not deter another person of Irwin's mental type from committing the same kind of crime," the Times said.

Lays Blame for Recession On Big Business' Ways In Asking High Prices

Robt. H. Jackson Warns Washington May Increase Spending and Taxes

HITS BIG BUSINESS

Assistant Attorney General Says Monopoly Profits Jumped

By SAM ROBERTSON

New York, Dec. 27 (CP) — The Roosevelt government today laid the blame for the current recession at the door of big business.

The accuser, Robert H. Jackson, assistant Attorney-General in charge of all trust prosecutions, leveled the charge with a warning that government spending and taxation would have to be increased if private business mended its ways.

The trust-buster spoke last night in a national broadcast. His words were interpreted as a forecast that President Roosevelt planned to recommend legislation to strengthen the present anti-trust statutes. There were predictions a congressional investigation of alleged monopolies would be held.

Persons Pressure.

Viewed "in the midst of other indications," Jackson said, the trust prosecutor polishing the old "big stick" for use by President Roosevelt," the Republican New York Herald Tribune said Jackson's address was "a clear indication that strong pressure would be exerted on Congress for enactment of anti-monopoly and other New Deal price control, regional planning and other social and economic measures."

Jackson recalled that over the last few years business leaders combined that if the federal government would reduce its expenditures, balance its budget and restore and private industry would more than take up the slack.

Trusting Big Business.

"Government has by business at its word," he went on. "In the last fiscal year the governmental net contribution to business purchasing was reduced about $275,000,000 a month—on the assumption and expectation that big business activity would make up for the reduction.

"And monopoly, by trying to skim all the cream off the recovery for itself, helped to kill the goose that laid its profits. Monopoly prices and profits jumped beyond all bounds and beyond all reason and way above the price level that small business could get."

Placing the present level of consumers' income at one-third less than in the golden year 1929, Jackson accused big business of taking the opportunity to pay more for their goods than in 1929.

Wage and Capital Costs.

He pointed out costs in the steel industry to argue against any decrease in steel prices, were due to wage increases forced on industry by the growth of labor unions. He placed the total increase in steel plant wages and costs of materials at $1,000,000 a day against this he said, steel prices, had been boosted 21 per cent.

"If big business insists on pricing itself out of the market and on unemployment grows," the trust-buster concluded, "the demand will increase insistence of the more government expenditures. Increased government expenditures will mean increased taxation, and big business, which already controls half of the national wealth of the country, will have to bear the major part of that burden."

Encourage Enterprise.

The government could play a great part in correcting the present situation—and would, if cooperation was forthcoming, he said it was the personal opinion that the administration would give private enterprise a fair chance and encouragement that could be given. It could also help small business will by relaxing credit brake into new fields like housing.

"But we cannot and will not surrender the rights of the average man to the monopolist or the deal," Jackson warned, "merely because the few insist on having their own course or concession out of government as the price of putting their capital back to work."

WAR NEVER JUSTIFIED

London, Dec. 27 (CP)—Haile Selassie, deposed Emperor of Ethiopia in a Christmas message broadcast to the United States, declared "no reasons" can ever justify war. Speaking in Amharic, later translated into English, the Negus asked his listeners to remember in their prayers the "weak and oppressed peoples" of the world.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Tilsonn Director Service Meteorologist

Diarist and the weather!

Many will have found no doubt, diaries in their stocking on Christmas Day. Keep your diary. And in the evening when you are making a record of the day's happenings with your comments and thoughts, make a note of the day's weather. It would make your record valuable; tell of the weather's effect on your feelings, your efficiency, on business, crops and sports. There is always a natural feeling competition of the weather with our habits and activities. This connection can not be supplied from a bare tabulation of temperatures and rainfall.

Envisions Streets Cleared of Autos In Holiday Season

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 27 (CP)—Riddance of city streets and highways of all motor vehicles on Christmas and New Year's Eves, except those virtually necessary for commercial and emergency purposes, was envisioned today by Police Chief Percy E. Moorehouse, as he scanned the record of death, injury, property damage and accidents of the annual Christmas Eve traffic accidents.

"During the war, the government instituted driveless Sundays to conserve gasoline for war supplies," Chief Goodman said today. "As one reads of the terrible toll of human life and injury taken by automobile accidents on the eve of holidays, it is difficult to find a feasible remedy.

"This it may be, in time not far distant if this carnage continues, that government action may be taken to control motor traffic on Christmas and New Year's Eves, permitting only those vehicles necessary for emergency and commercial purposes to use our streets and highways.

"Two Hamilton men are dead and our hospitals are filled with injured. Some authorities are crying for more rigid enforcement of the law but if we stationed a constable on every block he could not prevent these accidents. Every preparation was made by this department to cope with and to be busy sections. Every available member of the force was assigned on duty. But the accident list climbed in spite of our efforts."

UNREQUITED LOVE LEADS TO KILLING

Young Man Shoots Girl And Then Drives Car Over Body

Newark, N.J., Dec. 27. (AP)—Police quoted a 26-year-old factory worker as saying today that unrequited love led him to beat and shoot to death pretty Antoinette Imperatore, 22.

Enraged over her refusal to marry him, Vincent Riccio, 26, drove his automobile over the girl's body after she had fallen with two bullet wounds, Detective George Meagher said.

Meagher said the slaying yesterday occurred when Franco, sitting in his car with the girl, asked:

"Where do you want to get married?"

Her reply was "never. I've got another boy friend."

The detective quoted Franco as describing the slaying:

"I pulled the gun out of my pocket and I shot her. Then I drove his car and got away from me and jumped out of the car and I fired a shot at her.

"She ran up the street and I followed her, finally overtook her and beat with the gun. She fell down, fired some more shots at her, but she got up and I kept on beating her.

"I ran and jumped in the car, made a wide circle, drove over the curbstone and ran over her where she lay in the street. She got up again. Then I took a piece of steel and got out of the car and began to beat her until she was out."

Heaviest Railway Traffic In History Marks Week-end

Veteran Railroaders Taken by Surprise by Rush

HUNT FOR COACHES

Toronto, Dec. 27 (CP)—Busiest week-end on record was experienced by Canadian National Railways as it was still busy today with nearly 10,000 passengers arriving on trains up to noon hour.

On Friday, 40 extra trains supplementing the regular schedules, went out of Toronto. Every piece of rolling stock available was used yet dozens of trains went out with passengers standing. The rush took veteran railroaders by surprise. By 5.30 p.m. Friday every available coach was on a train.

Sleepers and parlor cars were pressed into service as regular coaches. Few trains left on time. One local train held an hour and a half while a frantic hunt was made for extra coaches.

The lost and found office reported twice the usual number of articles dropped or forgotten by passengers. One set of false teeth was found.

Rapid Progress Made In Breeding Industry

Stockholm, Dec. 27 (CP-Havas)—The rapid progress made by Sweden in the breeding of silver foxes and other fur-bearing animals was revealed in official figures issued today.

Pointing out that the raising of such animals was unknown in Sweden ten years ago, government statistics showed that the nation had 4,344 farms breeding silver foxes and other fur-bearing animals on Sept. 15, 1937. Of the 219,000 animals on these farms, 130,000 were silver foxes. Blue foxes numbered 26,000, skunks, 41,000 and beavers 8,000.

The total value of the animals was estimated at 21,000,000 krona (about $5,500,000). The value of the silver foxes approximated 16,000,000 krona (about $4,000,000).

PATIENT LOSES A LONG FIGHT

Weston Fletcher Succumbs to Streptococcus Viridans Infection

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 27 (CP)—Weston W. Fletcher, 28, for whom several thousand persons offered blood during a drive in Grace Hospital, died today in Grace Hospital.

At his bedside were his mother, Mrs. Howard H. Fletcher, and his physician.

Offers from blood donors poured into the hospital after the victim's mother issued an appeal a month ago. The requirements, that the donor have "type four" blood, and have recovered from streptococcus viridans, excluded all but a handful of the volunteers, but it was reported that five transfusions were given to Fletcher.

For a time the patient appeared to rally, and then the hospital's daily bulletins reported his condition "unchanged".

New York, Dec. 27 (CP)—Sir Hubert Wilkins is awaiting the next full moon at Point Barrow, Alaska, before taking off on a new search for the missing Russian trans-Polar fliers, Vitaly Ivanovich Sidorenko and Nikolai Kamanin.

Conditions as to moon and weather should be right about Jan. 12, the Arctic explorer said, in the letters in which Sigismund Levanevsky and five companions are believed to be marking time since their ill-fated Moscow-California flight last August.

Sir Hubert, who carried out a series of search flights last fall, heads the planning including Air-Commodore Herbert Hollick-Kenyon of Toronto and Grant Grenfell Isbitt. He recently returned to New York to exchange his flying boat for a plane equipped with skis for landing on ice.

INAUGURATION OF SERVICE IN 1940

Imperial Airways Wish to Conduct Further Experiments

By EDWIN R. JOHNSON

London, Dec. 27 (CP)—Imperial Airways have set 1940 as the goal for inauguration of a regular trans-Atlantic passenger air service between Great Britain and America.

Aviation officials say the service may be launched sooner, but the experimental program of the ocean route calls for a further series of flights under varying weather conditions and paying passengers will not be carried until every phase of the proposed service has been thoroughly explored.

To almost all experience the trans-Atlantic route holds no greater hazards than some of the long-distance flights on Empire services already established. There has already been a rush of volunteers for the privilege of being selected as prospective Atlantic pilots.

Schools for advanced training have already been set up at Croydon, Hythe and Southampton. Only the most proficient candidates are being accepted and preference is being given to those with outstanding flying records between the ages of 25 and 35. They will be the future commanders of the great flying boats or land planes of the ocean lanes.

With the evident intention of removing the bridge span at present crossing the mouth of the Moira River which has been in disuse for some time, for use in some other location, as it is to date, section crews of the Canadian National Railways are at present busy removing the last of the iron rails running through the lower section of the city at the east end this morning, along the span.

MIDNIGHT MASS AT ST. MICHAEL'S ATTRACTS MANY

Rev. Father T. Lally, Midland Delivers Special Message

MASS CELEBRATED

The Church of St. Michael the Archangel was crowded with worshippers and visitors for Midnight Mass on Christmas. The church was very artistically decorated for the occasion the beauty of the main altar being enhanced with flowers and colored lights.

At eleven-forty, there was a procession of children carrying the Babe to the crib arranged at the left of the altar, and depicting in realistic manner the scene at Bethlehem on the first Christmas. The singing of the children during the procession was very lovely and reflected the careful training they receive at the Academy.

Solemn High Mass was celebrated at midnight, the pastor Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson being celebrant, Rev. C. E. Baker, deacon, and Rev. J. J. Collins, sub-deacon.

The sermon at Midnight Mass was Rev. Father T. Lally, S.J., of Midland, a former parish of Belleville, who delivered an eloquent and inspiring sermon on the significance of this great festival.

Centred on Crib

Today, "the nations said," the eyes of the Christian world are centred on the crib at Bethlehem. Other great men have passed away, buried in stately tombs, carved in marble or bronze, their deeds have been heralded in song and story, but Christ alone is remembered. Thousands have died for Caesar's cause, but Caesar and his cause are dead and who would die for a dead emperor? Kingdoms from thousands of pulpits, in thirteen hundred languages the beautiful story will be told, "Christmas or it is not a story; it is true. On that night in Bethlehem, somewhere there, not as we see them to statues and our cribs, but really present. The Child Jesus, the Saviour of the world was there, not merely as a dead lying in the manger, but as a beautiful crib surrounded by lights and flowers, and the Mother and Joseph and the Infant lying in the manger, the Child Jesus, the Saviour of the world.

It is not wonder then that our churches are a blaze of lights, and flowers, and bells ring out, that lights and flowers and incense and all the liturgy of the church are in evidence, when we are celebrating not the birth of a great law-giver, not the birth of a great general or liberator or monarch, but the birth of Jesus of Nazareth, of whom the angel said "Behold I bring you tidings of great joy that shall be to all the people. For this day is born to you a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord, in the city of David."

Tremendous Importance

What does Christmas mean to us? If St. Paul said of His resurrection "if Christ be not risen from the dead, our faith is vain and you are yet in your sins," surely we could say, that without the birth of Christ, we would also be in our sins. Without the birth in Bethlehem, we would not have the example of the Boy Christ, the model of labourers, workers, the model of mothers, without the birth of Christ, where would we be in the days when we are told about with aching feet over the roads for crippled children seeking new threatens to halt or seriously interfere with, the work. Members of the Rotary Club are hopeful especially for work with money, time and effort and now offer an opportunity for the general public to assist while at the same time enjoying an entertainment of real merit. Talented musical artists have tendered their services to the Rotary Club for the benefit of the Crippled Children Fund and will give a Musical Recital Tuesday evening in the Collegiate Auditorium.

The second class were those like Herod who hearing this was troubled and all Jerusalem with him. And so today, many too are troubled. They have been lax and remiss about their religion and Christmas is a reminder of how much they used to be and how lax they are now. They too are celebrating Christmas but with a void in their hearts. Worldly joys do not satisfy and they have not real happiness which the Child Jesus would offer them.

No Room For Christ

The third class is of those from whom there was no room in the Inn." And so today, there is room for everyone else, but no room for Christ in assembly halls, no room in Leagues of Nations, no room in social life. Not only is there no room for Him in the Inn but there is no room in the heart They are not to Christ: "We don't want you in our private life or our business life we don't even want you in our churches!"

Both Catholic and Protestant churches waging a bitter war of defence against those who would set up a pagan religion? In Mexico, did not a public leader there speak of it as his aims after Diaz? Hitler and Mussolini? And in Russia they not erected a statue to the arch-traitor Judas?

There is the fourth class, thank God—"The shepherds said to one another, let us go over to Bethlehem, and let us see the word that Hervine has come to us." And with haste and they found Mary and Joseph and the Infant lying in the manger. And so today in every church crowded with fervent parishioners we say as we see the shepherd "returned glorifying and praising God for the things they had seen, as it was told unto them." Surely St. John cannot say of us as he said of most of his day, "He came unto His own and His own received Him not," or Christ will not have to say "So long a time I have been with you and you have not known me yet."

Music of Spheres

As we gaze on that little child let us realize, that those infant eyes are really blinking in the light of seven now gazing out beyond the farthest reaches of space, and those little ears are filled with the music of the spheres; that little brain holds the mathematical laws that directs the movements of the farthest stars—those little hands now fingering swaddling bands will one day pour out blessings on a world and be painfully spiked to the cross. That tiny preacher in that tiny pulpit of straw has a message of lesson that will sway men's hearts into the end of time.

He comes with the greatest message of all—one more than even the message of peace. If Europe can become an armed camp with soldiers, airplanes, battleships, submarines on every side, it is because it has not learned the lesson of the Prince of Peace. Let us at least now, this day after the angel brought, "Glory to God in the highest and on earth, peace to men of good will."

At the conclusion of Mass, the pastor expressed sincere gratitude that the joys and blessings of the Christmas season would fall upon the citizens of the community.

The music at Christmas Mass was especially beautiful. The choir under the direction of Mrs. James Grant sang the Mass in honour of St. Florian by V. H. Nowakowski. Miss Mary Wales was at the organ and Mr. Leo Flegler who sang Gounod's "Ave Maria," Miss Violet Coles, of "Ave Maria," by Maschoni and Mr. Edward Brown, "O Holy Night." During the offering a double quartette including Mrs. G. Clapp, Mrs. Gordon Wilson, Mrs. Jack Ellis, Mrs. M. Trusiach and Miss Anna Lafferty, also, Mr. R. Brown, Mr. Jack Harold Davidson, tenors, and Mr. L. Shiels and Mr. Ted Doyle, bases, sang "Adeste Fidelis."

At Holy Communion Mr. Harold Bartels sang "Night of Nights," Mrs. Trusiach and Miss Lafferty a duet, "Sweet Rest of Christmas," Mr. Harold Davidson "Holy Babe," and Mr. John O'Corman "Ave Maria." The Recessional hymn station was leaving the church after Mass, Mrs. Grant played a group of old French carols.

MOTORISTS DRIVE WITH EXTRA CARE

Not a Single Major Accident Reported in District Over Holiday

Motorists from Belleville and district adhered to the warnings of officials and drove with caution over the Christmas holiday season, not a single major accident being reported in the district by city or provincial police. Four minor crashes happened within the city limits, but none were classed in the first category of motor accidents, authorities revealed today.

No accident pavements made motoring rather dangerous over the holiday, the motor vehicles being driven with caution and progress limited to the minimum. Motor vehicles were seen being driven with extra precaution, which no doubt resulted in the splendid record reported. Hospital officials revealed today no person had been admitted to that institution as the result of an accident.

Mis Abigail Frank, William street, sustained lacerations of the face when struck by a passing truck, driven by Victor Lemieux, 20 Gordon, Grier street, on Friday. Miss Frank was crossing Victoria Avenue at Coleman street intersection, she did not see the approaching vehicle, police investigation revealed.

W. R. Elliott, 224 Coleman street, drove his motor car into the rear of a city truck on Station street on Saturday when the lighter vehicle skidded on the pavement, while a car driven by Levina Gonsier, Isobel street, skidded sideways on the icy pavement and struck a pole at the upper end of Front street. No injuries were sustained in either incident, however. Slight fender damage was the largest property damage reported in any case.

Kindly Officer Takes Charge of Lonely Girl

The suggestion that policemen are heartless was dispelled in Belleville on Christmas morning, when one of the members of the force took into his home an eleven year old girl, who had been left in a local restaurant by her parents. Shortly after 7 o'clock Christmas morning local restaurant proprietor informed the Belleville police that a young girl had been loitering in his place of business for some considerable time. Investigation revealed the girl was awaiting the return of her parents, whom she said were visiting friends. The kindly officer, after questioning the lass, later took her to his home and afforded her the comforts of his own home and family. Later many more reported stolen. "They may have stolen some cigarettes and tobacco, but it would be hard to determine just how much, as we carry a large stock at this time of the year," revealed Mr. Yeoles.

Only one arrest was necessary over the Christmas period, an intoxicated man being taken into custody for his own protection. The man was later released early Christmas Day in order to assure him of partaking of his Christmas turkey at home. Transients applying at the police station for lodging over the holiday period, also all on exemplionally low level.

Provincial Patrolman Sam Irvine reported "all quiet" in his department over the holiday also.

POLICE COURT

Enlargements of all cases constituted the post-Christmas police court, held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today.

Failing to appear in court, after being fined by his Worship, was his own recognizance to enjoy the festive season, a bench warrant for the arrest of Thomas Graham was requested by Chief Kidd of Belleville and Chief Clark Hayes of Tweed, this morning. Graham was taken into custody on charges of lunacy wherein chopping and slaughtered fraud. His Worship issued the bench warrant for the apprehension of the accused as requested.

Following the regular court proceedings a juvenile Court held a short session at which three youthful lads appeared charged with breaking and entering the premises of R. Holmes and the Wesley music store. The lads were arraigned and enlarged for one week. They were given into the custody of their parents for that period, however.

No criminal cases were presented, owing to the absence of Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C.

Police Blotter

Only one case of crime was reported in Belleville over the Christmas holiday, a break-in. While patrolling his beat last night Police Constable Sills found the rear door leading into Yeotes' billiard room, situated at 227 Front street, ajar. Further investigations revealed the door had been forced open.

The screw-nails holding the lock on the rear door had been pulled out of their sockets, Constable Sills and Mr. Yeotes later entered the building and after a thorough search the proprietor revealed the cash register had not been tampered with nor was any money reported stolen. "They may have stolen some cigarettes and tobacco, but it would be hard to determine just how much, as we carry a large stock at this time of the year," revealed Mr. Yeoles.

Only one arrest was necessary over the Christmas period, an intoxicated man being taken into custody for his own protection. The man was later released early Christmas Day in order to assure him of partaking of his Christmas turkey at home. Transients applying at the police station for lodging over the holiday period, also all on exemplionally low level.

MONOPOLISTIC 'PROFITEERING' IS CRITICIZED

Broad Administration Anti-Trust Drive Forecast in U. S.

JACKSON SPEAKS

Assistant-Attorney General Says Monopolists Price Selves Into Slump

Washington, Dec. 27 (AP)—Criticism of monopolistic "profiteering" by Robert H. Jackson, Assistant-Attorney-General of the United States, received widespread interpretation today as a prelude to a broad administration anti-trust campaign.

Most observers expect President Roosevelt to recommend specific legislation to strengthen present anti-trust statutes. Some even have predicted a congressional investigation of alleged monopolies.

Monopolists Are Blamed

Mr. Jackson, who has discussed the monopoly issue with the president on several occasions, said last night:

"It is the monopolists, and those so near monopoly as to control their prices, who by their profiteering have simply priced themselves out of the market, and priced themselves into a slump.

"When the business goes into a slump, the nation as a whole loses its job. When workmen go home without jobs, the grocer, the baker, the clothier and all the rest have lost their customers. When the customer is lost, the merchant cancels his order for goods.

"And when the cancellation reaches back to big business where it started, the big business man claimors that Government should give him confidence."

DOCTOR PROTECTS NEW DISCOVERY

Treatment For Pernicious Anemia Announced by Physician

Montreal, Dec. 27 (CP)—Dr. Edward A. Gresenguet said last night his purpose in obtaining a United States patent on his new treatment for pernicious anemia was to "protect the scientific discovery against improper use."

A Canadian patent on the same method preparation, from seven to 10 times more potent than those heretofore used, was pending and was "expected shortly," said the 46-year-old physician, a native of Hawkesbury, Ont., and graduate of McGill University here.

Money derived from sale of the preparation, added Dr. Gresenguet, will be provided for research funds to be assigned to institutions and scientists for further investigation in this field."

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, December 28

By Evangeline Adams

According to the predominant planetary forces for this day, there is likely to be a very lively and with the sudden arrival of important news. There may result in an unplanned journey or removal, especially in connection with new business or new contracts, all of real benefit. Be ready to read and sign all papers and writings with care.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of sudden and affairs that may send them to far fields of endeavor and adventure. Fresh contacts or older new interests promise pleasure and benefit, but sign all writings cautiously.

A child born on this day may be clever in an unusual occupation and be inventive, original and adventurous. It may make a conspicuous name for itself.

Members of a committee of the New Jersey State Assembly will recommend that the record of their investigation of the municipal affairs of the town of Wildwood, under the administration of Mayor Doris M. Bradway (shown), be referred to the proper authorities for possible prosecution. The report of the committee, which was handed to the assembly, branded the regime as "corrupt, selfish and unthinking." In answer to the charges, Mayor Bradway charged that the assembly committee was formed principally for political purposes, and claimed she was denied the right to put in her defence.

MADRID BOMBED FOR 20 MINUTES

Insurgents Retaliate After Government Puts Down Barrage

Madrid, Dec. 27 (AP)—Insurgent artillery shelled Madrid heavily for 20 minutes today after prolonged government bombernment of near-by Insurgent siege positions.

Insurgent batteries concentrated their projectiles in the central section of Madrid. The new bombardment followed one last night in which two theatres were partly destroyed, two persons killed and 13 wounded.

It answered a government barrage which followed a series of heavy crashes, sounding like exploding land mines, from the direction of University City.

MAN IS STRICKEN AT CHRISTMAS MASS

Ottawa, Dec. 27.—Nicholas A. Keezy, well-known construction foreman, died suddenly in St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church while attending Mass Christmas morning.

He had just entered the church and was substituting his coat when he was stricken with a heart attack. Falling from a pew into the aisle, he was carried into the rear of the church where he died before medical aid could reach him.

Born in Nepean Township sixty Years ago, he joined the Canadian National Railways as a bridge builder and construction foreman. During his twenty years with the road he was by reason of his duties frequently away from his home here.

He will be buried in St. Paul's Cemetery, Aylmer, Que., beside his mother, who also died on Christmas Day twenty-three years ago.

Plainfield

Plainfield—The annual Christmas tree for the United Church Sunday School held in the Orange Hall on Wednesday evening was a splendid success and much credit is reflected upon the faithful staff of teachers and Miss Irene Murphy of the public school who also gave liberally of their time and talent in preparation of the interesting program given.

A large tree laden with gifts was the centre of attraction for the children who were present en masse. Among the gifts was a fine gift to pass the old time organ donation to the Rev. J. F. and Mrs. Stevens. The program opened with a chorus by the public school children. This was followed by an exercise, "Little Jack Horner" under the leadership of Mrs. Harry Hawkins. Four girls then sang a song with a splendid moral about "Gossip over the teacups". Recitations were given by Garth McCreary and several of the small girls. Miss Isabel and Miss Jean Sills contributed solos. Song selections were given by Mr. Wylder Elliott's class of boys and several songs by groups of girls. The young people's choir with a few older ones gave the closing number on the program which was "The Straw Flower Christmas Pageant", which lasted for about forty minutes dramatically illustrating the immediate events surrounding the birth of the Saviour.

The many friends in this community of Mr. Addison Hall, of Toronto, who recently injured badly an index finger in a machine which he was operating at his home will be glad to learn that he is convalescing favorably.

Mr. Frank Hicks left on Thursday morning for a visit with friends in Toronto.

Mrs. Joseph Gow has been suffering for some time from an attack of quincy.

Mr. Emerson Lott who has been in poor health for several months has not been so well during the past ten days.

DIAMOND TRAIL IS DISCOVERED

Two Years' Chore is Closing in on Gang of Smugglers

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—Diamonds—$13,000,000 worth—beautiful, sparkling by gems.

Week after week for seven years gigantic liners roared into New York ports carrying the diamonds, hidden in the false bottoms of steamers.

Today, after two years of tireless sleuthing that fed all over Europe, the government moved to cut off the last strulets of that glittering stream.

A huge liner moved toward New York today, but this time it carried two men and a woman the government charges were among the last fugitive cogs in an international smuggling ring.

The jewellery who will arrive on Tuesday in the Berengaria are Nat Lukin, Gussie Furstenberg and Sadie Halper, three of 55 men and women indicted in June, 30 of whom have since been convicted. Twenty five defendants remained fugitives, safe from extradition in Europe, as the government's net is tightening.

More than a year ago the sudden appearance of quantities of diamonds on the New York market aroused suspicion. In November, 1936 an innocent-looking woman of 36, Yvonne-born but a resident of New York, walked down the gangplank of a liner carrying a suitcase. Agents grabbed her. The suitcase contained $250,000 worth of gems.

Trail Led Ahead.

From there, through arrest after arrest, the trail led ahead. Agents of the ring — some dupes were inconscious, alsoghts, a school teacher, a labor union agent, a French actress, flong travelled ahead on monthly schedules, returning with gem seach trip.

Meanwhile, away in a downtown building customs agents found a "diamond chief" where the ring's real agents met when their ships docked.

Roslin

A three act play in which the efforts of a well to do family decide to help Santa Claus out by each giving their present to some one who would not receive a present; Recitation, Teddy Welsh; Chorus by the School, "Hard the Merry Bells.

During the evening the chairman called in Dr. H. E. Welsh for an address. After several words of greeting and congratulations to the teachers and pupils for the splendid programme, he spoke of the way Miss Keegan had carried on the work along with the program which Miss Melburn had started before she was taken ill.

Dr. Welsh also referred to the terrible war conditions in Spain and China where the children would not have a Christmas as Christmas as citizens will have here. Saying all should be very thankful to live in a democratic country like Canada and especially in the Province of Ontario.

He spoke of the benefit to be derived by the children from taking part in a concert and he said he thought more attention would be paid to the art of self-expression and public speaking in the future, along with the time for r's reading, writing and arithmetic.

At the conclusion of the program the chairman called in Rev. Beard, who, on behalf of the children, Rev. Beard spoke, on behalf of the children, wished everyone the compliments of the season.

A hearty clap was given the teachers and pupils for their delightful program. The distribution of presents from the tree and singing of the National Anthem brought the evening's entertainment to a close.

Bulwarks of Prosperity

Scarcely less important than the dependable news service they provide every day is the contribution the Canadian daily newspapers make, as an industry, to the economic welfare and prosperity of the nation.

Apart from the work of collecting, transmitting and editing news from every corner of the world, many subsidiary trades and enterprises have been established and prospered that the personal service your daily newspaper provides could be extended and maintained.

Directly and indirectly the daily newspapers of Canada provide employment to tens of thousands of Canadian citizens in all parts of the Dominion, from logging camps and paper mills to the printing presses of your local daily newspaper.

Today, it is estimated that more than a half million Canadians are dependent for their livelihood upon the newspaper industry.

Consequently, in addition to providing an essential service to more than two million families every day, the Canadian daily newspapers make an important contribution to the economic and industrial welfare of the nation.

THE KING'S MESSAGE

His Majesty King George Sixth spoke with fresh feeling in his broadcast to the Empire on Christmas Day in following the tradition set by his late father, King George Fifth, who was the first of monarchs to use the broadcast and who introduced the broadcasting of royal Christmas messages. Britain's King spoke briefly and his message was warm in its sympathy and inspiring in its courage and hope.

Once again a British ruler has been able to speak, in the world at Christmastide, to an Empire at peace. True, there are the evidences of unrest in Palestine but the Empire still keeps at peace.

The Empire does not forget how King George Fifth stressed the Christmas spirit and the principle of the family spirit in the Empire and his son did not forget the same principles in his words of cheer and courage. Again a monarch spoke from the family fireside, linking his name with that of Queen Elizabeth in appreciation of the Empire's loyalty and devotion, and paying his deep tribute to his noble father.

In the King's words, one reads the deep undertone of his appreciation of his task. "We have promised to try and be worthy of your trust- and this is a pledge that we shall also keep," he said. These are brief words, but they are the words of a grateful, kindly ruler, who is here the true expression of British sentiment and principle of rule — loyalty to the national trust in a world where the King said "we see over parts of the world shadows of enmity and fear." Yet he does not labor with this idea for his mind turns and he turns the mind of the Empire in these words, "Let us turn to the message that Christmas brings of peace and good will. Let us seek to it that this spirit shall in the end prevail, and every one of us can help by making that immortal message the keystone of our daily lives." So the King of half a billion subjects in every part of the earth stresses the Christmas message of Goodwill to the world and also this potent fact that the spirit of Christmas can be made a part of the daily life of the people, individually as well as collectively. That is the all-engrossing message of the season.

And so the King closed with these words, "And to all of you, whether at home among your families, as we are, or in hospitals, or at your posts carrying out duties that cannot be left undone, we send our Christmas greetings and wish you under God's blessing health and prosperity in the year that lies ahead."

Subjects of Britain's benign rule ponder these words for their truth as they apply to the Empire and to the individual and the community of nations and also to the world at large.

His Majesty gave a hint that the custom of his father in the royal Christmas broadcast may not be continued "I cannot aspire to take his place, nor do I think that you would wish me to carry on, unvaried a tradition so personal to him."

THE YEAR ROUND

The greatest of the year's festivals is over but the spirit which is in Christmas does not pass. Greetings of friends and relatives, the evidences of goodwill, leave an abiding influence.

In a sense the spirit of Christmas should mark the entire year and it would be well for the world and individual if it did. Then, how could live for a whole year at the height of inspiration and zeal which mark the Christmas observance. Such would be emotionally impossible and perhaps financially impossible, unless there could be an adjustment, which is not yet foreseen. But the kindliness, the thoughtfulness so peculiar to this season, the greater attention upon the basis of all the world's blessings should not pass or be neglected once the season is over. One would not expect the purchase and presentation of gifts to become a daily affair, but the spirit which is behind these manifestations should endure. It does in no small measure for Christmas does mould lives, but in the course of the waning year some of the attention to the Yuletide principles gets a little worn and require to be revived by such a festival of joy and happiness.

Now the world looks forward to a new year, only a few days away. It will bring its surprises, its happiness and its sorrows. These are shielded from the eyes of man, fortunately, until the day comes. But people can look out on the coming days cheered with the spirit of the Yuletide and New Year's season. New Year's itself stresses the great festival as the world swings slowly but surely towards the new birth in nature. It looks across winter to spring.

New Year's has its importance, though it is far surpassed by the festival which has just closed for the Christmas festival is related to humanity very intimately in its stressing of the family life. New Year's is rather impersonal though it does bring many to new resolutions, some of which are carried out.

YOU'RE ONLY 98 CENTS IN VALUE

Somebody has Taken the trouble
To figure out
What the average person
Has in him
And how much
He is really worth.
First, there is
Water enough
To fill a ten-gallon keg;
The fat would make
Seven cakes of soap;
Enough carbon is there
For 9,000 pencils;
And phosphorus
For 2,200 matches
The manganese would do
For one dose of salts,
And the iron
Could make a little nail.
All the lime needed
To whitewash
A chicken coop
Might be had, too.
Last, but not least,
The sulphur
Would just about
Kill the fleas
On one small dog.
These things
Could be bought for
Ninety-eight cents.
With all our skill,
Efficiency,
And economy
Of mass production
There are still
A few tricks
To be learned
From Old Mother Nature.
I, for one,
Am willing to grant
That ninety-eight cents
Might be a low price
For some people
But there are others
Not worth that much
By far
Overproduction
And depreciation
Are serious problems
In more ways than one.
Wonderful things
Have been learned
About preventing sickness
And curing disease
But it is possible
To carry anything
Too far,
Some day we may wake up
To the fact that
It is not kindness,
Real humanity,
Or good business
By artificial means
To prolong a life
Whose usefulness
Has past
And to compel it
To carry on
Without hope,
A cause for sadness
And a heavy burden
On some one.
In such a case
Our real value
Is much less than
Ninety-eight cents.
Yes, Mother Nature
Often knows best.

'TWAS THE DAY AFTER CHRISTMAS and all through the house there were signs of dyspepsia and that day after the circus feeling. All keyed up with expectations Christmas Eve merges into Christmas Day — good wishes, smiles and chuckles and all that — good eats and perhaps a shade too much of them — sharing in the joys of others, treasuring a glow of the thought that remembrances of friends, after all, and Christmas the day set aside for the expression of that friendship, not merely an empty gesture. Christmas over, with the feeling, perhaps, that we have been building up for an awful let-down, as the song says, but still strong in the faith if weak in the flesh and sorta like a punctured balloon, unlaced as Amos and Andy might say. Looking ahead rather languidly to the New Year holiday and the prospect of making a new set of resolutions to be smashed later, one by one, in the face of emergencies of the moment. Oh well, it was a merry Christmas for many — let us hope for a Happy New Year to all.

CHRISTMAS IN CHINA did not suggest peace on earth and good will to men, rather did it suggest a return to cave man savagery with modern weapons and less excuse.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

VARICOSE ULCERS OF THE LEGS

These ulcers, although on the surface of the skin, are caused by sluggishness or stoppage of the circulation in the veins entering the ulcer. They are usually due to standing in the one position too long at a time. Therefore, policemen, the housewife in the kitchen too much, overweight. Perhaps a little knock or blow on the leg unnoticed by the individual is the starting point of the ulcer (a little break in the skin) because of the sluggishness of the veins underneath.

In the early stages of an ulcer, getting off the feet, resting the surrounding veins so that deeper veins will carry the work and perhaps bandaging the leg, may bring about a cure.

Unfortunately many of these ulcers become chronic and require treatment.

Dr. Neal Owens, New Orleans, in the New Orleans Medical and Surgical Journal, says: "Probably every ulcer which is more than the diameter of a lead pencil should be repaired by the removal of the scar tissue, followed by skin grafting, if a permanent and satisfactory healing is to be obtained; a large percentage of these ulcers can be healed by other methods than the removal of the scar tissue, but when treated by them, usually break down under the slightest strain." If the hard scar tissue is not removed, the blood vessels cannot push through the scar tissue to hasten the healing.

After the scar tissue is removed the patient should remain quietly in bed for two weeks, the leg is kept raised on a bed and continuous hot wet salt dressings are applied. The patient gradually gets accustomed to the loss of blood into the grafts by raising and lowering the leg.

In small varicose ulcers therefore, rest, injecting the adjoining veins, and stopping the cause may be sufficient; in large chronic varicose ulcers the skin graft is one not only brings about a cure but saves much time.

The Steamer "Caroline"

Yield 23 Canadians ride over Niagara Falls in a flaming steamship on a chill night a century ago."

In a commendable effort to put "pep" into a news story, the writer of a Niagara Falls, N.Y., despatch submits this rhetorical question and then proceeds to answer it by quoting Dr. Robert W. Bingham, historical society director in Buffalo who says "No." Dr. Bingham attributes the exaggerated tale to excitement prevailing along the border in 1837.

Incidentally the contemporary reports in U.S. newspapers were to the effect that persons aboard the steamer Caroline when she was "set out" by a boarding party 100 years ago this month were residents of Buffalo and therefore presumably not Canadians. Historical narratives agree that one man James Durfee was killed. The book by Robina and Kathleen Lizars which goes largely to set the record straight on the matter says Durfee was "shot by a bullet which came from the land . . . One tale of the day was that no life was lost . . . the matter for investigation by the coroner's jury given by the American press was chiefly 'number of casualties'."

The story is familiar to residents of Woodstock on Captain Andrew Drew who commanded the Caroline party was one of the "founders" of this city, and his name is perpetuated in one of its principal streets. It has been said, and altogether facetiously, that the Loyalist party which went from "Toodstock to the aid of Sir Allan MacNab comprised by blacksmith of St. Paul's church. It included Col. Alexander Whalley Light, Major Richard Shiller, Captain Philip Graham, R.N. Admiral Henry Vansittart, as well as Captain Drew.

It is on record that the party which sent the Caroline over the Falls included "several" Woodstock men. Whether Dr. Bingham has been aboard the ship, and Henry Vansittart was a friend of Bingham is mentioned in connection with the affair.

The steamer, hired by the rebels on Navy Island, was used to convey stores from Schlosser. Commander Sir Allan McNab proposed that she be set adrift, and Drew took on the assignment. He led a party in several boats which, fortunately, first boarded the ship first. He and his party chased off the captain and crew, some aboard, set fire to the vessel and cut her loose. That the went over the cataract is not in doubt. In "Rumors of '37" the Lizars' writes that "one had been taken to rouse all sleepers, and every able to sleep brought much a sense . . . Captain Drew and a companion were left on the burning ship, but together got into a boat sent back for them, Drew's men firing a parting volley over above the din."

Drew received the thanks of the Two Houses of Parliament of Upper Canada for the exploit, and was appointed commander of the provincial marine. But the deed excited tremendous indignation in the United States side, where aid and comfort to the rebels was denounced. Drew was hanged in effigy on the anniversary for years afterward, active attempts were made to assassinate him, and in the end the pleasant Woodstock home was forsaken and to preserve his life he returned to England and the navy. He rose in rank until in 1875 he was a promoted full admiral, and died three years later while on the Reserve List, in his 87th year." Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Japanese Fighting Men

The Japanese soldier at the war is one of the world's best equipped fighting men.

There is nothing clumsy or shoddy or ill any way resembling the slimsier Japanese gadgets sold abroad, what the soldiers has at his disposal in actual combat.

The Japanese soldiers have Germans; knapsacks, French trenchcoats, rifles resembling those of the American type, bayonets like those used by the British—in short they have used the best points of each army in the world.

The results are ill-fitting. The Japanese does not have the same sense of military trimness that the other army men possess. But on a cold morning at the front the men have what it takes to carry on efficiently. The officer who seemed so sloppy on the streets of Tientsin or Peiping has a fur-lined sleeveless garment which leaves his arms free. His pistol, dispatch case, field glasses, ammunition and canteen are totally attached to his belt or slung over a shoulder.

The soldiers have warm coats and camel-hair wool, hooded to keep off rain or snow. They button up in front so that the hands are not impeded in heavy going. Their comfort kits, weapons, emergency rations are securely stowed on them.

The Japanese soldiers are better fed than in previous wars. In the first Sino-Japanese war 50 per cent. of them had beri-beri, a dangerous disease caused by diet deficiency, which cripples the muscles. In the Russo-Japanese war 53,000 Japanese suffered from beri-beri. Officials say there has been none in present North-China campaign.

The fighting qualities of the Japanese army are debatable. There is a question of individual courage. There is ample evidence that the Japanese soldier is as courageous as any living man.

It is said that the Japanese are not good aviators. It is true there are many accidents among fliers in Japan. Weather conditions there may be partly responsible, as contended by Japanese officials. The aviators did a neat bit of picking off of rebels by getting parcels that bombing was done at about 300 yards, and the bombing ability at high altitudes were not tested.

Their artillerymen are said to be poor marksmen, although that would be a question of personal opinion. The Japanese do not publicize their gunnery records. The Japanese had so few defeats in battle that they have come to think of bombardment as invincible, admittedly a dangerous attitude when coupled with the tendency toward individualism and excited actions in emergencies.

Their infantrymen work up a holy zeal in their rushes. It makes them hard to withstand. What the Japanese call "bushido," or code for military conduct, regards death as "a human bullet." His life is not as important as the mission he has to be defended. A soldier killed in action is defied. There is no more honorable death.

Belling the Beaver

'Two mice south of the visage of Orwell is a mid zone owner by Mr. F. W. White in which there is a beaver of considerable business with Mr. White one day we learned that he was dissatisfied with beaver, and that he had been feeding them for two seasons past. As a consequence they had become so tame that he was able to get some good motion pictures of them. He found that the animals had become so accustomed to the presence of human beings that they would not be disturbed. Our host suggested that we might try getting pictures, "but," he warned, speak to it as you approach." We took the hint and made a camp fire with a rapid-fire conversation intended to dispel any doubt as to our peaceful intentions, and stepped up to the beaver's lodge on the sailing, apparently unmindful of our approach. For two or three minutes we continued that amiable pell strolled the glistening sides and examined the irregular life like the fascinating experience when one considers that they are usually unapproachable.

"They get very nervous" said our host, "if you step between them and the water," saying which he walked down to the bank the beaver immediately turned and went into the water, where he probably just the instinct of self-preservation, on finding itself shut off from its native element. As the beaver swam away Mr. White called to it to bring leaves and twigs which it grasped as it swam with its mouth full.

"There are two others, they must be around somewhere," remarked the host as he looked for the first one he had visited and so we returned there and witnessed a repetition of this unusual friendship." W. K. in Ontario Fish and Game Bulletin.

Dean of all Crane Limited's branch managers, J. E. McIlreavy, a native of Belleville, and head of the Montreal branch office, is retiring on December 31st after 36 years' service with the Crane organization.

Born in Belleville, Ont., in 1880, and educated in the local schools, Mr. McIlreavy joined the Crane organization in 1901 as a salesman and rapidly won promotion. In 1908 he was appointed to head the newly created sales branch in Vancouver and has thus the honour of being one of the first Canadian Crane managers. In 1926 he was transferred to San Francisco, remaining in Vancouver in 1934 to assume his present position.

Mr. McIlreavy has thus seen the growth of Crane in Canada from a single branch office to a nation-wide Canadian organization operating four large factories and eight-seven branches.

THE KING'S MESSAGE

His Majesty King George Sixth spoke with deep feeling in his broadcast to the Empire on Christmas Day in following the tradition set by his late father, King George Fifth, who was the first of monarchs to use the broadcast and who introduced the broadcasting of royal Christmas messages. Britain's King spoke briefly and his message was warm in its sympathy and inspiring in its courage and hope.

Once again a British ruler has been able to speak in the world at Christmastide, to an Empire at peace. True, there are the evidences of unrest in Palestine but the Empire still keeps at peace.

The Empire does not forget how King George Fifth stressed the Christmas spirit and the principle of the family spirit in the Empire and his son did not forget the same principles in his words of cheer and courage. Again a monarch spoke from the family fireside, linking his name with that of Queen Elizabeth in appreciation of the Empire's loyalty and devotion, and paying his deep tribute to his noble father.

In the King's words, one reads the deep undertone of his appreciation of his task. "We have promised to try and be worthy of your trust and this is a pledge that we shall also keep," he said. These are brief words, but they are the words of a grateful, kindly ruler, who is here the true expression of British sentiment and principle of rule — loyalty to the national trust in a world where the King said "we see over parts of the world shadows of enmity and fear." Yet he does not labor with this idea for his mind turns and he turns the mind of the Empire in these words, "Let us turn to the message that Christmas brings of peace and good will. Let us see to it that this spirit shall in the end prevail, and every one of us can help by making that immortal message the keystone of our daily lives." So the King of half a billion subjects in every part of the earth stresses the Christmas message of goodwill to the world and also this potent fact that the spirit of Christmas can be made a part of the daily life of the people, individually as well as collectively. That is the all-engrossing message of the season.

And so the King closed with these words, "And to all of you, whether at home among your families, as we are, or in hospitals, or at your posts carrying out duties that cannot be left undone, we send our Christmas greetings and wish you under God's blessing health and prosperity in the year that lies ahead."

Subjects of Britain's benign rule pander these words for their truth as they apply to the Empire and to the individual and the community of nations and also to the world at large.

His Majesty gave a hint that the custom of his father in the royal Christmas broadcast may not be continued. "I cannot aspire to take his place, nor do I think that you would wish me to carry on, unvaried a tradition so personal to him."

THE YEAR ROUND

The greatest of the year's festivals is over but the spirit which is in Christmas does not pass. Greetings of friends and relatives, the evidences of goodwill, leave an abiding influence.

In a sense the spirit of Christmas should mark the entire year and it would be well for the world and individual if it did, but, how could live for a whole year at the height of inspiration and zeal which mark the Christmas observance. Such would be emotionally impossible and perhaps financially impossible, unless there could be an adjustment, which is not yet foreseen. But the kindliness and thoughtfulness so peculiar to this season, the greater attention upon the basis of all the world's blessings should not pass or be neglected once the season is over. One would not expect the purchase and presentation of gifts to become a daily affair, but the spirit which is behind these manifestations should endure. It does in no small measure for Christmas does mould lives, but in the course of the ensuing year some of the influence of the Yuletide principles gets a little worn and require to be revived by such a festival of joy and happiness.

Now the world looks forward to a new year, only a few days away. It will bring its surprises, its happiness and its sorrows. These are shielded from the eyes of man, fortunately, until the day comes. But people can look out on the coming days cheered with the spirit of the Yuletide and New Year's season. New Year's itself stresses the great festival as the world swings slowly but surely towards the new birth in nature. It looks across winter to spring.

New Year's has its importance, though it is far surpassed by the festival which has just closed for the Christmas festival is related to humanity very intimately in its stressing of the family life. New Year's is rather impersonal though it does bring many to new resolutions, some of which are carried out.

YOU'RE ONLY 98 CENTS IN-VALUE

Somebody has Taken the trouble
To figure out
What the average person
Has in him
And how much
He is really worth.
First, there is
Water enough
To fill a ten-gallon keg;
The fat would make
Seven cakes of soap;
Enough carbon is there
For 9,000 pencils;
And phosphorus
For 2,000 matches
The manganese would do
For one dose of salts,
And the iron
Could make a little nail.
All the lime needed
To whitewash
A chicken coop
Might be had, too.
Last, but not least,
The sulphur
Would just about
Kill the fleas
On one small dog.
These things
Could be bought for
Ninety-eight cents.
With all our skill,
Efficiency,
And economy
Of mass production
There are still
A few tricks
To be learned
From Old Mother Nature.
I, for one,
Am willing to grant
That ninety-eight cents
Might be a low price
For some people
But there are others
Not worth that much
By far
Overproduction
And depreciation
Are serious problems
In more ways than one.
Windfall ships
Have been learned
About preventing sickness
And curing disease
But it is possible
To carry anything
Too far,
Some day we may wake up
To the fact that
It is not kindness,
Real humanity-
Or good business
By artificial means
To prolong a life
Whose usefulness
Has past
And to compel it
To carry on
Without hope,
A cause for sadness
And a heavy burden
On some one.
In such a case
Our real value
Is much less than
Ninety-eight cents.
Yes, Mother Nature
Often knows best.

'TWAS THE DAY AFTER CHRISTMAS and all through the house there were signs of dyspepsia and that day after the circus feeling. All keyed up with expectation Christmas Eve merges into Christmas Day — good wishes, smiles and chuckles and all that — good eats and perhaps a shade too much of them — sharing, in the joys of others, treasuring a glow at the thought that one has many friends, after all and Christmas the day set aside for the expression of that friendship, not merely an empty gesture. Christmas over, with the feeling, perhaps, that we have been building up for an awful let-down, as the song says, but still strong in the faith if week in the flesh and sorta like a punctured balloon, unlaced as Amos and Andy might say. Looking ahead rather languidly to the New Year holiday and the prospect of making a new set of resolutions to be smashed later one by one, in the face of emergencies of the moment. Oh well, it was a merry Christmas for many — let us hope for a Happy New Year to all.

CHRISTMAS IN CHINA did not suggest peace on earth and good will to men, rather did it suggest a return to cave man savagery with modern weapons and less excuse.

That Body of Yours

VARICOSE ULCERS OF THE LEGS

Nobody likes to undergo any operation, small or large, and unless nothing internal fails, the average individual will put off operation to the last moment.

One condition that is a source of annoyance, interference with getting about to any extent, and often means days or weeks in bed is the varicose ulcer of the leg.

These ulcers, although on the surface of the skin, are caused by sluggishness or stoppage of the circulation in the veins adjoining the ulcer. They are usually due to standing in the one position too long at a time—motormen, policemen, the housewife in the kitchen too much, overweight. Perhaps a little knock or blow on the leg, unnoticed by the individual is the starting point of the ulcer (a little break in the skin) because of the sluggishness of the veins underneath.

In the early stages of an ulcer, getting off the feet, injecting the surrounding veins so that deeper veins will carry on the work and bandaging the leg may bring about a cure.

Unfortunately many of these ulcers become chronic and require operation.

Dr. Alton Owens, New Orleans, in the New Orleans Medical and Surgical Journal, says: "Probably every ulcer which is more than three inches in diameter should be repaired by the removal of the scar tissue, followed by skin grafting, if a permanent and satisfactory healing is to be obtained in a fairly percentage of these ulcers, if healed by other methods besides the removal of the hard scar tissue around them, usually break down under the slightest injury. If the hard scar tissue is not removed, the blood vessels cannot grow through the scar tissue to hasten the healing.

After the scar tissue is removed by operation, the patient remains in bed until the skin flaps are in shape under a heat tent, and cautiously but not salt drainings are applied. The patient gradually gets sufficient circulation of blood into the tissues by raising and lowering the leg.

In small various sloughy lacerations, rest, injecting the adjoining veins, and strapping the legs may be sufficient to heal. In chronic ulcers, the removal of the scar tissue is not only necessary but always about a cure but saves much time.

The Steamer "Caroline"

"Did 23 Canadians ride over Niagara Falls in a flaming steamship on a chill night a century ago?"

In a commendable effort to put "pep" into a newspaper story, the writer of a Niagara Falls, N.Y., dispatch submits this rhetorical question. Answer presently is answered it by quoting Dr. Robert W. Bingham, historical society director in Buffalo who says "No." Dr. Bingham attributes the exaggerated tale to excitement prevailing along the border in 1837.

Incidentally the contemporary reports in U.S. newspapers were to the effect that persons aboard the steamer Caroline when she was "cut out" by a boarding party 100 years ago this month were residents of Buffalo and therefore presumably not Canadians. Historical narratives agree that one man Amos Durfee was killed. The book by Robina and Mulvaney Clark which goes into detail in all those matters says Durfee was shot by a bullet which came from the land on the side of the day that had no life was lost . . . The matter for the Canadian Archives officially accepted by the American people was chiefly furnished by Mackenzie."

The affair in which 23 residents of Woodstock for Captain Andrew Drew who commanded the Caroline party, was one of the founders of the city of Toronto, is perpetuated in one of its principal streets. It has been said, not altogether facetiously, that the Loyalist party which went from Woodstock to the aid of Sir Allan McNab comprised the vestry of St. Paul's church. It included Col. Alexander Whalley Light, Major Edward Bullen, Captain Phillip Graham, R.N., afterward Vice-Admiral, as well as Captain Drew.

Belling the Beaver

Two miles south of the village of Orwell is a mill pond owned by Mr. F. V. White in the midst of a cosply of cedar, having business with Mr. White one day we learned that he was friendly with the beaver, and again we had designs on getting picky for several years. As a consequence they had become so tame that he was able to pick them up and handle them once as a small boy would handle a favourite dog.

It was a growing duck when Mr. Brown, the overseer and I joined Mr. White and proceeded to the beaver pond. We carried with us a varied assortment of food such as apples, carrots, cabbage leaves and a mill scattered around. There was also an old coat with a button lost and a coat lying on the seat.

Our host picked up the bell and began to ring it lustily, following this by calling in a loud voice in unseen friends in a very coaxing manner. "In about two minutes," he said, "you will see a beaver or two still in the dam"—they often swim under before afloat—"you'll then swimming across."

It was probably ten minutes later when we noticed the first beaver swimming under water in our direction. As it neared the bank it came to the surface, and finally under shore where some were standing. The beaver, quite undisturbed by our presence, waddled up on the beach and commenced eating the food scattered around.

Mr. White went up to the beaver and began stroking it as one would a cat. Then he gently slapped its side, picked up large fish and held it up so that we might see better. The beaver meanwhile, continued to eat quite undisturbed. Our host suggested that we might try the petting process, "but," he warned, speak to it as you approach." We picked the bell comb, opening fire with a rapid-fire conversation which was at first merely unmindful of our approach. In two or three minutes we comfort that valuable pelt stroked the beaver's back from nose to tail, the trowel-like tail. It was a fascinating experience when one considers the beaver's natural fear of approachable.

"They get very nervous" said our friend, "if you step between them and their home in the water or the wood behind it, and the beaver immediately turned and went into the water. They are probably just the instinct of self-preservation which keeps them afraid of from its native element. As the evening came away, Mr. White threw it a branch of leaves and twigs which it grasped as it swam back towards its den.

"There are two others, they must be around somewhere," remarked our amateur Cry Owl, as he set about to explore the bank close to followed him. A moment later we found number two. He was halfway out of the water, eating green grain that had been left on the bank to attract ducks. This beaver also responded confidently to the voice and advances of our host. Then we discovered that the third animal was now on the bank where the first one had visited and so we returned there and witnessed a repetition of this unusual friendship.

MONOPOLISTIC 'PROFITEERING' IS CRITICIZED

Broad Administration Anti-Trust Drive Forecast in U. S.

JACKSON SPEAKS

Assistant-Attorney General Says Monopolistic Price Setting Is Into Slump

Washington, Dec. 27 (AP)—Criticism of monopolistic "profiteering" by Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney-General of the United States, received widespread interpretation today as a prelude to a broad administration anti-trust campaign.

Most observers expect President Roosevelt to recommend specific legislation to strengthen present anti-trust statutes. Some even have predicted a congressional investigation of alleged monopolies.

Monopolists Are Blamed

Mr. Jackson, who has discussed the monopoly issue with the president on several occasions, said last night:

"It is the monopolists, and those so near monopoly as to control their prices, who by their profiteering have largely priced themselves out of the market, and priced themselves into a slump.

"When the business goes into a slump, the workmen go home without jobs, the grocer, the baker, the clothier and all the rest have lost their customers. When the customer is lost, the merchant cancels his order for goods.

"And when the cancellation reaches back to the business where it started, the big business man discovers that Government should give him confidence."

DOCTOR PROTECTS NEW DISCOVERY

Treatment For Pernicious Anemia Announced by Physician

Montreal, Dec. 27 (CP)—Dr. Edward A. Genereux said last night his purpose in obtaining a Canadian patent on his new treatment for pernicious anaemia was to "protect this scientific discovery against improper use."

A Canadian patent on the secret, he explained, from seven to 10 times more potent than those heretofore used, was pending and was "granted shortly," said the 45-year-old physician, a native of Hawkesbury, Ont., and graduate of McGill University here.

Money derived from sale of the preparation, added Dr. Genereux, will "provide research funds to be assigned to institutions and clinicians for further investigation in this field."

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, December 28

By Genevieve Kemble

According to the predominant planetary forces for this day, there is likely to be a very lively and varied accident arrival of important news. This may result in an unplanned journey or removal, probably in connection with new business connections, all of real benefit. But be sure to read and sign all papers and writings with care.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of sudden and affairs that may send them to far fields of endeavor and adventure. Fresh contacts or other new interests provide pleasure and benefit, but sign all writings cautiously.

A child born on this day may be clever in an unusual occupation and be inventive, original and adventurous. It may make a conspicuous name for itself.

Members of a committee of the New Jersey State Assembly will recommend that the record of their investigation of the municipal affairs of the town of Wildwood, under the administration of Mayor Doris M. Bradway (above), be referred to the proper authorities for possible prosecution. The report of the committee, which was handed to the assembly, branded the regime as "corrupt, selfish and unpatriotic." In answer to the charges, Mayor Bradway charged that the assembly committee was formed principally for political purposes, and claimed she was denied the right to put up her defense.

MADRID BOMBED FOR 20 MINUTES

Insurgents Retaliate After Government Puts Down Barrage

Madrid, Dec. 27 (AP)—Insurgent artillery shelled Madrid heavily for 20 minutes today after prolonged government bombardment of nearby Insurgent siege positions.

Insurgent batteries concentrated their projectiles in the central section of Madrid. The new bombardment followed one last night in which two theatres were partly destroyed, two persons killed and 10 wounded.

It answered a government barrage which followed a series of heavy crashes, sounding like exploding land mines, from the direction of University City.

MAN IS STRICKEN AT CHRISTMAS MASS

Ottawa, Dec. 27.—Nicholas A. Kiss, well-known construction foreman, died suddenly in St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church while attending Mass Christmas morning.

He had just entered the church and was unbuttoning his coat when he was stricken with a heart attack. Falling from a pew into the aisle, he was carried into the rear of the church where he died before medical aid could reach him.

Born in Nepean Township sixty years ago, he joined the Canadian National Railways as a bridge carpenter and construction foreman. During his twenty years with the railway he worked in various districts throughout Canada. He retired a few years ago.

He will be buried in St. Paul's Cemetery, Aylmer, Que., beside his mother, who also died on Christmas Day twenty-three years ago.

Plainfield

Plainfield—The annual Christmas tree for the United Church Sunday School held in the Orange Hall on Wednesday evening was a splendid success and much credit is reflected upon the faithful staff of teachers and Miss Irene Murphy of the public school who gave so liberally of their time and talent in preparation of the interesting program given.

A large tree laden with gifts was the centre of attraction for the children who were present on the occasion. Among the gifts was a fine large goose the gift of the congregation to the Rev. J. F. and Mrs. Everson. The program opened with a chorus by the public school children. This was followed by an exercise, "Little Jack Horner" under the leadership of Mrs. Harry Harrison. Four girls then sang a song with a splendid moral about "Gossip over the teacups". Recitations were given by Carroll McCready and several of the small girls. Miss Isabel and Miss Jean Elliott rendered some duets. Song selections were given by Mrs. Wilbur Elliott's class of boys and several songs by groups of girls. The young people assisted in a few older ones gave the closing number on the program which was "The Straw Flower Christmas Pageant", which lasted for about forty minutes dramatically illustrating the immediate events surrounding the birth of the Saviour.

The many friends in this community of Mr. Addison Hall, of Toronto, who recently injured badly an index finger in a machine which he was operating while at work will be glad to learn that he is convalescing favorably.

Mr. Frank Hicks left on Thursday morning for a visit with friends in Toronto.

Mrs. Joseph Gow has been suffering for some time from an attack of quinsy.

Mr. Emerson Lott who has been in poor health for several months past has not been so well during the past ten days.

DIAMOND TRAIL IS DISCOVERED

Two Years' Chore is Closing in on Gang of Smugglers

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—Diamonds—$13,000,000 worth—beautiful, sparkling toy gems.

Week after week for seven years relentless lines noted into New York piers carrying the diamonds, hidden in the false bottoms of suitcases.

Today, after two years of tireless sleuthing that led all over Europe, the government moved to cut off the last trickles of that glittering stream.

A huge liner moved toward New York today, but this time it carried two men and a woman the government charges were among the last fugitive cogs in an international smuggling ring.

The travellers who will arrive on Tuesday in the Berengaria are Nat Lakin, Quade Firstenberg and Solomon Walger, three of 85 men and women indicted in June, 30 of whom were subsequently convicted. Twenty five defendants remained fugitives, safe from extradition in Europe. Today the government's net is tightening.

More than a year ago the sudden appearance of quantities of diamonds on the New York market aroused suspicion. In November, 1936 an innocent-looking woman of 36, Vivienne Bert but a resident of New York, walked down the gangplank of a liner carrying a suitcase. Agents grabbed it. The suitcase contained $250,000 worth of gems.

Trail Led Abroad

From there, through arrest after arrest, the trail led abroad. Agents of the ring — some dupes were housewives, salesgirls, a school teacher, a labor union agent, a French actress. Some travelled abroad on monthly schedules, returning with gems each trip.

Hidden away in a downtown building customs agents found a "diamond club", where the ring's real agents met when their ships docked.

Roslin

Roslin—Roslin Public School held their annual Christmas concert on Wednesday evening, December 15. The program was as follows: Opening chorus by School "The Greetings We Love the Best"; At this time the chairman spoke words of greeting saying it was the first time he acted in this capacity at the Roslin school. A three act play in which Santa Claus is well to do family decide to help Santa Claus out by each giving their present to some one who would not receive a present; Recitation, Teddy Welsh; Song by the School, "Hard the Merry Bells.

During the evening the chairman called in Dr. H. E. Welsh for an address. After several words of greeting and congratulations to the teachers and pupils for the splendid programme, he spoke of the way Mrs. Emerson had carried on the school along with the program which Miss Melburn had started before she was taken ill.

Dr. Welsh also referred to the war torn countries of Spain and China, where the children would not have a peaceful Christmas as Canadian children have. Saying all should be very thankful to live in a country like Canada and especially in the Province of Ontario.

He spoke of the benefit to be derived by the children from taking part in a concert and he said he thought more attention would be paid to the art of self-expression and public speaking in the future, along with the three r's reading, writing and arithmetic.

At the conclusion of the program the chairman called in Rev. Beazer for the few words. Rev. Beazer, speaking on behalf of the clergy, wished everyone the compliments of the season.

A hearty clap was given the teachers and pupils for their delightful program. The distribution of presents from the tree and singing of the National Anthem brought the evening's entertainment to a close.

Miss Clara Delyea, Reg. N of New York is spending the Christmas vacation with her parents Mr. and Mrs. W. Delyea.

Bulwarks of Prosperity

Scarcely less important than the dependable news service they provide every day is the contribution the Canadian daily newspapers make, as an industry, to the economic welfare and prosperity of the nation.

Apart from the work of collecting, transmitting and editing news from every corner of the world, many subsidiary trades and enterprises have been established and prospered that the personal service your daily newspaper provides could be extended and maintained.

Directly and indirectly the daily newspapers of Canada provide employment to tens of thousands of Canadian citizens in all parts of the Dominion, from logging camps and paper mills to the printing presses of your local daily newspaper.

Today, it is estimated that more than a half million Canadians are dependent for their livelihood upon the newspaper industry.

Consequently, in addition to providing an essential service to more than two million families every day, the Canadian daily newspapers make an important contribution to the economic and industrial welfare of the nation.

ACCIDENT TOLL OVER HOLIDAY MOUNTS TO TEN

Blind Newsvendor And Wife Killed on Toronto Street

MANY ARRESTS

100 Traffic Mishaps And 60 Injured In Toronto Alone

Ten deaths were listed today as Ontario took stock of its week-end accident toll. Six were traffic fatalities as citizens hurried to participate in Christmas festivities. A youth was shot accidentally, one man was killed by a train, another in a fall down an elevator shaft and the tenth death was the result of an altercation in a hospital ward.

Toronto, with more than 140 accidents, led the province in the number of fatalities. There, police terminated the week-end worse than last year's record. Thirty-one traffic persons were killed in the more than 100 traffic mishaps recorded. Five deaths occurred this year, three of them in traffic.

More than sixty persons were injured in Toronto's dense holiday traffic. Seventy-seven persons were arrested on charges including one of manslaughter. More than 300 men and women were arrested on charges of drunkenness. The number of arrests was similar, and was double that of last Christmas.

A blind news vendor and his wife were struck and killed early Saturday night by an automobile which did not stop at an intersection. Mrs. Thomas Beadle was leader her husband home when the couple was struck down. Later, James Sweetman was arrested on a manslaughter charge as the driver of the death car. Edward Major was struck down and killed in a Toronto suburb by a hit-and-run automobile driver.

Woman Is Held.

Mrs. Alice Bailey, 27, was charged with manslaughter placed under police guard in a Toronto hospital today following the fatal accident Sunday. Police said Bailey, 36, driving a car which she wielded by his wife who left her hospital bed, crept through the hallways to the room where the couple had broke it over his head during an argument.

The stated occurred last Thursday. The Bailey had been confined to the hospital since Dec. 17 suffering scalds as a result of an altercation in their home in that Toronto suburb. Mrs. Bailey died as she fell upon them.) Police said the woman told them Bailey had cursed her as she sought to apologize for the fatal accident.

George Cantwell, 45, fell three storeys down an apartment house elevator shaft and died as he attempted spine Sunday. At St. Albert, Que., Joseph Arthur Lamontagne and Antio Bourgouis was killed when he was thrown to the ground by a train he was driving, harmed by the whistle of the engine, boiled.

Two Killed In Hamilton

Two men were killed in Hamilton during a week-end when emergency wards of hospitals were taxed by the holiday accident toll of Christmas. Icy streets, poor visibility and heavy traffic were blamed by coroners in the deaths of Sam Fine, 34, and Robert Soutar, 72, police said.

At Blue Lake, near Brantford, 15-year-old Jack Shingler was struck by an automobile while sleigh riding. He died later. Fred Ellis died of a bullet wound in the abdomen suffered when his hunting rifle accidentally discharged during a trip through the woods near Hawkesbury.

Many other accidents in which men were injured occurred in many points. Hazardous driving conditions hurt were reported from the north to intermittent weather were contributing causes.

Bring Matter Up.

Toronto, Dec. 27 (CP)—Concerned over the number of Christmas week-end accidents in which children were injured, Mayor-elect Ralph Day said last night he intended bringing the problem up for discussion at the first meeting of the 1938 Board of Police Commissioners.

He said the solution might be found in stiffer penalties for offenders.

With Government offices all closed for the long week-end and with most newspapers not publishing over the holiday, there was no confirmation or denial of the report obtainable.

Foreigners Subject To Military Law

Shanghai, Dec. 27—(CP-Havas)—Japanese authorities today announced all foreigners entering or residing in Japanese-occupied zones of Shanghai would be subject to Japanese military law.

These regulations are designed to protect the Japanese armed forces in wartime, including the death sentence for anti-Japanese activities.

Announcement of the new regulations, made by a Japanese Embassy spokesman, coincided with the granting to foreigners of free access to the Japanese-occupied zones north of Soochow Creek, the granting being that foreigners were permitted to enter the Yangtzepoo, Honkew and Chapei sectors, without special authorization.

The spokesman said the decision regarding the military regulations did not signify that Japan intended to abrogate extra-territoriality rights in those zones.

Japanese authorities will respect international law and existing treaties, with the rights of nationals of third powers receiving full consideration, he added. A Japanese note amplifying the spokesman's announcement is expected to be distributed soon.

JAPANESE FORCES CAPTURE TSINAN

Naval Blockade of Taingtao is Now in Progress

An announcement of the town's fall followed institution of a Japanese naval blockade of Tsingtao, principal port of Shantung Province.

A Japanese foreign spokesman told newspapermen the Tokyo government was conducting an active investigation into the Japanese attack against the British gunboat warship Ladybird near Wuhu on the Yangtze two weeks ago.

He could not predict whether a Japanese reply to Great Britain's protest over the incident would be forthcoming before the end of the year.

New Principle of Nature Seen In Discovery with Yeast

Cells if Injured Long Enough Make Growth-Stimulating Chemicals

MYSTERY CHEMICALS

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

Indianapolis, Dec. 27—(AP)—A mysterious new chemical made by injured yeast-cells, which heals terrific burns quickly and without scars, was reported to the American Association for the advancement of science today.

The chemical, a watery fluid, grows fresh, normal skin over the burned areas, instead of the usual tightly-drawn, disfiguring scar tissue. It gets the victim out of the hospital; the Association was told, faster than any other remedy.

It is a by-product of discovery of a new principle of tissue growth found at the Institution Divi Thomae, of Cincinnati the discoveries were made by George Sperti, John Loofbourow, John Pardon, Andree Cueto and Elton Cook.

The injury remedy is one of several seemingly miraculous effects of growth, and the only one which has been applied to human beings. The treatment for burns has been tried for about a year at St. Mary's hospital in Cincinnati.

The principle the chemical yeast is mixed with a salt solution and subjected to lethal ultra-violet rays. Injured cells are not killed but immediately, but are injured continuously for at least an hour.

Then the liquid is filtered off and contains the growth-stimulating chemical. Injury has to last some time for this chemical to be made. For example, if the cells are killed immediately, the healing stuff does not appear.

Evidence that here is a new principle of nature is found in the fact that not only yeast, but other living cells, if injured long enough, will manufacture growth stimulating chemicals. Each chemical is different, with yeast-growth chemical by growth of new cells of the same kind as were destroyed.

Thus with an extract from injured liver cells, the scientists caused new liver cells in a test tube to grow new cells. This kind of growth of liver is a new scientific fact, the report said. Tests have been made to find out whether such an extract could be used in the living body to cause a partly destroyed liver to replace itself.

QUEBEC VOTERS GO TO THE POLLS

By-Election in Lotbiniere Fought on War Issue

Ste. Croix, Que., Dec. 26—(CP)—Voters in the rural electoral district of Lotbiniere go to the polls today to choose a representative in the House of Commons to replace J. A. Verville, veteran Liberal member of parliament who died a month ago.

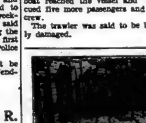
Choice of the 23,000 Lotbiniere residents eligible to cast votes in the federal by-election lies between J. N. Francoeur, a native of the county who represented it in the provincial legislature for 20 years, and Paul Bouchard, 30-year-old Quebec lawyer who styles himself an "Independent Nationalist."

The campaign, of which the main issue centred around the possibility of Canada's participation in a foreign war, provided the debut bid federal politics of both candidates.

Bouchard charged Canada's "penditures of $85,000,000 this year for military purposes were in the way of preparation of Canada's entry into a foreign war."

The Liberal candidates asserted Canada needed to take "defence precautions in this day of war on every hand and the Dominion's defences are grossly for defence."

In answer to another charge by the Independent Nationalist who talked "too much, preparations for Canada and greater autonomy for Quebec" at his public meeting, Francoeur declared "there is no question of the government at Ottawa being militarist as Bouchard says the authorities seek only to assure peace for Canada."



Francoeur accused Bouchard of "spreading false and subversive doctrines in an attempt to damage the system of government which provides Canadians with unequalled liberty."

PASSENGERS AND CREW RESCUED IN ICELAND

Reykjavik, Iceland, Dec. 27.—Passengers and crew of the grounded British trawler Regal were saved from rough seas off the south coast of Faxaby Saturday night when Christmas eve travelers saw rockets ascend from the wrecked vessel.

A lifeboat brigade got within 400 yard of the trawler and brought four passengers ashore on a first trip. After the seas went down, a launch reached the vessel and rescued five more passengers and the crew.

The trawler was said to be badly damaged.

No traffic travels this Calcutta street this day as, dewoori Moslems bow their heads to the ground in the ceremony of Id-El-Fitr, one of the most impressive in Moslem religious ceremony. As far as the eye can see, a veritable sea of backs stretches, with each worshipper bent to the ground with his head in the direction of Mecca.

HUSBAND DIES WIFE IS HELD

Mrs. Fred Bailey, 27, Charged With Manslaughter And Under Guard

Toronto, Dec. 27—(CP)—A 27-year-old mother of two children was under police guard in hospital here today, charged with manslaughter, as authorities investigated the death of her husband over whose head the woman admitted breaking a bottle of acid during an argument.

Fred Bailey, 36, died in Toronto General Hospital Sunday. Police said Mrs. Alice Bailey had told them she struck him with the bottle in the hospital ward where the two were confined early last Thursday. The bottle, which contained a weak acid solution, was stolen from the hospital laboratory.

The man and wife were admitted to hospital Dec. 17. Both suffered severe scalds received, police said, when a kettle of boiling water fell from a table while the two were quarrelling in their home. Bailey had been in critical condition since his admittance.

Mrs. Bailey told police she had apologized in hospital to her husband for the quarrel, Bailey had replied, police said, by striking her early morning hours of last Thursday, the woman, clad in a nightshirt, left her bed and struck at the lake oriatory. She said she did not know what the bottle contained and Chief Coroner Dr. Smirle Lawson said his examination showed the man only a mild scald and that he did not cause death. It was spilled over Bailey's neck and face.

The man supposedly behind the scenes in Japan's invasion of China is Major-Gen. Kenji Doihara, who is termed Japan's "Lawrence of Manchuria." General Doihara came into the spotlight in 1931 by his mysterious but successful exploits in Japan's Manchurian campaign.

Family Reunions Topped By a Turkey Dinner Highlighted Observance

Weather Across Dominion Colder Than Usual With Sleet, Snow

MANY ACCIDENTS

In Many Churches Special Services Inaugurated Glad Day

By The Canadian Press

Canada celebrated a "white Christmas" quietly. Church attendance, King George's Empire broadcast and a family reunion topped by a turkey dinner highlighted the usual observance of the holiday.

Western Canada reported subzero temperatures while snow and sleet storms prevailed from central Canada to the east coast. Communications wires were disrupted by the storm in Nova Scotia and in many places highways were blocked.

The weather was held partly responsible for the 29 accidental deaths over the Dominion during Christmas weekend. Ontario headed the death list with 10 reported. Three cases were reported from Montreal, Quebec. Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. One died in Alberta.

For the first time in 21 years Vancouver had snow for Christmas. A foot of snow fell on the west coast city where winter rains are the rule for the Christmas season.

Special Services

Most churches throughout the Dominion held special services. Early services at Roman Catholic and Anglican churches were well attended. Clark services were held Christmas Eve at many churches.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King spent the day at Laurier House residence in Ottawa. Members of his cabinet ministers remained at Ottawa for the holiday festivities.

Thousands of children throughout the country the Dionne quintuplets spent a joyous day with their parents opening present from all over the world. The quints didn't get turkey for Christmas because of rigid diet specifications but their menu season was festive in other respects.

Tragedy in many homes darkened the Christmas spirit. Police said reckless motorists were responsible for many accidents in which hundreds of persons were injured.

Fatalities Over Canada

The Death List:

Nova Scotia: Boyd Thurston died when an automobile ran off a slippery highway and crashed near Amherst; Mrs. Barbara Cavanagh, 85, was killed at Truro when she fell downstairs; a man police believed was Steve MacDonald, 40, was found frozen to death after he had attempted overboard from a coastal steamer.

Singing Mouse Going Strong

Woodstock, Ill., Dec. 27 (AP)—You must hand it to Minnie, the singing mouse. In one year she earned $1,000 and added 13 children and seven grandchildren to her family.

Tuesday she will celebrate the first anniversary of her radio station-wide radio performance, at which she demonstrated she really was a songbird.

Her discoverer, Herbert O. Gensch, superintendent of the Chicago Industrial Home for Children, who skyrocketed her to fame immediately from coal bin obscurity, said today as he planned for the celebration that she was still going great guns.

He said Minnie received $500 for her first broadcast lullaby and had picked up an additional $500 since then for other appearances. All the money, he said, had been turned over to the Home by Minnie's owner, the Woodstock Civic Club.

Meantime, Minnie's activities, as well as that of her sponsors, has been focused upon one of her offspring, a son. He has shown some ability as a boy soprano.

MEMBER OF CREW SWEPT OVERBOARD

Freighter Beulah Rides Out Storm And Proceeding to Port

Victoria, Dec. 27 (CP)—The freighter Beulah, South Seas trading vessel, proceeded toward this port today under her own power after losing a man overboard yesterday as she fought through gale-swept seas off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Steering gear of the twin-engine motor ship was damaged Saturday night as she headed for the South Seas with a British Columbia cargo. A 50-mile-an-hour gale drove her across the first breakers off Carmanah Point, 80 miles northwest of Victoria.

The 1,388-ton freighter was held with anchors until she managed to pull clear yesterday. The Canadian Mines Steamer Armentiers, outward bound from Bamfield, B.C., and a United States coastguard cutter stood by.

A patrolman searched Carmanah Beach for the body of a man lost overboard from the Beulah. Details of the mishap were not given in wireless messages from the commanders. Commanded by Captain S. Johnson of New York, the Beulah's crew of 23 was recruited largely from South Sea ports.

Hurricane House

By BRUCE HENRY

Chet took his cue, walked over, sat down by Mrs. MacAllister and began to explain why he thought it wise for Sandra to go back to New York. Sandra's voice broke in after a moment, Ronny walked over to her.

"I want to talk with you a minute before you go away, Sandra." She looked at him steadily, ignored what he had said—"You'll tell Lucia good-bye for me, won't you. I hope her patient recovers." She saw that Sandra's face was pale as ever, but to her it was not resentments of her friendliness words, but something. Suddenly she wanted to get away and went to her room to pack.

The last Sandra saw of Ronny he was standing with his arms folded on the little white gate, his face turned toward the car but with a vague, far-away look in his half closed eyes. She told herself, "More than once I've wished I never had to see you again and I'm wishing it now as I never did before," and settled back in her corner of the tonneau with a deep wistful sigh.

Three days later she received Mrs. MacAllister's not saying Lucia Baldwin and Chet Burton were married — "In a bedside ceremony at the Grandview hospital Sunday afternoon."

INSTALMENT 28

Less than a week after the return of Enid and Sandra from Mayle Village, Martha Allen got a call on them . . . and for the first time in her life Sandra knew what it was to feel fear in the presence of another woman.

Martha wore a dark blue hat that set well back on her hennaed head revealing the whole of her face in angular face. There was something tragic attractive about that face—a large, angular woman and Sandra sensed that in her younger days she no doubt had a certain virile charm. But now there was a hard cast to her much made-up features that all but obliterated the remaining traces of what must have been an almost masculine comeliness, and her eyes . . .

Martha Ancell's eyes bolstered Sandra's courage and gave to it a shamed. They gazed on one with a concentrated magnetic fixity as if they were looking not on a person but a thing.

"I simply couldn't rest." Martha droned in her deep voice. "Until I saw you with my own eyes, that poor dear Sandra had completely recovered from her very trying experience."

Sandra said, "I'm quite all right again, thank you," and felt the most overpowering impulse to run from the room and to get away from those hypnotic eyes.

"Why did she come? Sandra asked herself, but Martha had gone. "Not to see me. She's never liked me."

But Enid said, quietly, "Martha lives a very lonely life, Sandra, and Anthony are not at all congenial and she has for years. And so, of that, adequately disposed of her daughter's question. Enid said, "I hope feel equal to it but I think it would go down and do some shopping for me."

"Of course, Enid," Sandra said, but she was only vaguely aware of what her foster mother had said. She was thinking, "Martha lives a very lonely life . . . Martha and Anthony are not at all congenial." . . . And hearing her own voice, Sandra said again, "Collusion, collusion, collusion.!" It was all arranged, Martha's divorce, Ronny, Enid's marriage to Ancell . . .

That was the first time Sandra had gone shopping alone since she came back to New York and she found it a rather exciting adventure. She drove her own car. When she left Enid she had taken the car on Enid's list, she decided to run down to Lucia's and get Lucia's address.

Chet was out. She sat with David in Chet's office and talked foolishness until at last David said, "Well, San, we'll soon be back to where we started. You've completed your course and I'll be through in September when I go back to school in Philadelphia. We've been having a funny little interlude, haven't we?"

Sandra nodded. She couldn't tell him it wasn't an interlude and that she loved him, that she had from the time they started. She said, "I suppose you feel you're half a lawyer already. You've a legal air about you."

"Why not? I've been learning things." But she could see he was thinking about something else and after a moment he asked, "Hear anything from Maple Village since you came home?"

Her eyes dropped. "I had a note from Mrs. MacAllister. She just wrote that Lucia and Chet Burton were married. You remember her, don't you?"

Sure. She seemed to be a pretty slick number." He tried again. "Hear anything from Ronny?"

By an effort of will, she coaxed a smile to her lips, though her head was up. "Still matchmaking, darling?" she drawled.

"Never see here." David said, unsmiling, you can't kid me. San. No one could be around Ronny for weeks on end and not be nuts about him. Come clean, what happened?"

"You have about the worst case of hero worship on record, David," she said lightly. "Ronny is a darling, but he's not for me. I'm not his type. She have seen her face in a mirror. She said there, at last, was hurt and hunger she felt for Ronny — but she knew that she felt for David, despitedly small and common-minded creature which had to be fed with lies. "I'm going back to Maple Village.

"Yes, darling . . . There's nothing in the works." She rose and turned to the door. "Come over for dinner, was—if that makes you feel any better." She added, "I may have more and —never can be again."

"I'll be expecting me." David said, and she walked towards the door. "Oh, by the way, I had a card from Enid this morning."

WHAT HAPPENED TO FORMER LAZY MOTHER?

You used to say, when she passed your house, "There goes the laziest housewife in the whole town (almost)." Always tired, sleepy-eyed. SHE didn't have to get excited. But you're due for a surprise, for she's changed her name awake—busy as a bee. The neighbours are just amazed at the transformation!

Her trouble was faulty elimination. Poisons that should have been expelled. She was bothered with rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, nerves on edge, nobody could be of any help and she was always arising from accumulated wastes.

Finally she worked the treatment that changed her life. It acted very like impurities, stimulated liver and kidneys, freed her from the constipation and headaches and aches. It gave her, in her own home, the same treatment of the waters of famous English spas, for Carter's Little Liver Pills contain a concentration of the most valuable of these salts of the famous Spas—Carlsbad, Vichy and Cheltenham. Carter's Little Liver Pills are small, easy to take, but their bright, frank, fit feeling, helps her enjoy her meals . . . enjoy life itself. If you feel dull, slowed up, lazy—if rheumatic pains or lumbago torture you — take Fynnon Salt—the home spa treatment —and free yourself from clogging, joy-killing impurities. Then you'll feel right, you'll look right, you'll be right. Your druggist sells Fynnon Salt—25c, 60c and $1.00 per package. AT THE BELLE

"The Prisoner of Zenda"

Right on the heels of his sensational hit, "A Star Is Born", David O. Selznick has ushered in another magnificent piece of entertainment.

The picture is "The Prisoner of Zenda", Anthony Hope's swashbuckling tale of love, intrigue and adventure, with Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in the leading roles, and the Belle Theatre is the fortunate audience where it had its premiere told the world in no uncertain terms that Mr. Selznick has another hit on his hands.

Colman is at his charming best in the difficult dual role of the adventurous Rudolph Rassendyll and as the roistering King Rudolph V whom he resembles so closely.

When the agents of the King's brother, Black Michael (Raymond Massey) are plotting to seize the throne, render the king incapable of attending his own coronation by drugging his drinks, Colonel Sapt (C. Aubrey Smith) and young Captain von Tarlenheim (David Niven) enlist Rassendyll to impersonate the king at his coronation.

Clever Deception.

Rassendyll does so well that he even deceives the lovely Princess Flavia (Madeleine Carroll), betrothed of the king, who proceeds to fall madly in love with him. Rassendyll loves her, too, and is about to reveal the deception when—it is discovered that the king has been kidnapped by Black Michael and his henchmen, the dashing Rupert of Hentzau (Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.) and his imprisoned in Zenda Castle. It thus becomes necessary to keep Rassendyll on the throne.

The beautiful philosetic de Mauban (Mary Astor) realizes sweet heart of Black Michael goes to Zenda Castle and offers to help him rescue the king. She lures Rupert to her room to get him out of the way. Black Michael discovers her in Rupert's arms and Rupert kills him.

Rassendyll invades the castle with a handful of men and the way for the attacking party. In one of the most thrilling duels in the history of the writer, Rupert is bested. The king is rescued and restored to his throne. And in the meantime, Flavia realizes her duty and sends Rassendyll away.

Lavishly mounted with some sixty-odd breath-taking sets including a cathedral, a castle and the sumptuous castle ballroom, "The Prisoner of Zenda" ranks among the most impressive and beautiful pictures ever filmed, including Coronation ceremony and Coronation ball.

A very interesting newsreel and Popeye in "Lost and Foundry" were also exhibited. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.10. The feature presentation at 7.20 and 9.35. The entire program will be repeated again tonight, Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily.

Daughters Persist In Giggling

By GARRY C. MYERS PH. D.
Head, Department of Psychology, Education and Research Cohen, Western Reserve University

GIGGLING BY girls in early adolescence is not at all unusual, and they do get over it eventually. But a New England mother writes about her two giggling daughters. Five and seven.

"I am at my wits-end with my two youngsters. Their ages are 5 and 7. I put them to bed at 7.30 and it is now 8.06. It has taken me all that time to stop them from giggling and to make them go to sleep, and as usual it had to end up in a spanking.

"They last two weeks have been terrible. It is plain in the morning until they are late for school. .....They have always been pretty good about minding until recently, and truthfully, I don't know now what course to take to make them mind.

"If I set them in a chair they will say the most foolish, things and then giggle. I don't believe in spanking a child often, but how else can I stop that giggling? Five or ten minutes I can stand, but when it runs on and on—well, I admit I need some one a whole lot wiser than I to help me out....."

My reply, in part. There are times when this girls should be made to sit as much as they like. If they feel that they can, at such times, they will giggle less.

Solve Bedtime Problem

Have the younger go to bed half an hour earlier than the older. Anyway the older should have some acknowledgement of her seniority, the fact that the other, on going to bed, does not disturb the younger. Make each offense immediately punishable in an effective way. If the younger going to bed later than the older, some one not so promptly to sleep, have the other occupy your bed until you return. Then she can be carried, while asleep, to her own bed.

Often the question, set a definite time when both must be ready for bed. Then, if dilly-dallying, keep them in separate rooms all day, or till noon, at least. Quit talking so much. Act. Be decisive.

When both need punishment at the same time for other offenses about which they have been warned once, assign one to sit in one room and another in another room. Then if they call to each other, give them a good sound spanking.

At most times of the day, however, you will not only let these little girls giggle and laugh, but also will laugh and have a good time with them.

GOOD SPREAD MADE OF HEALTHFUL CARROT

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint

Tomato Juice
Cooked Cereal With Rich Milk
Toast Carrot Marmalade
Coffee

DINNER

Creamed Dried Beef Over Toast
Onions Corn
Cabbage, Celery, Green Pepper Salad
Dutch Pineapple Cake Tea

Cooked cereal always seems so much more "fillin'" than ready-to-eat, so I have only suggested toast and carrot jam to complete the meal. The carrot marmalade recipe was sent me by my mother a number of years ago, and I am printing it just as she sent it to me. I am giving you two Christmas cookie recipes with the others.

Today's Recipes

CARROT JAM — The carrots have to be ground in the food chopper and boiled in water until tender. Half four cups of carrots in water until dry, then grind two lemons and one orange, add four cups sugar and mix with carrots. Boil one hour and a half, then it is ready to put in glasses.

DUTCH PINEAPPLE CAKE — Mix and sift two and one-fourth cups flour, three teaspoons baking powder and one-half teaspoon salt. Cream one-half cup butter add one cup sugar and beat well. Add three well-beaten eggs, add two-thirds cup milk alternately with sifted dry ingredients. Bake cake in two greased, sprinkle with brown sugar and place in pan slices of canned pineapple with a maraschino cherry in centre of each. (The cherry may be omitted.) Pour cake batter over pineapple and bake about one hour in a moderate oven. Serve warm with whipped cream.

CINNAMON STARS— One-half pound sugar, five egg whites beaten until stiff, add one-half hour. Add one-half pound almonds cut fine, one cupfuls lemon peeling cut fine, two teaspoons cloves, two teaspoons cinnamon one-half teaspoon lump ammonia, scraped before measuring you can get this any store, enough flour to form dough. Roll dough about one-quarter-inch thick, cut with star cutter, sprinkle with granulated sugar. Press half almond in centre of each cookie and bake in moderate oven.

CITRON BREAD — One-half pound sugar, two whole eggs, two cups milk, one cup fat, one cup citron peel, one-half cup chopped nuts, one-half cup chopped lemon peel, one-half pound flour, one-half teaspoon ammonia. Roll dough in half-inch rolls. Cut about two inches long, bake in moderate oven.

"America's Most Famous Beauty"

USUALLY, when one woman calls another a "two-faced" it means it is a decidedly derogatory manner. But at a lecture the other night, a well known physiognomist stated that all women really ARE two-faced. He hastened to explain, however, that he didn't mean to accuse the female sex in general of being deceitful or two personified. What he meant was that the right and left sides of any face are rarely dissimilar. The eyes, the nose, the general facial contour and even the hair rarely match side differ. And that's a most important matter when one has her photograph taken.

Every girl should know something about photography, especially at this time of the year, for women often have their photographs taken around this time so that they may send them with their Christmas gifts upon close friends.

Before going to a photographer a girl should study herself carefully in a mirror, in order to find out what her best angle is. It may be profile, it may be full face, or it may be with the head slightly turned. And, of course, the better side is the one she should present to the lens when she has that picture taken.

It is a good idea to get a shampoo before being photographed, so that your hair will look soft and wavy and reflect becoming highlights. A facial is also a good thing to undergo before, so that all lines and wrinkles are smoothed out and the skin looks soft and velvety.

Light on Lipstick

As for makeup, always remember that red usually photographs black, so use a light hand with your lipstick, and don't use any rouge at all, for it tends to make gray or blackish shadows on your cheeks.

Before being photographed, cleanse your skin thoroughly with a good cold cream. Then remove the cream and apply an astringent, rapher.

to close the pores and tone up the skin. After this, spread a very light coating of powder evenly over your entire face.

Apply your lipstick very lightly, too, and don't use any rouge unless you want your cheeks to look hollow. A soft, moist, lipstick photographs most attractively. Eyeshadow, like rouge, photographs black, so omit that unless you wish your eyes to appear tragically dark and hollow. You may apply your mascara or eyelash cream, however, to bring out the full beauty of your fringed orbs. And as the final step, touch up your brows neatly with an eyebrow pencil. Then you'll be all set to "look pleasant, please" for your photographer.

NEW DRUG IS NOW BEING USED TO TREAT VARIOUS SKIN ILLS

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

MEDICINE gets its new drugs from many sources. Lately dermatologists have begun to use the chemical which has been used very widely as a water softener—sodium hexametaphosphate. When applied to a powder on the skin, it removes the irritation from soap, and of all soaps reduces irritation by 50 per cent. It is recommended for cases of eczema, itching, acne and dermatitis, oil acne and ringworm infection—athlete's foot.

Some soaps dissociate in solution on the skin to form free alkali which attacks the skin, causing absorption of the water. This soap dermatitis causes roughing and burning, sometimes followed by a reddening of the skin, especially on the hands and feet. The condition is common in some industries.

Bathing the affected part with a solution of sodium hexametaphosphate in the morning before work, during the noon hour, immediately after work, and just before going to sleep at night, relieves the irritation in many instances. It prevents the occurrence of the dermatitis, and also cures it if it has occurred.

Treatment of Oil Acne

Oil acne consists in pimples on the skin due to the use of certain oils in industry. Patients whosstalled in the White House.

HEALTH SIGN IS ANIMATION

SICKLY GIRL CAN'T BE GAY

JOAN MARSH
This star's sparkling eyes reflect perfect health.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Animation gives sparkle to the eyes, is reflected in the tone of the facial tissues and imparts a quality of beauty to the mouth.

To be animated a woman must be in perfect form. The tired woman is likely to offer gay remarks. Women run themselves ragged with their social duties, run to the dance and then foolishly believe that two hours sound sleep will be ample for her to put them together again. It can't be done.

Women who have slipped past the 40th birthday must realize that they hurry and late hours are going to take a toll of good looks. They must get into their sleeping hours. When they're tired, they must rest. Women who are young-looking these days, but they have not the strength and vitality of 20, and they should know it.

Exercise out-of-doors refreshes the spirit as well as the body, brings a sense of exhilaration, makes one gay and animated. Nourishing food is a help in the war against Daddy Time. The daily bath is a marvelous pick-up.

How one looks depends upon how one lives, thinks and acts.

Premature eye wrinkles are a real affliction. They come from various causes—the squinting habit, need of eyeglasses and poor nutrition.

The tissues should be fabricated every night, the whole massage cream, olive oil or coconut oil. Place the first fingers on the upper lid close to the nose, press out to the temple and come back underneath. After the massage, dip pieces of gauze in ice-cold water, keep them pressed to the eyes until the flesh is warm and steaming.

Boy Friend Entertains Other Girl

By VIRGINIA LEE

IT IS VERY hard for a woman to be broadminded where her lover or husband is concerned. Any suspicion of disloyalty upon their lives and she sees red, and isn't to be depended upon to show a liberal spirit.

A recent newspaper story reported a wife who had tried to take a sophisticated view of her husband's friendship with other women, but she finally broke down and beat the other woman with a stick.

Well, what you come to think about it, men are not always to be trusted either. They are very secretive and other men are involved. Often times the male of the species is just as deadly as the female.

At any rate, a young woman, signing herself A. B., was quite disturbed over the fact that her boy friend had persuaded his parents to entertain another young woman over a certain week-end. She says A. B. to twiddle her thumbs or go out with someone else, as she pleases.

He assures A. B. that he doesn't care a thing for this other young woman, whom he has known for a very long time, and is merely doing it for his parents.

I think you did just right in agreeing to the proposition. A fellow does have to do such things once in a while, and if you try to be unemotional about it you can see his point. Why don't you go out with someone else? It would be a good idea. Of course, if your friend continues to be attentive after this episode then he did before, you can conclude that his love is waning. But I don't think there are any symptoms of it at present. If you go out with someone else he may not be quite so willing to oblige his parents if such a case should again arise.

It is always better to let your young woman's address to send you. I have always found, however, that there are women neighbors, women in the church one is working, and in other organizations, like the parent-teachers association, with whom one can be friendly and spend pleasant afternoons.

M. H. S.: I do not have this young woman's address to send you. I have always found, however, that there are women neighbors, women in the church one is working, and in other organizations, like the parent-teachers association, with whom one can be friendly and spend pleasant afternoons.

Curb Youth's Pranks by Ridicule

Older Boy Not Likely to Repeat Escapade If He is Humiliated

By LISA GRENELLE

Jos Holland and a few handpicked cronies had been out "parking" for the town with their girls. They left them with the delighted and pleasantly terrified feeling that they were all entirely incorrigible and would undoubtedly be expelled.

Joe felt frightened, defiant and important when the dean sent for him the next morning. He had really been pretty bad, and the dean would be in a rage, he thought.

Holland prepared himself again, the dean's rage, against being ordered home, as he would have if he were a soldier. No pleading for forgiveness, either. He girded himself a hero, or perhaps a proud prisoner at the bar of justice before the judge, impassive, unmoved, unrepentant.

Holland was impressed by the picture. So were his cronies.

He entered the dean's office a straight and manly figure. He had never felt so important in his life.

Treated it Lightly

Facing the dean's desk, he waited. The dean did not look up. He was busy with some papers. Holland shuffled his feet, made noises in his throat. Mildly. He was not the voice of someone whose mind was still on his papers, as if Holland's presence, though a surprise, signified nothing of importance.

"Sit down," the dean said presently, without looking from the papers. "Be with you in a minute."

Holland sat down, and the dean finished his papers.

The student, tense, controlled, said, "Yes sir?" and waited.

The dean did not look up. He finished his papers, began reading. "Didn't know you were still such a kid Holland." Without anger, the dean's voice was deep and dry with contempt.

"Sir," Holland said, flushing —and waited.

Humiliation Best

But the dean said no more. Finally he looked up from the second and remarked: "You can go, Holland. I have no time for kids this morning. I've more important matters to attend to."

Holland slunk out.

"What happened?"

"Nothing." and Holland slunk off to his room.

No more escapades for him. Not if he had to pay with a humiliating interview like that. It was one thing to get into a fight, even to fire him, but another thing to make a fool like a boy, who wanted to stand up against rage or outrage, another to stand up against contempt.

You may be able to cure further misdemeanors by ridicule and scoffing, but the only really effective, lasting cure is to remove the instances out of the escapade is to make it seems silly and babyish and contemptible, but not dangerous.

Metallic Fabrics Having Their Day in the Mode

Dresses, Blouses, Trimmings And Accessories All Reflect Vogue for Gleam and Glitter

Gold metallic cloth affects sun fresh, black velvet hat

By LISBETH

"EVERY DOG has his day," they say. This is the day of metal cloths. They glimmer and glisten from morning to night and all through the evening.

Dresses embroidered with metal cloth, accessories or decorations are seen for daytime and evening wear. With the debutante it is a while the gold lame girdle or other accents. With the older woman it is a lame dress for formal wear in the afternoon and evening.

The type chosen for formal afternoon wear is shown here in a dress from Stein and Blaine. It is of gold metallic cloth, has short puffed sleeves. Its richness lies in the fabric, since the lines are very simple. A corded belt and bow at both waistline and neck, are its only trimming.

A black velvet halo hat is worn with it. By the way, some of the face types of hats are important for spring.

Gold Crochet

Gold mesh thread has been used to crochet the smart Kargere dinner blouse, also shown here. It is simply made to show off a slender waistline. It is one of those little coat-like blouses with a narrow plain collar, and buttons down the front, which suggests a Chinese mandarin influence.

This blouse is worn with a black velvet skirt and small peaked and veiled velvet hat.

Metal cloth is used also in holiday negligees. A clever lounging pajama has the wide trousers of black velvet, the jacket is striped lame.

There is also a house coat in royal blue with gold braid decorations, and a black velvet house coat with bands of jet sequins crossing the top. Women must glitter, it seems.

Benefits in Being Undersize

By HELEN FOLLETT

It's no use for the short girls to cry because they aren't tall. When nature gets through with the growing process, she's through for keeps. One suspects that these complaints aren't taken seriously when the complainers. Little girls are nice to flirt with, nice to dance with and, as far as any observing eye can see, they have a better chance to lure a man to the altar than has the tall darling. Some men like 'em pint-size and cute.

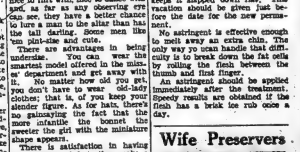
There are advantages in being undersize. You can wear the smartest model offered in the miss-es' department and get away with it. No matter how old you get, you don't have to wear old-lady clothes; that is, if you keep your slender figure. As for hats, there's no gainsaying the fact that the more infantile the bonnet the prettier the girl with the miniature shape appears.

There is satisfaction in having tiny hands and feet; they make a strong appeal in the stronger sex.

Just as children look their prettiest in clothes that are smartly but simply cut, so the small lady. She must limit her sartorial decorations with the utmost restraint. If she says her beauty prayers and minds her p's and q's, she will not be afflicted with the meal-bag figure.

Back muscles can be strengthened by pedaling. Lie on the back on support. Lift the feet. on a long with the upper part.

Don't do this exercise in a half-heated manner. Give the muscles plenty of hard tugs, lift the feet high.



Massaging the scalp and brushing the hair help to strengthen the small fibres around the hair roots and get the blood streams into action.

It would be a good thing for any head of hair to have a few weeks' rest from the finger waves which keeps it slapped down flat. This vacation should be given just before the date for the new permanent.

No astringent is effective enough to melt away an extra chin. The only way to lose handles that diffically is to break down the fat cells by pulling the flesh between the thumb and first finger.

An astringent should be applied immediately after the treatment. Speedy results are obtained if the flesh has a brisk ice rub once a day.

Toronto Ties With Wings Saturday to Gain on Canadiens

DETROIT SLUMPS

A Draw Best Showing in Last Seven Games

(By The Canadian Press)

They'll be calling John Adams of Detroit Dour Jack instead of smiling Jack if the Red Wings keep up their present pace. The world champions have won only three games and tied two in 16 played since the National Hockey League season opened and that's enough to change any hockey manager's outlook on life.

Pudgy Jack worried off another four or five pounds last night as his Wings shortened a 3-1 beating from Toronto Maple Leafs after holding the Smythemen to a 1-1 tie in Toronto Saturday. That drew was the second in a row for the Leafs in seven games.

The three points enabled Leafs to break their tie with the Mile Montreal Canadiens for Canadian Division leadership, Boston Bruins went four points ahead in the American Division by beating Americans 1-0 in New York Saturday night. Last night they were beaten 3-1 by the New Yorkers but night didn't matter so much because Chicago Black Hawks were idolizing Rangers by the same score in New York.

Great Drawing Power

The crowds that flocked to games in four cities over the week end demonstrated the pro game has enough drawing power to separate Bruin fans and their dollars from the hoidens. For the two New York games 27,000 persons went to the Madison Square Garden. There were 12,369 at the Toronto game, 10,000 in Detroit and 12,000 in Boston. In all 61,900 persons saw the nine nights of hockey.

Wings and Leafs played alternately bad and ragged hockey in their Christmas night engagement in Toronto. Both goals came in the second period, Busher Jackson firing for the Leafs and Hec Kilrea for Detroit.

The game at Detroit was Righting back. Wings took the lead with Carl Liscombe's goal in the first period but Jackson and Conacher in that period and 3611 Toms' rising 30-foot shot in the third won the game for Leafs. Goalie Porter got their third on a breakway in the last minute.

Baby Line Scores

Art Ross' baby line of Milt Schmidt, Woody Dumart and Bobby Bauer accounted for Bruins' Saturday night victory, Bauer beating American Goalie Alec Shibicky on a backhander in the last period after a passing bout with his linemates.

That was their first goal in three but the string was broken in Boston last night when the Americans scored in each period, Lorne Carr got the first in the first on a long opening period, Johnny Gallagher scored in the second and Sweeney Schriner got a soft one in the last minute, when Ross took Tiny Thompson out of the nets. Chabot made scored Bruins' goal in the third.

A major penalty to Lynn Patrick led Rangers the game with Chicago. He was ruled off when his stick, carried high, cut Earl Seibert in the face and the Rangers were shorthanded Johnny Gottselig and Cull Dahlstrom both scored.

Seibert made it 3-0 early in the third, the only Ranger goal coming from Butch Keeling's stick soon after.

1937 FIRSTS U. S. TURF

By ORLO ROBERTSON

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—Presenting the 1937 firsts of the United States turf.

Admiral and Seabiscuit wrote the headlines but a few fans swear by such little known jockeys as Humble Isaac, Eiblemont and Roberts. They, too, had their day in the spotlight but not from winning any rich stake or beating a noble foe.

Humble Isaac, a four-year-old filly, and Eiblemont, a two-year-old mite, combined for the biggest daily double pay-off when they both clicked at Hawthorne, Sept. 28. Their scattered backers collected $1,241 for $2. Not for them were Ogilalah and Lassie Mary, which returned $3,942.35 after winning at Thorncliffe, June 6.

Robert S., a cheap claimer which has faced the barrier 30 times since Jan. 1, came down to Miami at Tropical Park early in the year and paid 138 to 1 for the biggest shot winner of the year. Then there were Stimulate, which returned 136 to 1, following his triumph at Narragansett Park Sept. 3, and Charles Clark, a 118 to 1 shot that came through at Latonia, July 3.

Although they paid no cash log odds, both Seabiscuit and War Admiral were among the firsts. Seabiscuit was the shortest price to leap home and top money winner with $168,580. The Admiral was the only unbeaten top notch performer, three-year-old king and a close second to Seabiscuit in money earned with $168,500.

With Seabiscuit her chief winner, Mrs. G. S. Howard topped the owners in money won, Rosies owned by the California sportswoman earned more than $211,000 before Santa Anita opened Christmas Day. Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs won the most races, however, scoring 160 victories.

LUDE WAREING STEALS SHOW

Scores Four Goals as Rangers Defeat Syracuse Stars

By the Canadian Press

The fans in Philadelphia probably will have to wait many a day before they see again in a hockey game the sort of show put on by their Lude Wareing in an International-American League contest against Syracuse Stars.

Wareing stole the show in a 5-4 victory Saturday night for Philadelphia Ramblers against Stars by scoring four goals and getting three of them in less than two minutes. Stars, however, came right back the night after to trim New Haven Eagles, 4-2.

Meanwhile, Pittsburgh Hornets compiled the best team record for the week-end, taking a 2-1 victory over Eagles Saturday night and topping Providence Reds, Sunday. In the only other game up for decision Cleveland Barons beat Springfield Indians, 3-1, Saturday.

Hornets shot into a first place tie in the Western Section with Syracuse by their two victories. Both teams have 21 points, while the third team in the division, Cleveland, has 20 points.

Providence remained at the top of the Eastern section despite the loss, while Ramblers, with 19 points, crept to a point off the pace. Eagles and Indians are far behind in the race.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

—by—

Ken J. Calling

Old St. Nicholas has come and gone, the Christmas turkey has been adequately taken care of, the old hangover still remains home over, but generally speaking a good time was had by all. There were laughs, tears, joys and heartbreaks, but it's all over for another year. The next big event is New Year's Eve; whoopee!

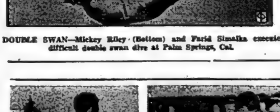
The only outstanding sport event on the local sports horizon is the opening senior O.H.A. game at the arena tonight—Peterboro versus the Belleville Redmen. And we shouldn't need anything else to insure them to attend tonight's game as a Peterboro-Belleville hockey game has always been established as a feature attraction for years. The Redmen should be slight favorites tonight, owing to their having the Van Horne league games under their belts to date. These games have seen the Redmen vastly impress as the season progressed and the fans have a rare treat in store for them when the scarlet-lad Indians swing into action. We firmly believe the Redmen are a far superior team to the club that brought the first O.H.A. championship to Belleville last spring.

The Petes have engaged W. E. "Pick" Hines as the coach of their senior club this year. Hines, it will be remembered, starred with the Windsor seniors in 1931, the team to eliminate Belleville in the senior O.H.A. finals that year. Hines has a colorful hockey career behind him. He is a native of Toronto and first vaulted into prominence with the Toronto Willowdales, Intermediate O.H.A. champions in 1929, when there was none of this A, B, C, and X, Y, Z business. Hines was with the Toronto Dobertys A.C. club, intermediate champions in 1930, Windsor in '31, in 1926 Hines coached the Western University senior Intercollegiate squad so comes to Peterboro with a creditable background of hockey to boast of.

Two former Belleville Redmen, Buster Whitten and Hooky Tonti, also may be with the Petes tonight and what a merry battle will ensue if they clash with their former team mates. There is never any love lost when former team mates hook up against each other as local fans well know. Such tried and proven veterans as Shrimp McPherson, Bill Caladine, Archie Web, Red Creighton will be with the Petes, while the lure of sports from Western Canada have been added to their roster this year.

The Belleville Redmen can clinch a play-off berth in the VanHorne Memorial series by taking the Garrison sextette into camp on Wednesday night. At present the Redmen are in fourth place, but can hop up into the second slot with a win over the Garrison boys. The standing of the league today reads:

	W.	L.	Pts.
R.C.A.F.	3	1	7
Perth	3	1	2
Kingston	3	2	0
Belleville	2	3	0
Garrison	1	3	3



Belleville plays the Garrison on Wednesday while the Flyers meet the Kingston City team on Friday.

Negotiations to organize a Belleville Ski Club will be opened at the Y.M.C.A. early this evening. Fred H. Deacon, well known local sportsman, and a number of other citizens, have formulated plans to submit to the meeting relative to the matter. With so many natural resources for skiing in the vicinity of Belleville a splendid Ski club should result. The public is cordially invited to attend tonight's meeting.

It's down to the old grind again and we are reminded of the rapidly-approaching junior O.H.A. season, as well as tonight's senior inaugural. Skipper Thomas informed us today the local teen-aged pucksters would practice on Tuesday and again Wednesday evening in preparation for the opening game versus Havelock here on Thursday night. No positions have been allotted to juniors as yet, so it's entirely up to those aspiring to attend every practice.

Regarding tonight's line-up, the Intelligencer scribe writes as follows: "Here is Hines' prospective starting lineup for Monday ere in Belleville: Goal, Ray Harding or Gord Clarke; defence, Harvey Barnes, Stew Williamson and Vic Brown; first line, Shrimp McDougall and centre, Dunkey McCoughlin and Ali Grattan; second line, Eddie Starr in between, Les Barton and Ned Vitarelli; possible alternate, Joe Beverly, Jim Ellis, Jack Gardner, Bill Calladine. Tuesday's former Preston Pals' goalie, or Fred Loucks, Sun Rhine don will be in there somewhere when he recovers from a sprained ankle, and Archie Web was a sure starter on defence till he got a cut in the eye last night at practice, and will be laid up for maybe two weeks. A tough break that, Coach. Hines told us this prospective lineup when he phoned us getting some dope for the fans."

HODGE PODGE — A rather amazing incident happened in England on Christmas Day, when, during the heaviest fog since 1904, football games were called off. The goalkeeper on one of the clubs knew nothing of the termination of play and remained at his post until a search party found him long after the two clubs had abandoned play.... Fourteen players were taken in the same manner, however .... Joe Smith, Kingston referee, has been named as the referee for tonight's senior tilt .... "Lefty" Grenier, ace batter of the New York Yankees, revealed as a Christmas present the fact he was entering a suit for divorce against his wife, the former June Collyer.... Willie ... The Red Wings gained some ground over the other NHL clubs by winning and playing the Red Wings to a tie over the holiday.

DOUBLE SWAN—Mickey Riley (Bottom) and Farid Simaika execute difficult double swan dive at Palm Springs, Cal.

Here's another paradox for the weather man. At the LEFT the camera is trailed on Sun Valley, Idaho, a winter resort in the snow belt. Lo and behold, we see a young man about to leap into an outdoor pool, framed by a panorama of snow-covered mountains! On the RIGHT we see a ski fan at—of all places—Miami Beach, Florida. It is a special form of service, catering to winter sports enthusiasts who can't stand the cold. The skier is sliding down an incline covered with crushed ice. He lands in the swimming pool. The water-skiing in this case is Captain Pelanza.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto's gunners went into action over the week end to take three of the first four places in the National Hockey League's Big Seven. Gordie Drillon gained an assist to hold first place with 20 points, while Hec Kilrea, Syd Apps and Harvey Jackson both added two to share second position at 17 with Cecil Dillon of New York Rangers. Christmas Eve In the Churches

At St. Thomas'

Beautifully conducted and impressive services marked the observance of the Feast of the Nativity at the old Parish Church of St. Thomas.

Christmas eve at 11.30 o'clock a large congregation was present at the fully choral celebration of the Holy Communion. The celebrant was the rector, the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, who was assisted by the Rev. E. H. Grant, Rector of Wellington. The Communion Office which was sung to Stainer in F. by Merbecke, was beautifully rendered by the large choir and the soloist, "The Shepherds", was sung by the choir during the offertory in an excellent manner. The pipe organ and organ accompaniments to the service by Mr. Ernest Wessling, Mus. Bac., were notably performed.

In the carols, both parts were well taken by Miss Helen Potter, Mr. Alfred Evans and Mr. Cowey. The six o'clock service was a second most, but spoke briefly from the chancel steps and reminded the parishioners of the great event in which they were participating and urged it be a happy and holy Christmastide.

Christmas morning at 8 o'clock there was a plain celebration of the Holy Communion and at 11 o'clock there was a fully choral celebration of the Holy Communion during which much of the Christmas music of the previous night was repeated.

The interior of the church was attractively decorated with evergreens, boughs and sprigs and the altar was beautifully adorned with flowers.

At Christ Church

Christmas Eve, opening the Church Feast of Christmas, saw Christ Church Scouts Troop on Friday night when over 300 partook of their Christmas Communion. The services were conducted by the rector, Rev. G. O. Wright. Prior to the service, a delightful social service, rendered by the church choir under the direction of Geo. Mayhew, organist, was presented. On Sunday the annual Christmas service was held in connection with the Church and Sunday School. The Rev. Mr. Wright was the preacher. A goodly number of parishioners partook of the Holy Communion during the special Christmas Day services at 8 o'clock.

SIX TRANSIENTS GIVEN DINNER

Six transients, who awoke within the confines of the cell block at the Belleville police station on Christmas morning, firmly believe there is a Santa Claus after all. They had been "knights of the road" before and were afforded a Christmas dinner with all of the trimmings at a local restaurant. Two philanthropic citizens instructed the police to have all transients, who spent the night in the police station to report at the restaurant, where arrangements for their Christmas dinner had been made. The men were most thankful to their benefactors for favors received. It is informed the authorities later. Three transients were housed in the police station on Saturday night while only ten put in an appearance last night.

GOVERNMENT OFFICES HALF-STAFFED TODAY

Government offices were half-staffed today with fifty percent of the personnel observing Boxing Day. The remainder will holiday on Monday January 3rd.

LINEMEN, RESCUE A CAT

Brockville, Ont., Dec. 27 (CP)—Hydro power was shut off in Carleton Village while linemen rescued a cat that had crouched for two days on top of a 50-foot high-tension wire pole. It had been freed by a de-

JAIL PRISONER IS LIBERATED

James McVicker, Londale, Released From Custody by Unknowns

Breaking open the cell block at the Deseronto village jail was one of the events reported in the police column, whose name was given as James McVicker, Londale, who had been incarcerated on a charge of fraud by Chief Crawford, of Deseronto, the last evening.

Chief Crawford arrested McVicker on the fraud count and secured his prisoner in the Deseronto lock-up, remaining about 8.00 p.m. last evening. Later Chief Crawford repaired to his home for supper. Upon his return the Chief was astounded to find the jailhouse door ajar and his prisoner gone.

A transient, who was awaiting a night's lodging, informed Chief Crawford that two men were running out of the building when he approached the police station shortly before 7.00 p.m. Subsequent investigation revealed the lock on the cell door had been broken off after having been pounded several times with a heavy object lying nearby.

Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien of Belleville was later called in to assist in the investigation but his escaped prisoner and his liberators had disappeared. When contacted yesterday morning by this paper, Constable McBrien revealed that such a crime is one of the most serious known and will doubtless bring maximum sentence, if the men are apprehended and convicted.

ICE ON QUINTE BAY NOW QUITE SAFE

Skating enthusiasts and others that enjoy outdoor sports need feel no qualms regarding the safety of the ice on the Bay of Quinte in this district. For today it was reported that the thickness of ice on the bay measures in the vicinity of nine and one half inches.

NO HOUSE FIRES REPORTED ON HOLIDAY

With the exception of considerable damage done to a car at the corner of Moira and Dundas Streets on Friday night when the vehicle caught fire through an overheated exhaust, there was quiet on the Belleville front insofar as fire protection was concerned. Deputy Chief Joseph stated this morning that reports to the Fire Department Christmas hampers and toys for seven families in the municipality. Members of the city that were distributed over the holiday.

Wellington Street, members of the department were busy well into Christmas day in their mission of good cheer.

NO CHRISTMAS BIRTHS REPORTED AT HOSPITAL

Santa Claus failed to commander the services of the Stork in delivering Christmas presents to families of the city. Hospital authorities reported that not a single birth was recorded in the institution on Dec. 25th.

Christmas day was on the figurative Christmas dinner pot, scoring a close second to Thanksgiving Day when at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris, Wellington, on Christmas day "Jack" Harris, Toronto civil engineer, and brother of Mr. Harris, presented her with a pair of dressed western "jack" rabbits that tipped the scales at eleven pounds each.

By far the largest ever seen in these parts the bull trout, which slid in the north country by Mr. Clarke, measured nearly five feet from "paw to paw" when hung up.

ICE IN BAY NOW 8 TO 12 INCHES DEEP

First test holes were being chopped in the now solid ice of the Bay of Quinte and plots are ready for marking by commercial dealers of the city, gathering the customary cast off Christmas trees and shrubs for the purpose. At present a depth of from eight to twelve inches is reported in the ice.

BOXING DAY OBSERVED BY MANY STORES

With a number of merchants observing Boxing Day, "Silent Monday morning" would be an apt description of the scene on Front Street this morning. A few scattered early morning pedestrians were greeted with a Sabbath-like quietness, as stores that rang with the noise of business activities during the past month were strangely silent.

A few would be "changers" of Christmas presents that did not suit were disappointed, the majority of them being youngsters who registered disapproval of the closing of the stores.

Board Room Gossip

The current short week is not expected to result in any spectacular market movements, the majority of traders not being "Christmas minded." Some evening up of accounts is also looked for and will be looked for which should result in switching from dormant issues into more active securities.

Brazilian Traction has shown consistent gains in monthly earnings without interruption for the past nineteen months and results for 1937 are expected to show a substantial improvement over 1936 and earnings when $8 1-2 cents a share was reported. The ability of the directors to declare $1.00 a share on the common this year indicates that they are not unduly optimistic over the situation existing in the South American republic.

The grand old man of boxing, Jake Kilrain, succumbed to old age and diabetes in a Quincy, Mass., private hospital at the age of 78. Although his brave fighting heart withstood the heavy pounding of the great John L. Sullivan, whom he fought in the last of the bare-knuckle heavyweight championship fights, it was not strong enough to withstand the heavy blows of his latest battle with death that finally kayoed him. His death brings to mind many memories among those who followed boxing in the bare-fisted days.

The British amateur ice skating championships were held at the Empire pool, Wembley, London, Eng., and lasted for over 12 hours. For the first time, all events which comprised compulsory figure skating and free skating for men, women and pairs, were staged off in one day. Pretty Cecilia Colledge, of England, captured the British amateur title for the second year. To satisfy complaints, mainly from mothers, each woman competitor had a private dressing room at her disposal all day. The photo here shows from LEFT to RIGHT: Pamela Stephens, Cecilia Colledge, and Brenda Stroud photographed at the Empire pool.

Jim London, Greek Adonis and former world's wrestling champ, is shown here applying a leg twist to Billy Hanson, Salt Lake City grappler, as the two grunted and groaned on the Hippodrome mat at New York. London, who hopes at some time, to regain the title from Bronco Nagurski, was the winner.

This is an artist's drawing of what may be the super-liner of the future. This stream-lined ocean giant, suggested by executives of French and British steamship companies, is designed to cross the Atlantic in 84 hours. Its speed would be 37 knots an hour with turbo-electrical power equipment, and a glaked in superstructure. Note smoke ducts at the rear of the vessel adding to the general streamline. Instead of on top. The liner is designed for a length of 1,350 feet.

A Little Thing Like Clothes

By JESSIE DOUGLAS

"That," said Tom Winship, smoking the ash from his cigar—"is the primmest girl in this town."

They both looked after the retreating figure of Daisy Miller, dressed as neatly in her blue serge, with a black hat that was meant to cover, not adorn the red-brown hair.

"If you give me a month I could have that girl so dead in love with me that anyone could see it!" Arthur Baldwin offered.

"You've lost already, and I'll bet ten on it, Art."

Daisy Miller's heart beat very fast as she wasted the dinner dishes. She had really not noticed anything of Arthur Baldwin since they were in high school together, she had thought less of him, and yet tonight he had telephoned to ask her if he could come in for a call.

"I don't see why he should want to see me," she thought, "I don't understand—" and yet her heart fluttered strangely and she felt a new glow in the dullness of her grey days and a new romance in her life at last.

In her own room she surveyed her wardrobe ruefully. The gray challis was beyond redemption and her best crepe needed a patch under the arm; the only thing that was what she had on, the blue serge dress that had never been anything but useful.

Again she felt that strange new excitement when the bell wheezed and she opened the door to Arthur Baldwin. He stood a moment in the hall under the tiny blue flame of gas, relishing her look.

"I am glad to see you, Daisy!" he said, scrutinizing her white face.

There was an wkward silence for a moment after he had seated himself in the comfortable living room in the big chair across from Mr. Miller.

"How're you getting along with your law?" old Mr. Miller purred.

Arthur Baldwin found himself in the clutches of that inveterate old talker, and he listened to drowsy reminiscences of the '60s, while he chirped in his chair.

When at last he said good night he admitted it was one of the pleasant evenings he had ever spent and quite unsuccessful except for his last remark to Daisy.

"You certainly have wonderful hair, Daisy," he said as he took her hand under the whimpering gas flame in the hall.

He smiled to himself as he remembered the slow, almost painful flush that scorched her cheeks.

"I'm old enough to know better," Daisy thought next morning as she scanned the paper, but a new interest in the air had caught her and she explained to her brother briefly that she was going to the city.

It must have been the hair that did it, but Daisy was unable to resist a hat that looked altogether too alluring in one of the smartest shops on Fifth avenue.

But the hat made her suit look even older than ever, and Daisy shrugged. She gasped when she saw herself in the new suit with its long, slim lines and its delicious golden brown—a color that was bewitching hat. But how shabby her shoes looked!

As a very last touch she bought herself a new pair.

"It'll take me years to save it all again." Daisy thought shamefacedly. "All the money that I put by for a rainy day."

She settled herself down by the window in the train, feeling in her new clothes that she was too noticeable. She prayed that she would meet no one she knew. She moved over in the very margin of her seat as a big man sat down beside her; he looked at her casually and then cried, "Why, it is here Daisy Miller!"

"Mr. Armstrong!"

"I used to be bill when we were in school together," he laughed.

Daisy looked up at him; perhaps it was the new hat, perhaps it was the consciousness of that smart suit yet there was a charm about that shy, bird-like glance that touched William Armstrong.

"Just come back to civilization," he suggested. "I'm going to surprise my people. It's a long run from Arizona to New York."

"How wonderful!" Daisy exclaimed wistfully. "I've always thought that was about the most interesting place to live—" then for some unaccountable reason she blushed.

"Not for your kind!" Armstrong said gruffly.

He touched tentatively the rich fur on her cuff.

"Ah, that!" said Daisy, with disdain. "As if clothes matter!"

"When a girl's as pretty as you are, Daisy, I guess you're right!" he said heartily.

"I'd like to drop in and talk with you about God's country!" he said as he wrote her his card in farewell.

That was why two days later Daisy Miller, answering the telephone, said softly:

"I'm sorry, Mr. Baldwin, but I have another engagement tonight!

"Congratulations!" Tom Winship cried, holding out his hand to his betting partner. "When it comes to a lady-killer, Art, I must admit you never fail." He polished a beaming finger to the notice in the evening paper.

"The engagement of Miss Daisy Miller is announced to Mr. William Armstrong, of Tucson, Ariz."

Both Needed Protectors

By AD SCHUYLER

In the narrow parlor of the cigar store in the Mansion House, Dolly Dubie reigned as queen. She knew how to make the best of a situation and a situation was never at a loss for words.

The man who came and went in front of her cigar counter, Dolly decided, were of a kind. They were so easily pleased, with her arch banter, so readily influenced to purchase wares and so confident that they possessed the charms and abilities, should they care to exercise them, of breaking the heart of the saleswoman.

It was Dolly's purpose to encourage them in their vanity. As each customer regarded himself as a particular friend and admirer of the appealing girl, the stand was popular and the sales mounted.

"Most Places," she said, "They buy smokes. But they get half an hour's lesson in for good measure and I'm telling you they can eat it up."

When it was suggested that some day dolly might forsake the stand to marry one of them each who had leaned so confidently over her counter, she shuddered.

"In the first place," she said, "most of them are married already, by the idea of a love affair is what makes wise cracks in the hotel lobby. How would it be to go through life with a man who thinks you should be tickled pink every time he calls you 'sweetie'?

"Yes, here you are, Mr. Lansing. I can never forget the kind of cigars you smoke." And Dolly interrupted her reflections by passing a box over the glass to one of the regular customers.

One day there approached a ruddy cheeked young man who stepped briskly and spoke in a deep voice.

"One of those, please," he said, pointing to the case. And Dolly reached for the box. When he had gone she sighed.

"That's the way of it. When one of those real men from the wide-open spaces comes along he never stops to talk. If he did he would not be the kind I want and if he doesn't I can never know him. Gracious, us girls do have a perplexing time!"

Don Ramsay of the ruddy cheeks came back. Always in business manner; he purchased a cigar and went his way with no more than a "thank you" for the girl who began to fashion romance from his appearance.

"He's a big strong man," she said. "And not the kind to hang over a counter for an hour at a time. But, all the same he is smoking too much. I wonder if I know how any man can use as many as he buys and still keep well."

And the big strong man was thinking of Dolly. The girl needed coddled. She was too pretty and too soon one-to look after her, he decided. Besides, he was not clever enough at every prospective customer. If he could get acquainted, now, without her thinking he was trying to be fresh, there might be something he could do. Well, anyway, he could buy another cigar.

While Don made his purchase Dolly scanned his face to see if there were visible any of the effects of too much smoking. Then she noticed that one of the buttons of his coat was hanging on but two strands of thread. The man needed some one who would care for those things, some one to advise him against reckless spending of money and too much smoking.

There is the saying that opposites attract. These two opposite in every thing except the desire to be protectors, were bound in sympathies before they had exchanged a single confidence.

"Of course," said Dolly when at last she braved the risk of offending him, "I'm none of my business, which is selling this stock, but don't you think you are smoking too much?"

The man gazed at her soberly but once started, the girl plunged on.

"That button on your coat" Suddenly she felt the sad pose too far. This man was so different from the rest.

"I was going to say if you care to bring the coat in tomorrow, any day, I'll fix it."

Still the man stared at her. Then with difficulty he spoke as if to make certain he had heard aright."

"You mean you have been worrying, or thinking about me smoking too much and about that button?"

She nodded but now she was confused.

"I gotta get this right," he continued. "It's important. You see I've taken care of myself and the idea of a woman's been worrying over me," he floundered then thrust out his hand.

"Put her there, girl; there's two of us. I'd—I'd like to take care of you, too."

U. S. TRADE PACT PRELIMINARIES COMPLETED

Delegation of British Plans to Leave for U. S. Early in Month January

Necessary Data And Inquiries Respecting Industries Collected

CANADA CONSULTED

Any Legislation Will Need Approval of British Parliament

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

London, Dec. 28 (CP)—The British government has completed the preliminary stage in negotiations for an Anglo-American trade agreement. This concerns the gathering of data in regard to British industries likely to be affected.

Necessary facilities among both importers and exporters made up the information compiled. The way is thus cleared to opening the negotiations themselves.

Delegation Sails Shortly.

The British delegation sails for the United States early in January. It will be under the general direction of Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador at Washington.

Any legislation to give effect to the agreement will need the approval of the British parliament. Canada's consent might also be necessary, should the agreement propose to modify the preferences which Canada now enjoys in the British market under the Anglo-Canadian Agreement.

TRAFFIC SHORTS OUT

Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 28 (AP)—An electric power failure over 150,000 homes into partial darkness during gloomy weather here today, put traffic lights out of commission and affected downtown buildings, hospitals and a few factories. The failure was caused by a fire in a powerful generator of an electric plant in suburban Tonawanda.

Why the Weather?

By MAJOR A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Temperature after all is but a tremendous range of temperature there is in the universe.

From 40 million miles to some 90 degrees below zero have been observed or estimated. We may have temperatures in the universe near absolute zero, but they have never been observed. About 90 degrees below in Siberia is our lowest and about 120 degrees above in the Sahara Desert, is our highest. The desert sand gets much hotter and the interior of the earth is hot enough for fun all materials. From these we go to 10,000 degrees at the solar surface. Temperatures of the surfaces of stars vary from 4,000 to 40,000 degrees, while their interiors have the inconceivably high temperature of about 40 million degrees.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 28 (CP)—A fairly deep disturbance is moving northeastward across Hudson Bay, with high pressure and cold weather extending from the immediate west of the upper lakes northeastward to the Arctic. Light to moderate snowfalls, with some light rain in the Lake Superior area, occurred in many parts of eastern Canada and light snow has fallen in Saskatchewan and in some sections of Alberta and southwest Manitoba.

Lake Superior—Partly cloudy and cold tonight and Wednesday with scattered snowflurries; fresh northwest winds today, becoming variable on Wednesday.

Manitoba—Easterly winds; cloudy and cold tonight and Wednesday with some light snow.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Mostly cloudy today and Wednesday with some light snow. Not quite so cold in southern districts.

30,000 G. M. C. Employees to be Idle By January First stroit, Dec. 28 (AP)—William S. Knudsen, president of General Motors Corp., announced today employment in General Motors plants throughout the United States would be reduced by approximately 30,000 employees effective Jan. 1.

Knudsen said no reductions had been ordered in Canadian General Motors plants because "business is normal there".

The reduction in Michigan, he said, will approximate 20,000 employees.

Knudsen said "the recession in business makes a readjustment of the working force necessary."

He explained the General Motors plants would operate on a three-day a week basis, each operating a total of 24 hours a week. That will be the working schedule for those employees who are retained.

In an interview Knudsen said, "The need for market is stopped, and when that is stopped our employment stops."

Asked if a revision of prices on new motorcars might ease the market problem, he said: "A cheaper market will do no good if we can't sell used cars. Purchasing power is down—there is no question about it."

Asked for explanations of the general business recession, he said: "The price level rose too fast in the spring of 1937 and we has couldn't digest it."

CORONATION YEAR TIME OF STRAIN ALSO CELEBRATION

World Marvelled at Steadfast Pace of People Who Changed Kings

LONDON IS CENTRE

British Empire Shows Respect And Admiration For New King.

By I. NORMAN SMITH

London, Dec. 28 (CP)—The new year means the end of Coronation year, and that is perhaps a thought as welcome as it is restful for the people of the United Kingdom. It is a zealous business, a time of strain as well as celebration, a time of spiritual activity.

The events of December 1936 moved quickly, so quickly that the world marvelled at the steadfast pace of a people who changed their king overnight. But the Abdication Act in itself was not the be-all and end-all, and for weeks after its every home in every county men retired to the significance of Dec. 10.

Edward's leaving had not been publicity anticipated in England as in America, and it was not until after the last shock that people expressed and mourned that the average Englishman realized the problems that had for weeks obsessed the prime minister and the unhappy king.

FALL OF TSINGTAO SEEMS IMMINENT

Rich Chinese Seaport Isolated by Advancing Japanese

Shanghai, Dec. 28 (AP)—Fall of Tsingtao, rich Shantung Province seaport isolated by advancing Japanese forces, seemed imminent today.

Tsinan, provincial capital 250 miles to the west, was in Japanese hands. Other Japanese columns raised the railroad siege line to Tsingtao, railway point less than 100 miles west of Tsingtao.

Provincial Troops Used.

Provincial forces of the Shantung war lord, Han Fu-chuh, took up positions on nearby White Horse Mountain after abandoning Tsinan, Tsingtao.

In Shanghai, 400 miles to the south, observers raised the question of whether General Han had made a deal with the Japanese.

'School for Brides' Aim of Nazi Women's Organization

Six Weeks Course is Proposed By Plan

HOUSEHOLD ARTS

Berlin, Dec. 28 (AP)—The Nazi women's organization is to have a "school for brides" in the belief that proper domestic preparation for matrimony is the backbone of happiness in life-long marriage.

The Japanese idea of carefully instructing girls to become perfect spouses will find practical application when the first bride school opens in January with the consent of Nazi authorities.

Prospective members will continue to be separate from those for the brides-to-be, however, since they need other instruction to mould a "handmaus out of office girls".

School Defined.

Authorities defined purpose of the brides' school thus:

"In circles of twenty students, the young girls should attend courses at the institute, preferably two months before their wedding days, to recuperate spiritually and physically, to forget their daily worries connected with their previous profession, to find the way and to feel the joy for their new lives as wives."

Moulding the factory girl and office worker into a housewife is the school's main aim. The government expects results to be such that the girl will graduate an additional $40 for her marriage subsidy, usually $1,000.

Six Weeks' Course.

During the six weeks' course prospective brides will live together in model apartments maintained by the school, and practice household arts.

Nothing definite has been said as to how the spiritual preparation is to be arranged, but it is apparent each bride-to-be will get plenty of kitchen training.

New Year's Eve Trap for Drunken Drivers Suggested

Two of the little guests who attended the party given by Princess Elizabeth and Margaret Rose in Buckingham Palace in celebration of the king's 42nd birthday, are shown here leaving for the party. They are Shean Plunket, in the uniform of a sailor of Nelson's old flagship, Victory, and Miss Zoe D'Erlanger, who wears a crinoline wrap over her party dress. The princess has no monopoly on grandeur when a royal party is the order of the day.

FAMED COMPOSER OF 'BOLERO' DIES

Maurice Ravel Kept His Private Life Strictly Private

Paris, Dec. 2 8(CP-Havas)—Maurice Ravel, composer of the "Bolero" and other musical works, died here today. He was 62.

His death followed a serious intestinal operation two weeks ago.

Born Mar. 7, 1875, at Ciboure, Basses-Pyrenees, Ravel numbered better than almost any contemporary figure of musical note in bringing his private life strictly private.

As a pupil at the Paris Conservatory, Ravel won the stern objection of Theodore Dubois, he was "degenerating, developing a monstrous and somewhat distant," according to a description in his given by Alfred Cortot, his disciple.

Peace of Abode a Secret.

He managed to keep even his place of residence a secret for many years. Acclaimed wherever they give his orchestras as Villa Belvedere, Montfort-l'Amaury, his exact address and telephone number were invariably informed by the composer's devoted old retainer that "Monsieur Ravel is here".

The servant spoke the truth. Ravel never really lived at the Villa Belvedere, residing instead in a small hotel here in a quiet street of the St. Lazare quarter—the Hotel Ambiez on the Rue d'Amsterdam.

"I don't want my music interpreted," Ravel said, and so he is virtu-

Eskimo Woman Makes Five Dolls for the Dionne Quints

Caught The Seal Herself to Provide Material to Work With

MADE IN GREENLAND

Montreal, Dec. 28 (CP)—From the bleak wilderness of Satuk, far northern Labrador, the Dionne quintuplets are going to receive presents that money can't buy.

Strange looking dolls made by an Eskimo woman from the skin of seals and dogs and trimmed with fur and beads are being sent to the quints at Callander, Ont., by Ingrid Bang, a woman fascinated by figures of the children she saw in magazines.

Mrs. Petersen, who lives in Montreal, arrived home after spending many months in the region of Nain on Danish Greenland, miles away from the nearest Danish settlement of Hebbinsburg. She had planned to come home this autumn but storms delayed the trip.

Mrs. Petersen, an attractive looking woman who speaks Eskimo, Danish and English, said Ingleborg Lunge had been attracted by pictures of the Dionne children she had seen in magazines sent the Petersens.

Used a Bone Knife.

So Ingleborg got out her bone knife, began the slow, skilful scraping the fine sewing of skins and the threading of beads until she produced five dolls, twenty inches high with realistic faces, painted black and red, with blouses made from calico, fur collars and beaded decorations. And with Eskimo caution, Ingleborg copied the first letter of each quints' name and traced them in beads on the respective dolls.

The dolls dress in the Arctic don't wear skirts. They wear sealskin trousers, striped by white dogskin; high boots of bright red-colored sealskin with black soles.

Mrs. Petersen said she planned to communicate with Dr. Allan Dafoe, the quints' physician, to learn what she should do with the gifts.

"I don't know whether they (the children) will be allowed to play with them right off," said Mrs. Petersen, "but I shall explain to Dr. Dafoe that the woman was very much interested in the Dionne family. First she had to catch the seal, prepare it and bleach it in the Arctic cold before she made the skin soft. Then she sewed me one, but on it she sewed some of her own hair."

LIBERAL ELECTED IN LOTBINIERE

J. T. Francoeur Given Largest Majority in History of Riding

Ste. Croix, Que., Dec. 28 (CP)—The Liberal electors of Lotbiniere County put aside talk of war and armaments today, the by-election that brought the war question to their firesides was over with closed polls. The contest established as their House of Commons representative by a record majority.

Possibility of Canada becoming embroiled in foreign conflict was the pivotal issue of the campaign that closed at the polls yesterday with the veteran Liberal the victor over young Paul Bouchard, Quebec City publisher. The 30-year-old Bouchard, Independent Nationalist, had insisted federal armaments expenditures were paving the way for war; his opponent denied it.

With returns missing from three of the county's 107 polls, Francoeur's unofficial majority was 2,192, heartest ever given a federal candidate in Lotbiniere. Individual figures were not available.

The figure was substantially better than the previous high majority of 4,380 given J. A. Verville, Liberal, in the 1925 general election. Verville died a few weeks ago.

In Same Column.

The result left Lotbiniere in the same political column it had occupied since Confederation.

Most of the farmer-voters drove through deep snow by horse and sleigh. The cold weather forced many of the city "townsmen" who have the franchise in federal election only, to stay by their stoves.

The contest was orderly. Supporters of the victorious former speaker of the Quebec legislature and provincial cabinet minister paraded through the town dropping the traditional burning effigies—hay bags—on the doorsteps of opposing voters.

In 1930 he came to Toronto and joined the Carswell Construction Company as General Superintendent. On retirement of J. B. Carswell in 1936 the firm name was changed to Joseph Wilde and Company with Wilde as president and general manager.

Miniature Germless World Is Created by Scientists

Health Without Germs Impossible Scientists Learn

GROWTH SUPERIOR

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

Indianapolis, Dec. 28 (AP) — A miniature world completely free from germs—the first ever created—showed scientists here today that health without germs is impossible and that life as man knows it is unlikely without the aid of germs.

This world is made of stainless steel units, each the size and shape of beer barrels. They are hooked together in long corridors in which animals, plants and insects spend their lives in a germless world.

For ten years at the University of Notre Dame this world has been in the making. Today its first results were reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The stainless units were shown by Prof. A. J. Reynaud and P. T. Trexler, research assistant.

Born in Germless World.

Guinea pigs, rabbits, rats and mice have been born in the germless world. Chickens have hatched there. Tests have proved that their bodies contained not one germ, no virus, none of the ordinary causes of illness.

They have grown from babyhood in this supposedly miraculous environment. They showed superior growth but they were seldom fertile. Germs, apparently, have something vital, a lack apparently getting in their digestion of food.

Their digestive tracts, Reynaud said, appeared to be defective. Normally there would have been millions of germs in this tract. Without the germs present, it was difficult for the animals to escape attacks of acidity and other digestive upsets.

Lacking Not Known.

What they lacked—that the germs would have furnished—Reynlers said he has been learned. He said that missing elements might be vitamins, enzymes or other chemicals which the germs make when they are in the body.

The missing germs included about twenty species and perhaps 100 different types of germs. Some are all common to man's digestive tract. They are ordinarily referred to by medical scientists as non-pathogenic (not causing disease).

It is known that some of these harmless germs become virulent enemies of men and animals, if they happen to get outside the digestive tract into other parts of the body.

The plants grown in the germless world were wheat and corn. They were not even as healthy as the animals. The reasons for the sickliness of the germ-free plants, Reynlers said, are unknown.

May Stop Every 20th Car To Spot Drunken Driver And May Impound Autos

Inspector Dunn of Toronto Tells How Plan Would Work

'RECKLESS WALKING'

Traffic Act May be Tightened Against Drunken Drivers

Toronto, Dec. 28 (CP) — A new method to trap drunken drivers New Year's Eve was being considered today, Police Inspector Edward Dunn announced. The method would be the stationing of policemen at certain points to stop every twentieth or twenty-fifth car.

The inspector and motorists unfit to drive would soon be spotted by this method. Police would drive their cars to side streets, take the keys and lock them up. The motorist would be sent on his way by taxi or street car.

"It's a stern measure but the serious situation calls for something stern," said Inspector Dunn.

"Reckless Walker" Scored.

Inspector Dunn said "reckless walking" will also be carried by police New Year's Eve. Jaywalking is bad enough any time but unsober jaywalkers make things even worse. He added: Every available policeman will be on duty New Year's Eve.

Inspector Dunn said he would even favor impounding cars of drunken drivers and charging storage fees along with the court fine.

Tight Traffic Act.

Attorney-General Conant said the impounding scheme was worthy of consideration. He said the Ontario government was considering plans to tighten Traffic Act against drunken drivers.

"Any scheme that will be effective in keeping down and minimizing the dangers of drunken driving is of supreme importance," he said.

City and District News

FEWER CALLS FOR SAND FROM RESIDENTS

Individual calls from householders for sand to be used on icy-covered walks in front of homes have been fewer so far this year than reported by the public works department. In spite of this fact, the department is being used, it was stated by workmen who again took up shovels today in an effort to relieve the condition of many streets left in the wake of this morning's snow-forming drizzle of rain. Annually the winter sand bill for the city is measured by the carload. This year it is expected, the figures will be well up to average.

WINTER FISHING HAS NOT STARTED YET

"We're waiting for the ice to get a little thicker, although some of the boys are at it now. It was stated by Mr. P. Bellamy, local commercial fisherman, referring to the start this year of ice-fishing on the Bay of Quinte and surrounding waters. So far offerings of door-to-door salesmen of the fresh pan fish, generally comprised of the city's unemployed, have been few. The winter time means of raising ready cash, but the fall season is in between, and the first of the year's shacks composition and fishing colony have yet to be placed.

RAINFALL HAMPERS ICE-BOAT SAILING

Further grief was added to the troubles of ice boat owners of the city and district when the start of their winter's thrilling sport, with the drifts of rain these days which hardened the snow drifts and covering on the bay. We had hopes of getting some sailing in before the New Year, but this rain will just about clip that," was stated by the owner of one large boat.

AIRPORT TO GET NEW $50,0000 HOSPITAL

Plans have been prepared and work will start soon on the new construction of a $50,000 hospital at the Royal Canadian Air Force base, Trenton, it is announced today, when the project will be by day labor.

This week F. W. Wright, Toronto, has been awarded the sub contract for painting of the mess and recreation building.

STREETS OF CITY ARE WELL SANDED

This morning's early hour rain resulted in the streets of the city being rather treacherous for motorized travel, while pedestrians found their progress hampered by the slippery condition of the sidewalks. Progress was being made with caution and no accidents particularly were reported. Employees of the Public Work Department of the City were in active serving this morning sanding the hills and more strategic corners and curves in the interest of safety in progress throughout the city. Motorcycle Policeman Jim Irvine reported his highway detail free from major accidents after the holiday and stated the steep hills and curves of the various provincial highways were also being sanded to guard against serious accidents.

TWO MINOR FIRES REPORTED BY DEPT.

Two minor fires received the attention of the local fire department during the past twenty-four hours, no serious damage being reported at either outbreak, due to the speed the firemen scored at the respective scenes of action. A chimney fire at 180 Church St. was the trouble soon under control early today while overheated pipes gave the department a run to 327 Front Street, this yesterday afternoon. Little if any property damage resulted at either place, Chief Wm. Lynch stated today.

POST OFFICE ACTIVITY RETURNS TO NORMAL

In direct contrast to the hurry and activity of the past two weeks, business has returned to normal at the local post office today.

Only the last-end of a mail this year which was declared will up to expectation and volume of last year and "good years" before it, the present being handled by the staff, when various organizations served a visible sign this morning of the laundry past weeks end. The lighting remains but the comparatively light New Year's mail of post cards and letters is being met by apologetic friends to other friends who had been forgotten from the list. As in past years, it is not expected to be heavy.

Despite a good year, one of the best," stated one carrier this morning when heavily burdened shoulder of the past week or more shows distinct signs of recovery.

The Scout, whose name is Hiang Fu, Chen, appeals for funds through the Canadian Red Cross for Central China.

"These are times of adventure and danger for the Chinese Boy Scouts," he writes, "and many air raids have caused the killing of many thousands of poor, defenseless people. After these raids our Scout comrades go to the scene of the raids and assist in the work of caring for the wounded, carrying out the dead, burying or helping others at all times," adds Hiang.

After Christmas Debris Forms Bulk Of Garbage Now

"Santa was pretty good to Belleville this year," stated men of the city garbage collection.

Hauls Class No. 1 took only tons of Christmas trees to be hauled away to the city dumps carted to backyards and allowed to disintegrate, or chopped into kindling for the fireplace, but he also left his wake the one thousand and one assortment of oddments which are already beginning to show signs of wear and tear.

Cheery Christmas paper, once fresh and red and tinselled, bore of every description and color, even the odd, highly colored tin-foiling, titionally smuggled out of the house, all form part of the first of the Christmas loads which annually add to the bulging of the collector.

But it is upon the bottles—the empty bottles—that most comment is made. Belleville not only drank well, she drank hearty this year, it is indicated by the disposal of this "pay load collection" of empty containers which have been generally newspaper wrapped and concealed in the garbage can under the frayed bottom of the Christmas turkey.

"Hundreds and hundreds of bottles", commented one garbage loader with an expansive sweep of his hand, as he carefully examined the wrapped bundles, placing the glassware in a different position on the truck.

Five bottles can be sold at a small profit and these will be but a little of the salvage amidst the debris.

This week, and for weeks to come, the city garbage dumps will become the means of the pleasure the men employed who take up the season-ful task of scavenging, during the spring over the disposal of its more than generous share. They will find not only the gaudy ties, so hurriedly disposed of, but most of the accessories to the day's living. There will be purses and silverware and perhaps a gold watch. There will be sections of track from Junior's electric train set unmercifully mangled with an odd stamp, a book on hockey stick and carpet slipper.

There will be some bones, too. Plenty of bones of the goose and turkey open which the gulls of the harbor river and the coterie of the city's mongrel dogs will fight for possession.

Slain Infant Found Under Christmas Tree

Greenbrook, N.J., Dec. 28 (AP)—Under limbs of a fir tree which was the Christmas tree with the presents after they had a dispute with a tenant over the rent, a real estate man and his young wife wept hysterically today at the home of neighbors who kept them in seclusion.

Wounded with the community took turns laying strong but gentle hands on Mrs. Louis Rondolon after she found the body of her two-months-old Christina in a pool of blood formed by the snow in the yard. She had bought for their first Christmas.

County Detective Charles Allegar said Mrs. Sophie Arcuri, 24-year-old mother of a two-months-old baby confessed she slit the throat of the landlord's five-months-old baby with a paring knife because "their baby was warm and mine was cold."

Returning home from a Christmas visit with relatives in Port Chester, N.Y., Mrs. Arcuri became angry because "someone let the fire go out", the detective said. Her sister-in-law as the house grew colder.

Going to the boiler room where Mrs. Bordolon had left her daughter while she served customers who call-ed to her husband's absence, Mrs. Arcuri carried the baby to her own home and slit her jugular vein, Allegar said.

WOODLEY FAMILY GATHERING HELD
One of Largest Family Gatherings Held on Christmas Day
Christmas Day with its turkey, old-fashioned English plum pudding, nuts, raisins, grapes, apples etc., was the means of bringing together one of the largest family gatherings held in Belleville for some years, Mr. and Mrs. George T. Woodley were hosts to Mr. Woodley's mother Mrs. James Woodley, who is in her 93rd year and also to their nine children and their families. In all thirty persons gathered at the dinner table and joined in the circle around the Christmas tree afterwards.
Mrs. James Woodley is the great grandmother of ten of the children who were present. The difference in the ages of those present was close to 50 years, the eldest, Mrs. James Woodley, being in her 93rd year and the youngest the baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Woodley of Hamilton, being three months.

CORONATION YEAR

More than the usual New Year's resolutions occupied the Englishman on Jan. 1, 1937. He was in the throes of reasoned antidote by prominent writers in the daily press and in the reviews, setting forth with varying detail but nearly unanimous viewpoint the case of Edward VIII vs. the people.

Gathered Pace Rapidly.

The year gathered pace rapidly. Discussion resolved into predominant agreement that all had been for the best, and yet imbedded rumor of the new king's ill health, of differences in the cabinet, of Edward's failure to end the controversy down new and windy lanes. These petty alarms proved baseless but served nevertheless to temper the strengthening coronation spirit with nervous strains. Feeling for Edward died harder, perhaps, than the press chose to admit. "The Prince of Wales, God bless Him," had been something more than Prince of Wales in the hearts of hundreds of thousands.

And yet his popularity was preserved at only small expense to the respect and admiration for the new king. George VI made no calculating appeal for support yet in his quiet way he reminded everyone of his beloved father—and that proved his greatest strength. He restored the manners and customs of a king as Britain had known them for 26 years. If he lacked Edward's affable and Edward's personal popularity, he offered in their stead a genuine regard and understanding of his people and a determination to work for their welfare.

Many in London.

May came to London as it had never come before. The famous parks and dense air of the city had given place to great stands, refreshment tents and temporary buildings to house troops. Trees along the Mall broke their bonds only to have their leaves thrust against two-inch planks, and the birds of St. James' Park sang a complaining accompaniment to the sing of hammers and the thumping of drilling soldiers.

The world moved to London. The court calendar throbbed a persistent and convincing denial that his Majesty suffered from ill health. State banquets and balls turned a mirror on the wasted social life of bygone days and the streets ran with people and children desperately seeking a glimpse of ladies fair and accoutred bandsmen.

The coronation procession achieved with all its slow dignity and radiant color the fancy and zeal of living up to imaginative expectation. The king and queen gave themselves to the nation in Westminister Abbey with serious mien and sacred intent. And—the King was crowned.

Jubilant Activity.

Came a fortnight's jubilant activity. The country joined in the spirit of Buckingham Palace's royal ball and a thousand and one gatherings sang God Save the King even while the statesmen of the Empire conferred at round table to strengthen his Empire.

When their Majesties moved to Balmoral for the quiet and rest they had earned, all England cried "so be it" and settled down to work, and since "work" at that time meant, for most, pouring from the cities for holiday resorts there was naught but happiness in the land.

To conclude the year was easy. With the triumphant coronation, and all its manifestation of genuine loyalty, died the anxious wondering about Edward and George. Sympathy for Edward will never die, nor perhaps affection. But it will be left to biographers and newspapermen to harp on "the events of December 1936" for the people will have none of it.

Here is what King Winter does when he gets really sore. The photo made in an Oklahoma city street after a recent sleet storm shows a few of the trees that were badly damaged. Weight of the accumulation on the limbs sheered them off from the trunks and ruined many of the city's beautiful shade trees.

The engineer and fireman were killed when this giant 375,000 locomotive of a Pennsylvania railroad train toppled sixty feet over the retaining wall at left, on to traffic-crowded West Carson street in Pittsburg, Pa. Four Negro employees in an adjoining dining car were slightly injured. There were no passengers on the train. Engineer Jones, official, on train apparently was first derailed ripping up tracks for 100 yards, before it plunged to the street. A rain-loosened boulder was blamed.

Jolly Rotarians Gather Round Christmas Tree

Belleville Rotarians gathered round the Christmas Tree Monday at the regular weekly meeting in Hotel Quinte to celebrate Santa's arrival and departure with a bit of fun with each other. Howard Clarke was in charge of the program and to the tune of "Jingle Bells", played by Lou Biggs, and sung by the company, ushered in a bright and gay Santa Claus, well portrayed by Charlie Spaulding. Santa took up position beneath a brilliantly lighted Christmas tree and began to call out the names of Rotarians present to approach and receive the gifts prepared for them. Recipients had to open up their parcels in full view of the members present and this occasioned much merriment. Printstage Stewart Frost, fire insurance agent, received a toy fire engine; President Percy Douglass received an operating wind mill; Past President Bert Price was presented with a horse "and buggy", acting secretary Ross Neal was thrilled with a black mammy dancing doll and his grateful all over the lot when stimulated with a key. Others remembered by Santa in humorous fashion included: Archie Cameron, Leo Biggs, Harry Ackerman, Chas. Dunn, Sandy Burrows, Chas. Symons, Jamieson Boone, Bert Findlay, Percy McGuire, Stuart Robertson, Gene Illsley, Irv. Hefferd, Van Blaicher.

Visitors present included Rotarian Jim Johnson, Boston; Gordon Friesen, Belleville; Clarence Barlow, Thurlow; T. J. Herity, Tyrconnell.

One meeting was received into club fellowship, Jack Hardwick, Manager Quinte Milk Products, Limited, Wellington.

Christmas Cheer Committee under Harry Hill reported distributing twenty-five baskets filled with good things to eat, while Charlie Symons distributed Christmas cheer in substantial form to twenty-seven children who had received the attention of the Crippled Children's Committee.

NOTE DELIVERED

The military section's explanation follows:

On Dec. 11 a Japanese detachment anxious to aid in the capture of Nanking, crossed the Yangtze river north of Taiping and advanced toward Pukow. Because of a previous warning, they thought foreign nationals had evacuated the zone of fighting.

Observing more than ten large steamers facing up-river, the Japanese high commander believed them to be retreating enemy forces and ordered the artillery to fire on them; but the shells did not reach the ships, which escaped. Then upon he ordered Japanese units at Wuhu to attack them.

Opened Fire On Fear.

A detachment after a forced night march, opened fire on four large steamers. Observing the steamers sending up dense smoke, the Japanese decided they were trying to hide in a smoke screen. Japanese shells struck two steamers, the other escaped. One vessel advanced toward the Japanese forces, whereupon a British flag was detected and an order given to cease firing. When it reached the wharf it proved to be the Ladybird.

The same night, through a mistake, one shell was fired on a ship hoisting the British flag, but did not strike it. This proved to be the gunboat Bee. Rear-Admiral Hall, the British Consul and several officers from ashore. The Japanese commander explained it was a mistake. He said it was his duty to sink all enemy vessels and that he did not know the ships were British.

The Japanese note was given to Sir Robert after being approved by the Cabinet and then submitted to Emperor Hirohito by the Foreign Minister.

FALL OF TSINGTAO

Chinese here were quick to point out that only provincial Chinese troops were defeated at Tsinan. They said strong Central Army forces occupied positions at Taian, 70 miles to the south, and Lincheng, another 85 miles along the route to Kiangsu Province.

Mobilization Called.

(Japanese reports to Tokyo said General Ju Tsung-Jen, former viceroy of Tsinan, had fled—Shed—and now cooperating with General Han Fu-Chu, proclamation saying fall of Tsinan did not mean the loss of Shantung Province.

(The proclamation called for a general mobilization. Tsingtao was said to be in a state of war, with foreigners and Chinese fleeing and dugouts and other defences being built.)

WM. ROBICHEAU

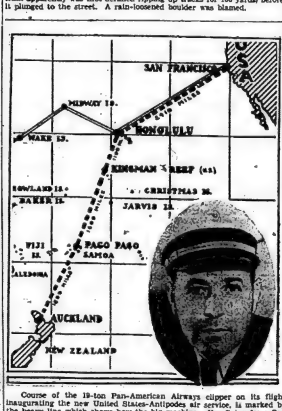
girl testified nervously that Robicheau had told her of the slaying.

A 22 calibre revolver produced at the inquest was identified by the girl as one she obtained from Robicheau after the killing, carried in her dress for two or three days and finally hid in a wooded property to where she was driven by Fralick as the junk dealer's suggestion. She said she took two empty shells from the gun. She threw them in a bedstraw leg and destroyed them later. Cohen was shot twice in the side and in the head.

Sold Weapon to Robicheau.

Trateur testified he bought the weapon from Robicheau and sold it back to him before the slaying.



Police produced a purported confession of Robicheau's. Robicheau speedily outlined circumstances of a visit to Cohen's store on Dec. 17 with intent to rob. The statement said Robicheau obtained a pair of high boots from the merchant, then demanded his money.

Cohen refused and as he started toward the intruder, Robicheau fired the statement said. The youth fled outside, slipped on the street and dropped a parcel, it continued.

Cohen grabbed him from behind the neck, the statement said, and Robicheau fired over his shoulder to "scare Cohen". The merchant fell away and Robicheau made his roundabout course to Miss Ward's home, it concluded.

Course of the 19-ton Pan-American Airways clipper on its flight inaugurating the new United States-Antipodes air service, is marked by the heavy line which shows how the big machine, after flying from San Francisco to Honolulu along the route which other clippers take on their Orient route, flew on to Auckland, N.Z., in three hops by way of Kingman Reef and Samoa. Commander on the flight was Capt. Edward Musick (inset). Britain's Imperial Airways will shortly pioneer a 1,600-mile route from Auckland to Sydney, Australia, which, with the clipper service, will give North America five-day connection with Australia. Steamers require approximately three weeks to make the trip.

Trenton CHICKEN THIEVES GIVEN ONE MONTH

Charles Copeland And Arthur Heagle Convicted For Offence

Trenton, Dec. 28—(Special)—Probably it was the thought of having fowl for a Christmas dinner that inspired Charles Copeland of Trenton and Arthur Heagle of Montreal to enter Bleecker Meyer's hen house and steal a bag full of chickens one night last week. The pair were arrested by the police shortly after the theft from the Sidney township farmer's property. The loot was not in the possession of the thieves for they dropped the bag of chickens climbing over a fence on the Meyer farm when they became hard pressed by the farmer, who gave chase after he found his hen coop had been entered and a number of chickens had been taken therefrom. Two reports from the farmer's shotgun helped to frighten the thieves in their dash for freedom and it was said that the fleeing men were struck by flying buckshot, which made them panicky, and brought about the abandonment of the bag of chickens.

Although the thieves eluded the farmer apparently they didn't realize that snow records footprints, for it was the tracks in the fresh fallen snow that led the authorities to Copeland's home in Trenton where both of the men were apprehended. At Friday's court session they appeared side by side entering chickens. Found guilty by Magistrate E. J. Butler each was sentenced to one month in the county jail at Belleville.

LIGHTING THE LIVING TREE

The Irish Independent has made a suggestion that if everyone with a garden—large or small—were to plant a permanent living Christmas trees, and, during Christmas, decorate the living tree with fairy lights, what a splendid picture the countryside and suburbs of big towns might present. The young folk would learn to love their own Christmas tree, and then to love and respect all living trees.

Some lawns on which evergreens stand are now decorated. In Belleville and in other cities these trees are decked with Christmas lights and have made a fine effect.

This year more use was made of commercial and cut Christmas trees than in years. They were placed not only in the houses downstairs or in upstair apartments but also outside.

In many cities property owners with fine evergreens on their lawns make it a point to decorate them at this season.

There is something to be said for the idea that a growing tree illuminated will inspire children to respect all trees.

TROJAN SCULPTURE

Archeologists and historians and readers of literature have been drawn to the ancient story of Troy and the location of the ancient city. The archeologist knows that a city with Troy's location on the shores of the Aegean Sea would be in the path of moving civilizations and perhaps the centre of a civilization.

Reports just now from archeologists of the University of Cincinnati working at the site of the old Troy stated they have found a stone which they consider the earliest piece of sculpture yet found in the eastern Aegean and western Anatolian area and also earlier than any ever found in Greece or Crete.

The excavations were supervised by Dr. T. Ar. Semple and Dr. Carl W. Blegen. They have ascribed to the first Troy which was contemporary with the old kingdom in Egypt and the early period in Mesopotamia. It is still intact after nearly 5000 years and after at least eight other Troys have flourished and fallen.

Near one of the towers of the ancient 12-foot wall was a slab of stone which still preserves in its soft flaky surface a heart-shaped human face scratched in low relief and presenting a frontal view. The face is cut with a rounded outline to indicate the chin and jaw, and a wider row above the hair, which is represented by a series of small bored holes as falling to the side on either side of the head.

The nose is comparatively long broadened out somewhat at the lower end. The left eye and the mouth are well rendered, though worn, while the right eye has been almost obliterated.

To the left of the face is what seems to be the shaft or a staff or scepter with spherical head. Below the face, to the right, are traces of further carving, perhaps an arm or body.

Although Professor Blegen believes it is contemporary with the sculpture of Egypt's old kingdom, somewhere from 3000 to 2600 B.C., and with that of Mesopotamia's early period, it is absolutely different from these in character.

"This may be considered a local Trojan product since it bears relation to other known sculpture of that period," Professor Blegen said. "Even though it shows no trace of writing, it may be of a hieroglyphic design."

"This is clearly not the first crude attempt of a beginner in the field of sculpture. It shows real design and a feeling for style, which mark it as the work of an artist who had a long tradition of cultural development behind him.

"Hence it is to be inferred that this earliest Troy not only had a king, but a royal court as well, which fostered progress in art.

"Heretofore it has been believed that the first Troy marks the beginning of civilization in this area but now we see a distinct artistic stage of that period and civilization's origins are thus pushed still further back into the past."

WINTER SPORTS HERE

Though roads and walks are in many places slippery and rough, children and all others who enjoy the great outdoor sports, and who live in this section of Ontario may think themselves fortunate. Heretofore there is snow and there has been plenty of it for weeks and children have now every opportunity to try out their new sleds and sleighs or snowshoes. In other parts of the province there is no snow and the only games children can play at is skating in parks or rinks, while they have no chance to indulge in the sports associated with snow. In these places where there is no trace of snow, winter so far has seemed little like winter, except for the temperature.

The passions are the only orators who never fail to persuade. They are nature's art of eloquence. The rules of which never fail and the weakest man, moved by passion, is more eloquent than the strongest who has none.—Rochefoucauld.

CHRISTMAS ON VIMY

Christmas in Canada, and white snow drifting,
And Christmas trees in little homes;
And churches full of song and lighted candles
And in the banquet hall the beaker foams.
And how you loved the shining tinsel splendor!
How gay you were, dear boy, how full of glee!
And then your regiment went proudly sailing,
And you spent Merry Christmas o'er the sea.

Christmas in England, and the bands all playing,
And every street ablaze with colored light;
The Waits out singing all the Holy Evening,
And genteel English girls, with eyes alight.
And you who loved your home, and snowy country,
Were lonely, that first Christmas from us all,
And, in the maze of unaccustomed noises,
Thought that you heard a snowbird chirp and call.

Christmas again, but now you sleep on Vimy,
O gallant heart, sleep on! 'Tis far from here,
But distance fades away, and we remember;
And, spite of passing time, you are as dear
To us who loved you, as when once you feasted,
And loved, and danced around a Christmas tree.

Dearest, please think of us in Heaven,
Or Paradise, or wherese'er you be.

OF INTEREST TO MANY FRIENDS IN BELLEVILLE and District was the Memorial Service held Sunday afternoon under the auspices of the York Bible Class in Deer Park United Church, Toronto, for the late Grant Cooper, who met death a few days ago in an automobile accident. Mr. Cooper was a commercial traveller who covered Eastern Ontario, and his friends were legion for he was blessed with a bright, cheerful and generous disposition which won friends quickly and held them ever. The memorial service was very impressive being conducted by Denton Massey, M.P., assisted by Rev. D. G. Stanley Russell, the presence of hundreds of young men, members of the York Bible Class, of which Mr. Cooper was one of the founders and always took an active interest. The service was broadcast and many friends of Mr. Cooper in all parts of Canada listened in thus paying silent tribute to the memory of one whom to know was to love and admire.

IF YOU DRIVE DON'T DRINK. If you drink don't drive. So read a striking pre-Christmas warning which appeared in metropolitan newspapers. This is good advice for the holiday season when road conditions are generally extra dangerous, but it applies with equal force to any time. A mixture of whisky and gasoline means trouble at any time and in any language.

RADIO PROGRAMS WERE IN KEEPING with the Christmas Spirit, and were varied and interesting. The chief feature of the Christmas broadcasts was of course the King's Message which was listened to by many in this and other lands. It was a simple but dignified message in which he paid tribute to his illustrious father, touched upon the threat of war prevalent in the world today and urged all men of good will to work together to maintain the peace of the world.

"OLD SCROOGE" CAME OUT OF THE SHADOWS again on Christmas Day to tell again that forceful story of Charles Dickens in which he recalls from the grave "Old Scrooge's" deceased partner, also three impressive spirits, The Ghost of Christmas, past and gone, The Ghost of Christmas Present, and the Ghost of Christmas Yet to Come, to turn the old curmudgeon's heart and turn his attention from the accumulation of money to the diffusion of happiness through good deeds. Lionel Barrymore sent Dickens' Christmas Carol over the air waves to awaken the Christmas Spirit in any hearts which might have been immune to the influence up until then. As usual this veteran actor turned in a very fine performance.

CHRISTMAS ON THE UNITED STATES BATTLESHIP PENNSLYVANIA, in San Pedro harbor was one of the highlights of holiday radio programs. A wondering reporter with a microphone boarded the ship and took part in the Christmas services participated in by about five hundred of the crew, the rest being on shore leave. Before the service one hundred underprivileged children were entertained on board, and what a thrill these youngsters got. The service was simple but very interesting and the address of the chaplain to his sailor audience was a masterpiece of descriptive eloquence as he told the story of Christmas in language that throbbed with belief and understanding and translated the events of that distant Christmas Day and the days that followed into terms easily understood by all.

CANADIAN SCENE

Winter has been playing tantalizing tricks with us of late in this part of Canada and we are not just sure where we stand. But the more we think of it, the more it seems to us that the season of the year rigours by early observers' would which we natives frequently complain is one of our most valuable natural resources. It is so valuable that we do not see how we could do without it.

Now the kind which the cynical Voltaire once spoke of as "a few acres of snow and ice", which was violently abused by Canada's first

Two Girls Walked

We think there should be medals or a place in the hall of fame or something for two Ottawa girls of whom we hear. The other evening they went out for a motor drive in the country with a young man. There was ice and snow on the roads and conditions called for extreme caution. Despite the obvious danger, the driver persisted in maintaining a speed of fifty and sixty miles an hour. The girls were terrified, pleaded in vain for a reasonable speed. Eventually—ten miles out, the driver stopped the car, and the girls climbed out, set out afoot—they were prepared to walk home rather than take such more chances with a foolish driver. As it happened they were overtaken by another car, given a lift.

This story is told apropos of the announcement of the Ontario Department of Highways that issuers of motor licences are to exercise "the greatest care" in granting driving permits to persons over 16. There is definitely greater danger to public safety we think most people will agree, in issuing driving permits to boys and girls in their mid-teens. Youngsters of sixteen under the present law are entitled to secure driving permits under ordinary tests and conditions. The average modern boy knows the controls of a car about as soon as he can walk, probably at sixteen knows more of its internal economy than does his father, but seldom at that age can he have the sound judgment that has more to do than mechanical knowledge with making a good driver.

There would not appear to be any good reason for singling out drivers over 16 for special inspection or admission. Bad drivers at whatever age, sixteen or ninety, should be deprived of driving privileges. A driver so physically handicapped as to interfere with the safe operation of the car is a source of peril whatever his age. There are good and bad drivers in all the age classes, and they should be weeded out rigorously. Age of itself is not the determining factor —Ottawa Journal.

Gulf Stream Mystery

Members of the staff of the Bermuda Biological Station for about a month to make a systematic attempt to settle once for all the question as to the speed with which by many is believed to be the main factor in the mild climate of the coast of the British Isles and Western Europe.

Under this purpose a big motor yacht has been purchased, and will be specially fitted out for the purpose of definitely locating the Gulf stream and the course it takes northward in the Atlantic from the Gulf of Florida, a task that will occupy several years.

The first meteorologist of note to ascribe the temperate climate of the British Isles to the warming influence of the Gulf stream was Benjamin Bunham, famous for his theory of warm and cold periods.

But for this hot-water system, he said, the mean temperature of the south of England would be about 15 degrees below freezing point, and in the north of Scotland the mercury would never rise above the centigrade zero. Another Scottish scientist, Sir Archibald Geikie, was of the same opinion. Without the Gulf stream, he said, the British Isles would have a climate like that of frozen Labrador.

Other scientists, however, among them the late Lord Rayleigh, held quite a different opinion. The climate of Great Britain, they stated, was in no way dependent on the Gulf stream, but on the prevalent winds, which came in warm from the west and south-west. If the Gulf stream never left the Gulf of Florida, it would make not the slightest difference to the climate of the British Isles, said Sir Richard Gregory, and Dr. Shaw agreed with this opinion.

Every kind of unseasonable weather endured in the British Isles is, by some, put down to the Gulf stream. Cold spells, it is said, are experienced because the stream has been diverted somewhere, and abnormally warm spells because it temporarily flows nearer British shores.

Some years ago the current was reported missing from the Atlantic and later Russian explorers located it in the Arctic, near the port Zembla. But no marked change took place in the British climate.

Perhaps the truth is that both the warm Atlantic and the cold Arctic currents are influenced by the wind currents.

That, at any rate, was the conclusion arrived at as the result of investigations carried out by the marine department of the meteorological office and by Norwegian meteorologists. Both agreed that the flow and temperature of the Atlantic currents are dependent on variations in the wind currents passing over the Atlantic, and that, in particular, variations in the temperature of the Gulf stream are directly connected with the trade winds.

When the Bermuda investigations have finished their task we may know for certain what we owe to the Gulf stream and what to the prevalent winds, and it is possible the information gained may enable meteorologists to predict with fair accuracy the strength and temperature of the Gulf stream months before it begins to influence our weather, whether for better or worse.

But many believe that the meteorology of the Arctic, now being investigated by Russians drifting on an iceberg is more important in the making of our weather than is the Gulf stream, however and wherever it flows.

A Preacher's Loss

A minister at Chatham was in court complaining that some person had stolen his overcoat. And it was a new one. The man who is said to have done the stealing was also in court, and from there he went to spend two months in jail.

Just how a minister should look at such a case we do not know for sure. As a rule we expect them to do all sorts of things which we ourselves would not do. They are not supposed to grow angry on short notice; they are supposed to keep the purse strings open and to receive all who come for aid and send them on their way rejoicing.

But being deprived of a new one, with winter settling down for business, comes in a peculiar classification. There is some reference to clothing in Matthew, where it says: "And if any man will sue thee at law and take thy coat, let him have thy cloke also." But of course that does not say anything about a man going into the home and stealing a new overcoat even if it was the minister's coat.—Peterboro Examiner.

FOR 1938

FORD OFFERS TWO NEW CARS and keeps their PRICES LOW

Right, the Standard Tudor Sedan

Below, the De Luxe Fordor Sedan

There are two new Ford cars for 1938 — the De Luxe and the Standard — differing in design, appointments and price — but built on the same generous 112-inch Ford wheelbase.

Both are big, impressive cars, and thoroughly modern in appearance. Both have the famous Centre-Poise Ride and Ford Protection Safety Brakes. Both bring you the basic advantages and the smooth, effortless performance of the 85-horsepower Ford V-8 engine.

Step Up to the V-8 Class

V-type 8-cylinder engines were used only in expensive cars before Ford made them available in The Universal Car. Eight cylinders give great smoothness and flexibility. Compact V-type construction leaves more room for passengers and luggage.

Both new cars are economical to operate. The facts of Ford V-8 economy are confirmed by the findings of owners, who have reported 22 to 27 miles per gallon of gasoline. And both new cars are priced low. Low prices, like economy, is a Ford tradition. Ford founded the low-price field 29 years ago and keeps Ford prices low today.

The De Luxe Ford costs slightly more than the Standard Ford, but provides extra room and style. Both cars, in proportion to price, represent unusual values. Both are built to the same high standard of mechanical excellence. Both bring you the comfort and pride of ownership you expect of a Ford.

Building on Last Year's Success

More people bought the 1937 Ford V-8 than any other 1937 make. It was a good car. But these are better cars, because Ford improvement goes on constantly. You'll realize that when you see and drive either Ford V-8 for 1938.

Picton Pastor Leaves to Accept Call to Kincardine

Picton, Dec. 28. — Rev. S. M. Scott was highly honored last night when a farewell was given him by citizens of Picton in the Parish Hall, Rev. Mr. Scott's pastorate in Kincardine where he has accepted a call to Knox Presbyterian Church after ten years as minister at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church here. The presentation was made of a chesterfield suite and a purse of money. Prof. Dan Mallory presented the gift and Mayor-elect Nesbitt Mortinson reading the address.

Rev. Mr. Scott in replying stated his stay in Picton had been a pleasant one and he regretted to leave such a lot of fine friends.

Ministers of the various churches spoke of Rev. Scotts co-operation with them. His work went far beyond his own denomination. Among those speaking were Rev. Cecil Winter for the Anglicans, Rev. C. A. Meehan for the Roman Catholics, Rev. David Wren for the United Church and Rev. F. D. Manktelow for the Baptists. Other prominent citizens also spoke and vocal solos were given by Miss Florence Barber and Mr. H. Collier of Toronto.

Mayor-elect McKibbon gave a sincere tribute to Rev. Mr. Scott in an interesting address.

From London to Hollywood, to Tehachapi, California's prison for women — and finally to the State Hospital for the Insane, was the path followed by beautiful JEAN HEPBURN (above). In quest of "publicity" she burglarized several Beverly Hill homes. Prison life was too much. She has lost her sanity,

Hurricane House

by BRUCE HENRY

"A card from Stephen!" Sandra repeated. "A card from where?" Funny, she thought, but she had been home almost a week and she hadn't given Stephen a thought. Enid had made a point of telling no one that Sandra was home; Martha Ancell had evidently picked it out of her husband. It was a little odd Stephen hadn't learned of it from his father.

"The card came from Chicago," David said. "Some one had to go out to St. Louis and Mr. Eddy said Stephen asked to be sent. He's coming into the office when he gets back for good."

"That's nice," Sandra said. "It's about time he was going to work."

David was watching her face, closely. He said at last, "Look here —you fall in love with Stephen?"

His question. Didn't you know he was going? Hasn't he written you?"

"Oh, quit gunning me, David," Sandra said, half irritably, and opened the door and went out, hearing David's pleased chuckle behind her.

Pamile Roberts wasn't at home when Sandra stopped there and she drove back to Park avenue and found Stephen's special delivery on her dresser. It had been forwarded from Maple Village; Stephen must have gone to Chicago at least a week ago.

It was the sort of letter he had written her during her first week in New Hampshire—letters she hadn't answered because she hadn't felt like writing to those first weeks and because they didn't rate as if Stephen expected an answer. Later he had stopped writing altogether and she thought it was just as well since she owed it to him to tell him face to face just how matt vs stood.

He came out on business for the firm, my first job; and I've promised Father to settle down to work when I get back. I've seen a good many places I like better than Chicago. Can't say when I'll be home, but probably not for another year. Earnestly hope that you are yourself again and that we will soon be having good times together . . .

There was more of it, but it all seemed as if Stephen were just chewing the end of his pen trying to find something to say.

Well, they could have some good times provided Stephen could resign himself with an attractive girl who liked him very much and would give him—but who did not love him and would never, never marry him. She had made up her own mind that she would certainly not muddle up Stephen's life that way. Finally—telling Stephen I can't marry him," she thought, dismally. "If only I hadn't put him off so often . . .!" But easy or hard, it had to be done.

They were half through dinner when Chet arrived. "Had a long conference with Eddy," he explained as he sat down at the table. He smiled at Sandra. "Heard you dropped in to clock up on this afternoon. Sorry I was out."

Ronald Colman and Madeleine Carroll in "The Prisoner of Zenda" now on the Belle screen.

"So was I," Sandra grinned. "David hemmed me up in your office and spent the whole time trying to probe into my personal affairs."

"Yes," said David, pleasantly "without some success."

Sandra nudged her mother's down-tilted face. Enid and Chet never spoke to each other when speaking could be avoided. Divorce, Sandra thought, couldn't be any worse than this. It was impossible for two people to be further apart than Enid and Chet were here in this small room. So she assumed that it wouldn't be best for all concerned if Chet went about and got the office business over with.

She was to discover within the hour, however, that Chet had different ideas about that. . . After dinner David went out and after a little Enid left the living room and went to her room and Sandra looked up to find Chet pulling his chair nearer hers. There was a strange light in his eyes.

"Secrets?" Sandra asked. Her father nodded. "I've decided to salvage my self-respect," he said: "I'm going to make up Ancell's note and—let Enid go, make the move."

Sandra caught her breath, sharply. "You mean you won't let her get a divorce?"

"I won't help." Chet said, finally in his voice. "I won't be a party to this thing any longer, Sandra."

"But the money—how will you pay Ancell?"

"Eddy is going on my note." He twisted a fist in his open palm. "I've been fairly desperate lately, I'll admit, but straight is straight and I'm through with that. Eddy is coming next week. Just talking to you about it that day in New Hampshire made me the whole beastly business more odious than ever and I decided to go to find a way out. And now that it's practically arranged ar-ranged, I feel like a new man already." He looked at her, thoughtfully. After a moment he said, "—I had a notion you'd be rather pleased, Sandra."

She slid out of her chair and dropped on her knees beside his chair. "Oh, Chet—I am! I'm terribly pleased. If you are. "But—I simply don't understand. I mean, your getting Enid back to extend your note is almost like borowing the money from Eddy to pay him."

Chet nodded. "In a sense, yes. If I didn't pay him the additional interest would be his. But I didn't urge him. I merely told him what the situation was and he promptly offered to see me through. In fact, he seemed rather eager to put it up."

"Yes, I understand that, darling," Sandra said, quickly. "But what protection will Eddy have?"

"Protection?" he repeated, and for the next moment, Sandra had a wide grin. "So your developing a business head. Well, well!" He ruffled her hair, playfully. "That, of course, was the first question I raised, and I'll let Eddy answer it. He said, 'My dear Charles, were practically one family so why worry?' he: so why bother our heads about nonessentials."

Sandra sank back on her heels. "He didn't mean—about Stephen and me?"

"Of course. What else?" Chet laughed, softly. "Eddy's very anxious for Stephen to get into harness and he thinks once you two are—"

"You're wanted on the telephone, miss." Coming along the hall the maid had not heard their low-voiced conversation. "I'm sorry," she said.

Sandra went to the library and closed the door. Not because she expected a call she would want private —only because she didn't want Chet to see the tears that were welling up in her eyes.

She took up the instrument, spoke, recognized Mait. Shumway's voice: "Heard you were out of town but thought I'd take a chance on calling . . . Remember the Martha Ancell divorce story you were working on?"

"Yet, Mait—I remember." She hardly knew her own voice.

"Well, I've got the dope. About who the correspondent's to be. You know all along, didn't you?"

She managed at last, "Yes, I know, Mait. . . You're going to print the story?"

"That happens to be my business,

Sandra. Say, listen, why don't you run over and see Pamile? She's in a spot and she needs somebody. And she could give you all the details. She'll be home tomorrow."

INSTALMENT 27

Sandra's arms sank to the small table top; the telephone lay across an open palm. Mait had found out about Enid—and he had told Pamile Roberts.... Well, why not let Pamile in on the great scandal before he gave it to all New York to read?

She heard the door open behind her, heard Enid say casually, "I'm going out for an hour or two, Sandra. If you should want me for any reason, I'll be at Martha Ancell's. She looked up just before you came back from shopping and asked me to come out for a little while this evening. I imagine I'll be back around ten or so."

Sandra nodded. Then her head was still, abruptly stilled. She said, "Come in and close the door, Enid. I've something to tell you."

Not at once did Enid obey. She searched her daughter's face, not moving, resenting what she interpreted as a tone of command in Sandra's voice. But something in Sandra's grave countenance drew her into the room at last. Her back to the closed door, she said, "I detect secrecy, Sandra. What is it?"

AT THE CAPITOL

Without question, Jessie Matthews, has in "Gangway", her current musical commencing tomorrow at the Capitol as smash hit No. 1, the best story of her career. It's a fanciful, romantic tale, well off the beaten track of screen musical comedy, and whoever wrote the dialogue is positively "tops" at the business. Add to this inducement the star as her sparkling best comedy in the capable hands of Nat Pendleton, "swingy" tunes, and a more than capable supporting cast, and you have all the necessary reasons for going to see "Gangway".

One can think of plenty of other good reasons—the "sparring" scene that is the opening dance number, the excruciatingly funny Mr. Alastair Sims, Jessie's burlesque of the New York accent, and dozens of other scenes and situations that'll make this one of the liveliest musical comedy hits of the year.

To return to the entertaining story, Jessie is cast as an English "cab-sister" who is mistaken for the notorious jewel-thief, Sparkie. Her adventures take her to America, where she is kidnapped by a mobster, played by Noel Madison, who wants her to pull off a job on the famous Van Tuyl diamonds. How that prince of sentimental tough "mugs" rescues her from the gangster clutches, how Harry Mackay, is the British peer who turned "Madison" falls in love with her thinking her a thief all the time, how Jessie plays Cinderella for a night forms the burden of the story, which is fast-moving, plentifully punctuated with gay lines and entertaining from beginning to end.

Needless to say, Jessie dances divinely— there is no one quite like her in that line—and sings and acts with her customary gayety. More than half the scenes have a New York background, and the presence of Pendleton, Madison, and a half-score of other capable Hollywood players give these scenes the proper touch of authenticity.

We have probably said enough to indicate that this is the sort of show you can't afford to miss, there is no harm in insisting again on this fact. Be sure to see it!

Film and thrills for the whole family are promised by "Penrod and Sam", the comedy drama from the famous novel by Booth Tarkington, and which opens at the Capitol tomorrow as smash hit No. 2.

Those two adventurous youngsters who are of the Huckleberry Finn Sawyer type, have long been favorites in literature, and their exploits on the screen are expected to win them millions of new admirers.

They are regular American small town boys, heads of a "gang" about which they are very mysterious. Bob it isn't, a "gang" in the evil sense of the word. As a matter of fact they are the "Junior Gi-Men of America", and they right wrongs and capture some bad bank-robbers in real G-Man manner.

Though most of the players are youngsters, this isn't by any means a picture intended solely for juvenile audiences. There's plenty of real drama in it—enough to satisfy all the elders—and no end of hearty laughs.

Penrod is played by 12-year-old Billy Mauch, the astounding youngster who won such approval when he played the little boy in "Anthony Adverse" in the epic picture of that name. Immediately after that he won further acclaim as the brave drummer boy in "The White Angel", Kay Francis' picture based on the Crimean War.

His pal, Sam, is enacted by Harry Watson, a sturdy lad, who, likewise 12, has been in pictures for eleven years.

Penrod's parents are the noted stage favorites, Frank Craven and Spring Byington. Craig Reynolds, popular leading man, turns villain for the first time in his film career.

Anatomy, Psychology Of Nails

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE NAILS are very ingenious devices of nature. For the animals, tooth and claw are almost equally important for defence, offence, and tearing food apart. Men still find these beneficial facilities of the fingers useful, although our toenails are no longer any good to us. The toenails are undoubtedly undergoing degeneration and atrophy; in most people hardly any nail except the nail of the big toe is more than a thin, paperlike disc. We may predict that in the course of evolution, if civilization continues in its present shoe-wearing state, the toenails will completely disappear.

The fingernails, however, are different. In a thousand ways, from opening a knife blade to scratching a deposit off your clothes, it is convenient to have these hardened flat blades at the end of your fingers.

Anatomically nails, like hairs, are simply adaptations of the skin. The epidermis of the skin is made up of flat cells, intimately adherent to each other and containing a hard substance known as keratin. The nail plate must have more of this hard substance—they have been called the skeleton of the skin cells, the keratin has changes to a somewhat different chemical substance, usually called "onychin". It is not affected by weak alkalis or weak acids.

The nail arises from a fold in the skin, which in certain respects corresponds to the hair root. There the nail is nourished, and perhaps derives from all the skin but under-neath it until the point where it becomes free. The upper surface of the nail is smooth, but the under surface presents a number of longitudinal, parallel ridges which fit into similar depressions in the nail bed.

Reasons for Nail Moons

Whether the nail cells are all formed at the root of the nail bed or whether the whole nail bed keeps forming the nail cells is not decided, but the nail bed certainly contributes to the nutrition of the nail. If the nail is separated from the nail bed by injury, it becomes discolored, cloudy and distorted. The nail bed and the nail grow out together.

The white spot at the root of the nail—the lunula—is white because the cells there are young and have not become completely keratinized. If this explanation is true, it supports the idea that all the nail cells arise from the root cells in the skin at the base.

If inkured or removed, the root, matrix and nail bed will replace a nail completely.

A nail grows from the root to the free edge in 130 to 160 days. The fingernails grow much faster than the toenails. They grow faster in summer than in winter. Children grow faster than adults.

The nails are richly supplied with blood vessels and nerves. The nerve terminals just below the hard surface of a nail are larger than in any other part of the skin. Thus while the nail itself does not feel pain, it is exquisitely sensitive on account of these nerve endings below. Since all the blood vitrifies the nails, they are subject to all the diseases of the body general.

Cruise Clothes Must Be Smart And Practical

Good-Looking Three-Piece Suit Is Necessity, So Is Knitted Frock, Slacks, Sweater Worn by Many

Knitted dress in stripes of white and yellow on navy; right, fingered Irish wool cardigan; right, above, suit in black and white plaid-check.

Courtesy Bonwit Teller, New York

By LISBETH

DOESN'T IT seem sometimes that everyone is going away for a jolly trip but you? You lunch with an acquaintance who will soon be off on a fine cruise to be gone two months.

You dine with a woman who is getting her wardrobe in shape for a jaunt and sojourn in the sunny south or to equally sunny California.

Oh, well, if we can't go, at any rate we can help plan another person's trip, go with them while they choose the right clothes; go to the federal building with them and help get their passports—at the time downing a little jealous feeling at their good fortune, but not enough to be nasty about it. In fact, rejoicing, really, that they can get away and have such fun, and hoping our time will come.

Three-Piece Suit Right

Happy travellers on a cruise are shown in this picture used to illustrate this article—a smiling young woman walking up the gang plank of her boat in a very good looking travel costume. Nothing beats that type of outfit for a journey. This model is in black and white plaid tweed, with the three-quarter length coat collared becomingly in wolf. The coat can be worn casually open, or buttoned close to the neck. Contrast is given by the smart fitted jacket in solid black, belted in leather. A wine-red handkerchief is tucked in the breast pocket, another in the neck of the jacket.

With this suit is worn a felt hat with a distinctive self-fringed border. Its brim may be worn down or rolled up at the sides, to fit neatly into the fur collar.

This suit is good to wear on or off the boat. Wear it on the first cool day to do your mile around the promenade deck, and then leave it in your cabin as you sail into the gulf stream and the days get warmer.

Knitted Frock Useful

You'll need a knitted frock for that cruise. It is just the thing for so many occasions. It is smart enough for cocktails and cool enough to wear when playing shuffle-board.

The one shown has stripes of navy and yellow on a navy ground, with a self-colored matching jacket, blue and white leather belt, and, imagine a second dress of plain navy with striped trimming, and a yellow suede belt, is part of the picture.

Wool slacks are worn by many of the boat-dressed women on a cruise and look very comfy with sweaters. These are good for all sports activities. Choose some-thing like these meticulously tailored English ribbed wool slacks with mannishly creased tucks. Wear them in rust color, and push up the sleeves of your pale blue English wool cardigan to show your new imported shell jewelry.

Oh, and around your head, don't forget to wrap Indian fashion, a challis printed scarf.

For evening wear a black mon-key jacket with a collarless neck-line and squared shoulders is very effective.

LONG EYELASHES ADD TO BEAUTY OF EYES

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty" LONG, shadowy lashes certainly add immensely to the loveliness of the eyes. For when the eyes are fringed with such lashes, they seem large, bright and starry, while the lashes give them accent and provide a lovely frame. Fortunately, long, silky lashes can be cultivated.

Of course, no man can expect to grow thick, fringing lashes over night. These and persistence are both requisites in their cultivation. But if a girl persevers in her treatments, she really can. In time, add the growth of her lashes. There are a good many effective eyelash growers on the market, you know. These preparations nourish the hair follicles and help to promote their growth. But only a preparation that is nationally recognized as reliable and effective should be used for this particular purpose.

If you wish to acquire thick, fringing lashes, get into the habit of using one of the above-mentioned lubricants on your lashes nightly before retiring. Use a small eyebrow brush and brush the chosen preparation onto your lashes. Do not apply the lubricant too liberally, however, else it may seep into the eyes during the night and give them a somewhat paltry appearance for a short while. And do not allow any of the cream to get into your eyes.

Of course, a reliable eyelash grower will not really harm your eyes if any of it gets into them, but as the eyes are sensitive, the preparation may prove temporarily irritating. Even a speck of dust, you know, will cause a temporary irritation of the eye. Try using a good lubricant on your lashes nightly, then, employing care in its application. And I'll wager that in time you will reap a harvest of rich, luxuriant lashes.

Artificial eyelashes, of course, are real beauty aids, too, especially for the lass whose lashes are scarce. These lashes, however, only add to the loveliness of the eyes when they are properly used. When used then only do they give the eyes the beautiful, fringed appearance that is desired.

Two Different Types

There are two different types of artificial eyelashes now in general use. The first type consists of a tiny, thread-like strip of adhesive material to which the lashes are attached in proper formation. The strip of material must be carefully fastened to each eyelid just above the natural lashes. And when the lashes are fastened to each eyelid, they adhere securely, and do not seem at all false or artificial.

The second type consists of loose, individual hairs that are attached separately. It's a bit of a task to attach these lashes properly at first, but once you get the hang of the thing you'll find that it's really duck soup for you.

The process of attaching these lashes really is simple enough. You pick up one of the curved hairs with a tweezer, dip the end of it into a special solution that comes with the lashes, and touch it to the tip of one of your own lashes, to which it adheres. And you use a little time to attach the lashes in this manner until there are enough to form a lovely frame for your eyes. These lashes greatly enhance the loveliness of the eyes and, subsequently, of the entire face.

Too Much Zeal Ends In Defeat

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

MISSIONARY zeal is one of the tenets of the Christian religion, of all great religions, indeed. Those won to it feel impelled to try to win others to it—a normal and worthy motive.

"Personal work" is a term familiar to those members of Protestant churches.

But it is not true that because of the way in which some very conscientious persons seek not to do "personal work", to win individuals to their particular brand of faith, they may, and often do, repel rather that attract the very persons they most desire to win? And this often applies to parents and children. Besides many children come to lose interest in and respect for the church of their parents who will make it a practice to "preach" to other children coming to the home. Some parents attempting "to convert" these young guests.

And how embarrassing it is for the adolescent boy or girl when a young friend who has been a welcome a parent will begin to talk religion under the guise of doing "personal work"? Now the religious experience of the child or the young guest may have been wholly different from that "preached" by these parents.

Relittle Other Faiths

So often the excessive zeal of the over-pious parent prompts him or her to say things which imply a belittling or contemptuous view of religion of the visiting child or his parents. Some parents are foolishly great enough to indulge in such behavior with adult guests, though many who would exercise better manners with grown-ups will not restrain themselves with children. Wouldn't it be wonderful if all of us parents would exercise as good manners toward our children and toly young friends as we try to exercise toward other adults? Then we shall have so achieved in our own lives that we will have gone tremendously in culture.

Anyway, we all ought to know that we win no one to any belief by offending him by taking a holier-than-thou attitude toward him. If conscientious parents who are jealous about their religion but know, they would put their faith in in success at winning others to their particular brand of religion through proving in a quiet, inoffensive manner, living hour by hour and day by day in the family and outside of it, that their religion makes them more lovable and agreeable to be with. And as I understand the philosophy of Jesus these suggestions are entirely in accord with it. What do you think?

CHOCOLATE COOKIES PACKED IN SCHOOL BOX

Baked Potatoes
Creamed Tuna Fish

Chocolate Fruit Cookies

Maybe some of you will omit the chocolate fruit cookies from this menu between the children. However, sweets should be included in such meals, and maybe the baked apples will supply enough without the cookies. The recipe, however, will make delicious cookies to be served with afternoon tea or packed in the college or boarding school young person's lunch.

Today's Recipes

CHOCOLATE FRUIT COOKIES — One cup raisins, one-half cup figs pasteurized dates, three-fourths cup water, four tablespoons butter, one cup sugar, one and one-half cups flour, one-half teaspoon soda, one teaspoon baking powder, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one-fourth cup cocoa, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup sour milk, one egg, one teaspoon vanilla, one cup nutmeats. Cooked sliced dates, water, butter and sugar in saucepan until dates are soft and syrup slightly thick. Drain; measure syrup (should be about three-fourths cup) and cool. Sift flour, soda, baking powder, cocoa, cinnamon and salt together. Add sour milk, beaten egg, vanilla, nutmeats, dates, raisins, syrup. Drop mixture by rounded teaspoonfuls two inches apart on well-oiled baking sheet. Bake in slow oven (250 F.) 15 minutes. Makes about four dozen cookies, and will keep fresh over long period.

TANGERINE COCKTAIL — One and three-fourths cups tangerine juice, one package lemon gelatine, one-fourth cup lemon juice one cup tangerine sections, finely chopped mint. Heat tangerine juice almost to boiling; pour over gelatine; add lemon juice. Set in pan of ice water, and when thick, add tangerine sections; pour into cocktail glasses; chill thoroughly. To serve, cut into one-half inch squares, pile into cocktail glasses and sprinkle chopped mint, blended with tangerine juice, on top.

Every Sunday in Germany is "one-dish" day, the day that loyal Germans prepare their dinners of a single dish. The object is to conserve the Reich's dwindling food supplies and to supply relief for the poor. Here is a street corner scene in Berlin as the army joined housekeepers in the enterprise to collect victuals for winter relief. Army cooks are serving customers with the day's dish, in this case stew, from rolling kitchens.

ONE AND ONE

Two little girls are better than one,
Two little boys can double the fun.
Two little birds can build a fine nest,
Two little arms can love mother best.

Two little ponies must go to a team;
Two little pockets has my little man;
Two little eyes to open and close,
Two little ears and one little nose,
Two little elbows, dimpled and sweet,
Two little shoes on two little feet,
Two little lips and one little chin,
Two little cheeks with a rose shut in;
Two little shoulders, chubby and strong,
Two little legs running all day long,
Two little prayers does my darling say,
While close he kneel by my side each day,
Two little folded hands, soft and brown
Two little eyelids cast meekly down.
And two little angels guard him in bed,

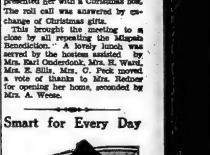
Young Man Offers Comfort To Youth Who Has Lost Pal

By VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR MISS LEE: Since I have read your recent column I have felt that I should write to you. The letter signed "Weary", touches me in particular.

"I am a fellow in my twenties, and though not having experienced anything similar to this fellow's experiences, I believe I know how he must feel. A true friend is indeed wonderful.

"The purpose of this letter is not to tell of my life, but that if possible others may come to know that there is hope of encompassing that have given me faith for myself. If we turn in the Bible to the fifteenth chapter of John, the thirteenth verse, we read, "Greater love hath no man than that he lay down his life for his friend." As the greatest friend gave up his life in an attempt to save him, he may know that his friend's love was the greatest that a man may have.



"There is in the Bible a wonderful story of a true friendship between two fellows, David and Jonathan, which is found in I Samuel 18, 19 and 20th chapters. As 'Weary' is grieved over the loss of his pal, so David was grieved over that cruise. It is just the thing that man Weary's own age says would probably help him more than any words. He might easily feel that a woman would hardly know how a boy would feel and be able to say the right thing.

I hope from such that Weary reads, this column today.

Washing In Heaven

There are women who LIKE to wash oranges as many seem. They get right in shining dirt, and rub their hands with pride at the sight of a lemon like of shining white clothes, all fresh and sweet. Such joy and pride in achievement was displayed by Aunt Paisley, a character created by Lucretia Peabody Hale, when the idea of successful achievement was a whole "thought" of clothes, all "cross the big back yard, as white as white," and her idea of heaven was an eternal day of washing-pitching miracles of cleanliness.

"I hope they let me have one washday all to myself when nobody else does it, could" Aunt Paisley cruited. "My old hands itches to get at dem long white angel clothes, and dem fine dress robes and things bubblin' up in a big gold bilin'-kettle. Reckon be a silver tub?

"I hope dat'll be jest one robe too many for de wash line. I aim to hang me one 'cross de pearly gate—de very back gate. Den I hope for time to take 'em in, fold 'em, and put 'em away somewhere. By I hope he'll say, 'I can't tell what de wash leaves off and de pearly gate begins, Aunt Paisley. Dat's how white I aims to get 'em."

EVERYONE is making fun of women's hats these days. Funny pictures of headdresses made of everything, including tissue and kitchen utensils, have been appearing in the papers.

But there ARE hats that are up-to-date and also wearable, believe it or not. Pictured is one of them. It is smart for sports and everyday wear, and is in dark brown felt, worn by attractive Harriet Brandon, actress.

This model has the popular high crown, and a burnt orange cockade is placed in front in place of strips of brown grosgrain ribbon which also forms a band around the hat.

Novelties of the season are, among others, a dress print with a design of tiny pencils in bright colors.

Reserve Strength Lacking as Belleville Redmen Drop 4-3 Overtime Decision to Petes

Eight Belleville Plays Fail to Stop Eleven of Opposition

CENTRE ICE PLAY

W. Jackson And Brother Clayton Score For Locals

Lack of reserve strength took its toll and overcame a slight margin between victory and defeat when the Belleville Redmen dropped a 70 minute overtime hockey O.H.A. tussle to Peterborough by the score of 4 to 3 at the Belleville Arena last evening. The game was like spending O.Ha. magic of the current season and was productive of some fine hockey despite the fact some 1,200 home fans were forced to take home another disappointing defeat after the inaugural.

Using eight players, including only two alternates, the Redmen were faced with the mammoth problem of lack of reserve strength as the Petes were at full strength with eleven capable hockey players at the beck of Coach "Pick" Hines. The ice was in keen and fast condition and saw the two teams produce some interesting as it progressed. Daylight hockey was lacking at times as the players, however, as solo efforts and combination play sparked from one end to the other and with combined precision and speed to give the visiting Petes stood up under the tiring grind, but failed to capitalize on it less as to their heralded imported players from Toronto Marlboros.

No Scoring in 1st Frame

There was no scoring in the initial period as each player covered his individual check in the middle of the zone while the defensive efforts, what Belleville only had the edge on Peterboro at the end after competently nets all during the 30 minute stanza. The Redmen introduced most everything in the game drawing down the first fifteen penalties following which the Petes staged ganging acts and powers against C. the initial frame without success, while the scarlet-clad Belleville lads brought gladness to the hearts of the home fans, when Bill Jackson took Storms' well-drawn pass and beat Harding with a hard low drive. The counter came when Scoops fine stick-handling by Storms in the centre ice zone. The locals lead was short-lived as Vitarelli walked in upon Watt uncovered and unmolested to put home the equaliser after Burton's drive had been stopped by the Belleville goal custodian. With the score standing one all and the play becoming more torrid as the minutes of the clubs were seen alternating on the fly as the second stanza began.

Before the game became settled in their seats for the third period Billy Starr rapped home a pass from Barnes, after making a clever, low-lenght rush and passing out to the waiting Peterboro centreman, who made no mistake as he drove one the Redmen staged a hectic comeback in the last period when the Petes as the Jackson's combined nicely into the play. Brother Clayton taking Bill's pass inside of the defence and flipping the rubber past Harding. Jackson drifted the visitors' defence out of position on the play while brother Clayton made sure of his goal.

Count tied at Full Time

Full time of 60 minutes saw the count tied two all and a fifteen minutes of play in the overtime Barnes sailed through a poke in Burton's end, Peterboro centre, being uncovered and unmolested for a second rather soft counter was scored against the locals. The veteran "Shrimp" McDougall played "puppy on the corner" with the puck and Goalie Ken Watt, while Coughlin waltzed-in and had scored when he picked up the loose rubber from beneath the prostrate Watt. With only twenty seconds left to play Bill Jackson poked in Bentley's pass-out to elevate the human hopes in the home town hearts, but without results as the Peterboroughs were surely on the defensive from that point and won by the score of 4 to 3.

Even if the home town fans were forced to accept a defeat, some good hockey resulted and there was plenty of speed to give the fans the odd thrill. Watt stopped 29 of the 33 shots on net, while Harding blocked 30 of the same quality Murphy and Bentley blocked well, with the former proving most effective in his rushing. The Jackson's also played their average game, while Storms, Willers and Saine were seen at an advantage, but the lack of reserves sharply sapped the vitality of the Redmen, as they battled against overwhelming odds of facing fresh rested players.

Barnes Shows Strength

The Peterboro Club unearthed a real find in Barnes, a new defence player from the west, who headed well with Williamson, their veteran. The second line of Starr, Burton and Vitarelli carried the mail for the visitors and was always dangerous while on the ice. The veteran "Shrimp" McDougall seems to have evaded "old man time" and still proves effective in play making and at the art of evading heavy body checks. The possession of three more adequate alternates by Eddie Thomas' Peterboro would no doubt see a reversal in the scoring the next time out.

The lineups:

Belleville: Goal, Watt; defence, Bentley and Murphy; centre, C. Jackson; wings, Wilson and Jackson; alternates, Baines, and Storms.

Peterborough: Goal, Harding; defence, Williamson and Barnes; centre, McDougall; wings, Gratton and Coughlin; alternates, Starr, Burton, Vitarelli, Brown and Creighton.

Referee, Joe Smith, Kingston.

"KID LINE" OF BOSTON BRUINS SCORE 24 POINTS

Each Member Has Eight Points So Far This Season

EDGE OVER RANGERS

Adams of Detroit Sends His Goalie Smith to Eye Specialist

By The Canadian Press

Art Ross, Major-Domo of Boston Bruins arena, is willing, and evidently able to claim a victory today over Lester Patrick of New York Rangers on one count—that he has a better "kid line" than Dooley's famous Silver Pur.

Of course, it's asking a bit too much to ask the three-fisted Rangers pilot to agree with that, but the records show that Boston's crack line of Milt Schmidt, Porky Dumart and Bobby Bauer has definite edge on the All National league campaigning this season over Chuck Conacher, Bill Cook and Byron Rextall, the youthful Rangler trio.

Probably the best indication of the Boston line's goodhouse is shown in the fact each member has scored an even eight points to date, Schmidt made his total with five goals and three assists, Dumart his with four goals and four assists, and Bauer his with two goals and six assists.

In contrast to the 24 scoring points piled up by the budding Bruins line the Rangers' big guns in scoring points, Smith is tops with seven goals and two assists while Kitz has two goals and has helped in another, Rextal has been held to nothing but a pair of assists.

Ace Lines to Hook-up

The fans in Bruin town will have the chance tonight to see these two top lines in action when Ross brings his Rangers there to play in on the night's three game card. Toronto Maple Leafs play New York Americans in another while Montreal Canadiens and their intra-city rivals, the Canadiens in a game originally scheduled for Christmas night but was postponed.

Coach Jack Adams took another step yesterday in his attempts to find out what is wrong with his slumping goal tender, Dorchester Red Wings by sending goalie Norman Smith to a specialist to have his eye examined. The pucky tender has passed all tests with flying colors.

Adams had some good news however, when Dr. Ross Gunn, eye specialist showed that Ebbie Goodfellow, Detroit forward was the victim of a fractured wrist, will be back in harness as a forwarding game against Chicago Black Hawks. However, this good news came with the announcement of the other rearguards Doug. Young and Wilfred Normandin would not play in the game. Bowman has a fever from influenza, while Young has a sore throat.

BUDGE HURT BY SHARP CRITICISM

Tennis Star Says He Can't be at Top of Game All The Time

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Standing in a net can't be at the top all the time—I'm no machine," Budge Patty declared today in reply to Jack Crawford to make up for a listless defeat in exhibition tennis at Brisbane's Exhibition Gottfried Von Cramm.

Bryan Hillest, president of the New South Wales lawn tennis association, immediately headed Californian's apology to angry White City tennis fans over Budge's "indifference" but of Budge's desire to make amends tomorrow by playing Crawford the Australian star.

Budge, who appeared hurt by the bitter criticism of officials, press and the public, explained his lackluster performance yesterday in which Von Cramm of Germany defeated him 6-1, 6-3.

"I don't want to be keyed up when nothing is hanging on the match," Budge said. "If I am beaten at home in an exhibition they aren't concerned.

"They naturally say 'why should he kill himself in an exhibition?' I took the same outlook here.

"I'm sorry the public expected so much and I'm sorry I disappointed them," Budge said. "But I did as well as I could it was not intentional."

GODFREY SCOTT HEADS SKI CLUB

Fees Are Set And Members Will Procure Good Course

The hills and dales of the surrounding countryside will soon ring with the cries of enthusiastic skiiers if the mucous of the newly-formed Belleville Ski Club blossoms forth into the full flower of membership. For last night at the Y.M.C.A. a group of lovers of the long blades went into solemn conclave and came forth with a brand new organization.

Fred H. Deacon addressed the gathering composed of a fair representation of both sexes, and the outcome was a fine show of enthusiasm that augurs well for the new organization.

In a brief descriptive address Mr. Deacon outlined the plans as followed by prominent ski clubs of the province, and stated that no difficulty would be encountered in bringing motion pictures here that will give veterans and beginners valuable information on their favorite winter sport.

Many angles of the sport were discussed principally the choice of a central course, the possibility of the procuring of a lodge and other essentials necessary in the successful functioning of such a club.

The importance of selecting a course that would be suitable for beginners was stressed by Mr. Deacon, who added that gentle slopes for beginners were equally as necessary as the steeper ones for veterans.

Fees Are Set

Fees were set at a flat rate of one dollar for members of all ages. This would ensure not only a greater membership, it was thought, but would equally funnish necessary the laying out of a run and the procuring of transportation and other incidentals that otherwise would have to be met in the initial stages of the organization.

Instructors could be obtained who would be willing to come to Belleville to give whatever instruction was needed the gathering was told.

After the discussion a slate of officers consisting of Godfrey Scott, president; F. Deacon, vice president; Miss Ann Schuster, secretary; Ernie Whelpton, treasurer; Miss Jessie, Mrs. H. E. Martin, Mr. Pringle and Mary Roberts was appointed.

This executive will meet on Thursday at five o'clock to discuss plans and arrangements for a special "run" on Sunday in the Oak Hills with every one present showing marked enthusiasm the possibilities for the formation and successful functioning of a Ski Club here look very brightly.

"Husbands and wives are human beings—prone to faults and shortcomings. Yet, by adjusting themselves to each other's personalities, lasting happiness is possible.

IF every nagging wife, and every fault-finding husband would make it a point to "cool off" by smoking a Turret in silence, before saying a single word, many a home might be a pleasanter place in which to live. Turrets are so soothing because they are made from an original and unique blend of fine Virginia tobaccos. Even the package is better—it has a handy calendar on the back to keep you up to date. If you haven't smoked a Turret lately, try a package today.

Royal Bank of Canada Reports Good Year

Total Assets $869,538,000 up $14,000,000 — Deposits Increased $10,000,000—Liquid Assets 65.53% of Liabilities to the Public—Increased Profits Shown

The Annual Balance Sheet of The Royal Bank of Canada recently made public presents a moderate growth in deposits and total assets and a strong liquid position. Total deposits amount to $748,088,000 and are higher than at any period in the bank's history, with the single exception of 1929.

Commercial Loans Increase

Current Loans in Canada, including loans to Municipalities and Provincial Governments amount to $200,543,727, an increase of approximately $12,500,000 as compared with the previous year. Current Loans outside of Canada amounting to $101,147,198 are approximately $4,000,000 lower than last year. Coming as it does after a steady decline in current loans over a period of seven years, the reversal in the trend of commercial loans is encouraging. As might be expected in view of the present stock market situation, Call Loans both in Canada and abroad have been also materially reduced. Call Loans in Canada amount to $19,367,906, a reduction of approximately $6,000,000. Call Loans abroad amount to $10,070,585, a decline of $4,000,000.

Strong Liquid Position

The liquid position is strong, total readily available assets being $514,671,335. Of this amount $168,-029,928 is represented by cash on hand or on deposit with the Bank of Canada and other banks, while $345,806,274 is represented by Dominion and Provincial Government securities. Public securities other than Canadian amounting to $23,-927,483 show an increase of $13,-917,383. This increase is accounted for by the purchase of Dominion securities. Total investments amount to $516,568,217, an increase of $22,-398,000 from the previous year and a new high record in the history of the bank. Total liquid assets are 65.53% of liabilities to the public, which, of course, is a reflection of present conditions rather than of deliberate policy. No doubt the bank would have been glad to have replaced a considerable proportion of its liquid assets by commercial loans.

Profits Higher

Net profits for the year are shown at $3,311,279 and compared with 1936 reflects an improvement of $207,136. Dividends paid absorbed $2,000,000 and the usual contribution of $300,000 was made for Bank Premises but the contribution to the Pension Fund has been increased to $500,000 as compared with the former appropriation of $200,000. Balance of Profit and Loss Account carried forward totals $2,325,176, an increase of $311,279.

The Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders will be held at the Head Office of the bank at 11 a.m. on January 13, 1938.

U. S. Editors View 1938 as Good Year

New York, Dec. 28—(AP)—"Business must soon turn into a long-sustained period of increasing volume and velocity, and probably of rapidly increasing profits," Glenn Griswold, publisher of Business Week said today in a year-end review of the United States business outlook.

Most editors of other McGraw-Hill publications are in substantial agreement in the particular fields of their interest.

P. E. Schmitt, editor of Engineering-News-Record, said:

"The general picture (for 1938) is promising in view of the momentum of business enterprise and the large, unfilled requirements due to obsolescence in all departments of construction. Public construction promises to hold up well. Private construction prospects are less definite, but...industry's requirements ...cannot go long unsatisfied for."

Douglas G. Woolf, editor of Textile World:

"My own belief is that the first part of the year will be slow, with a decided pick-up in the latter part, and that total activity for the year will rate at approximately the high levelwhich has prevailed since April 1937."

S. B. Williams, managing editor of Electrical World:

"After reviewing the situation as a whole it is impossible to be anything but optimistic about 1938....The 1938 (electric energy) output should exceed that of 1937....A weighted average might place the increase for the year consistently 10 per cent. below 1937. Manufacturers really feel that in general 1938 will be a good year for the budget."

C. C. Parmalee editor of Engineering and Mining Journal:

"The year ahead looks like a year of production and prices for nonferrous metals than prevailed in January—a condition which is likely to continue into the early part of 1938."

ACCLAMATION IN TYENDINAGA TWP.

Reeve Henry Larkin Will Preside Again in 1938

Shannonville, Dec. 28 (Special)—In a splendid winding meeting the nomination meeting for the council of Tyendinaga Township was held in the Masonic Parish Hall on Monday afternoon. The hall, scene of many political fights, was virtually jammed with standing room being at a minimum. Although many names were offered as candidates all declined except the four present council.

The meeting opened with addresses by the members of the council. Of course, the principal speaker being the Reeve, Mr. Henry Larkin. Larkin declared at the outset of his address that there were two matters which he wished to bring before the ratepayers of the people and which they must decide. The first was the agitation of many people to form a Township Council, about which Mr. Larkin said would entail a heavy burden. The second was the purchase of a power machine for the roads. In the remainder of his address he dealt with matters which had met at the close asked for the support of the people and said if he were elected he would do his best for the good warden of the county council. Mr. Larkin then introduced Deputy Reeve, Mr. W. S. Dies, Mr. Joseph Forristell and Mr. H. E. White members of the council addressed the ratepayers. The chairman then called for the names of those present who all expressed their satisfaction with the present council and that the reason did not want thier names to stand.

INCINERATOR SHED NEAR HOSPITAL IS DESTROYED

Believed to have become ignited from either a spark or a live coal, the wooden shed housing the incinerator at the Belleville General Hospital was burned to the ground this morning at 5 o'clock. The alarm for the arrival of the fire department on the roof and sides of the frame structure were a mass of flames. The blaze was extinguished with the aid of chemicals.

The structure is situated at the rear of the hospital premises and is sufficiently far enough away from the hospital to assure no danger from the blaze. The building was a small one, about ten feet square, with a flat roof. It was constructed entirely of wood' stated Fire Chief Lynch, this afternoon. The blaze was discovered by hospital employees.

CHRISTMAS TREES IN CANNIFTON CIRCUIT

Another Christmas season is passing with its many happy events, included in the latter, one from Christmas Trees and entertainments, held at Bethany, Carmel, Tabernacle and Gilead and St. Andrew's, United Churches, beginning on Tuesday, Dec. 21st. Preparations and decorations made the trees very attractive especially as they were laden with so many varied Christmas remembrances and gifts and the many happy children who had been patiently waiting for the time of Santa's arrival, Numbination meeting last night brought no opposition to Mrs. Hanley and the clerk declared her elected by acclamation.

FAMED COMPOSER

one who asked his advice. "It is enough to play it."

Nothing to Say.

For his motto he took these words of Pythagoras: "If you have nothing to say, precisely because I am a musician, I shall not say anything; I should perhaps find something to say to you."

Until the secret influence dominating his entire life was revealed in the performances of his "Rondeau de Couperin", written in tribute to one of the great 17th and 18th-century French composer Francois Couperin and to the memory of young Frenchmen who had died in their country's defence.

When the "Valses Nobles Et Sentimentales" were first played by Louis Aubert in 1911, they were presented without a composer's credit line, and some critics attributed them to Ravel's old adversary, Debussy.

Board Room Gossip

The very sharpness of the U. S. business and market decline brings considerable encouragement to the fact signs are already appearing that the decline is nearing bottom. These indications are probably premature, as there are many sentiment factors which are only now feeling the full effects of the large reductions in operations elsewhere, and the impetus of the recession will likely carry the decline further yet. But the ensurance business has been removed with the evidences that the public and the Congress have gained a saner conception of the requirements for general prosperity.

Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney-General of the United States in a radio address Sunday night stated that the U.S. was far headed for another depression. Cooperation between business and Government, and the methods of restoring business confidence were the major points in the President's address. He asserted that there would be no major changes because the Government knows it must step in if private enterprises cannot set conditions, and is organized to do so at any time.

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie came around to see how my train of electric cars is at those signals working. Then couldn't be a real one on the railroad because such a thing is impossible because this is the most perfect railroad in the world.

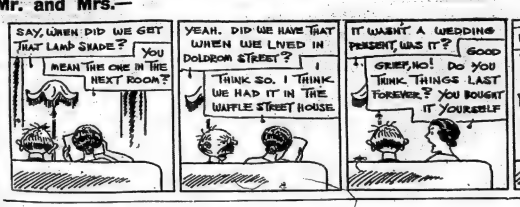
You ought to see mine, Artie said, and I said, I did see yours, and Artie said, Well then in that case if you think yours is the best you must be dead in one eye and cant see out of the other, that's what I think.

How can you think with nothing to think with? I said.

Meaning brains and being a good answer, and Artie said, O is that so, and I said, well all I can say is, if prizes was being given out for dumbness you'd get the first and you wouldn't even have to try for it.

O is that so, well all I can say is, if prizes was being given out for dumbness nobody else but you would get any, for the simple reason because you'd get them all, I said.

Being another good answer, and ma said, Now now, boys, is that any way for cousins to talk to each other? Why dont you try to be a little polite to each other? she said.



Giving me another idea, and I said, Excuse me, Artie, I beg your pardon and I want to apologize for saying you'd get all the prizes for dumbness, because there are no more left because you've been all already so leave me congratulate you.

Being the best answer yet and the result being that ma made me sit on a chair in the corner while Artie played with my electric trains all by himself.

Being worth it.

Letter-Writing de Luxe

By H. IRVING KING

McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service.

Charley Benton's weakness was bashfulness in the presence of ladies. He was fully aware of his failing and so far overcame it that people began to say: "How completely Charley Benton has gotten over his bashfulness." But in the presence of one young lady his old weakness reasserted itself and she was the one person in the world in whose presence he felt he should not be bashful. Her name was Marian Gray.

He had been in love with her for some time and got along very well in his courtship until he came to popping the question.

One day, as Charley was passing a book store where shop-worn books were exposed for sale on a little stand outside, his eye caught the title: "The ——— Letter Writer de Luxe—how to put your thoughts on paper." He picked it up and examined it. The book opened as if by magic to a page wherein was printed "The proper form of a letter from a bashful young man in proposing to his sweetheart." He read the letter printed below it carefully. It was not just what he had been trying to say so many times to Marian; but it seemed to cover the ground.

That night he studied the form letter carefully, tried to make some alterations in it, gave up the attempt, copied it verbatim and sent it off to Marian. "The dear boy! At last! said Marian to herself as she glanced through the missive. Then her brow contracted and she became thoughtful. That does not sound a bit like Charley," she thought. "What do you suppose—?

A few minutes later she was in consultation with the parlor-maid. "Annie," said she, "have you got such a thing as a book showing you how to write all sorts of letters?" "No, Miss Marian, I haven't but the cook has one that has just beautiful letters in it. They are just wonderful; the way they are set down."

"Ask the cook if she will lend it to me for an hour or so," said Marian.

Marian looked over the book. Yes, there it was, on page twenty-three: "Letter from a bashful young man in proposing to his sweetheart"—word for word as Charley had written it. Marian turned over the pages until she came to what she was looking for—she knew it must be there—"Letter from a young lady in accepting the proffered hand of her lover." She giggled and chuckled, reading over the stilted and preposterous form—letter which took up a whole page. She looked at the number of the page. It was twenty-seven. Then she went to her desk, took a sheet of note paper and wrote "Dear Charley: Yours received. For reply see page twenty-seven. Letter-writer de Luxe. Marian."

She expected that Charley would be round early the next evening and was prepared to rush into his embrace and laugh with him over their little comedy. But Charley Benton did not come. Another night came and no Charley.

Marian was perplexed; she was angry. Well, if Charley Benton wanted to take offense because she had read his note to his own colleague, "But I'll just have an explanation of his outrageous conduct, anyway," she said. She was to dine at the Boutsford's Wednesday night; the Boutsford's were great friends of Charley's—he was sure to be there.

Yes, Charley was there and when the little party assembled just before dinner was announced the two victims of letter-writing de luxe greeted each other politely but coldly. There was no chance for an explanation just then, but Marian just longed to ask him a few questions—and tell him a few things. She manoeuvred Charley into a quiet corner and opened fire. "May I ask," said she "merely as a matter of curiosity, why you paid no attention to my note regarding your offer of marriage?"

"I was afraid," replied Charley "that I could not satisfactorily fill the position which you so kindly offered me."

"I had some doubts on that score myself," said Marian, "but I decided to take the chance."

"I should advise you to keep your present cook," said Charley.

"My present cook!" cried Marian. "What has my cook got to do with it?" and she went on without waiting for an answer: "You sent me a letter copied verbatim from the 'Letter-writer de Luxe' and replied by referring you to page twenty-seven! "You did," said Charley frigidly, "and page twenty-seven contained a form letter entitled: Reply of a lady accepting an application for the position of Cook in the household." "It did not," cried Marian, "it contained a letter from a young lady accepting the proffered hand of her lover!" Charley looked at her for a moment in silence. Then a light broke upon Charley. "Was your letter-writer a new edition?" he asked. "Yes," was the answer. "I remember it said 'newly corrected and enlarged on the title page." "And mine was an old one," said Charley. "That's it, the numbering of its pages wouldn't correspond. Oh, Marian!" "Oh, Charley!" Curtain.

Ontario Department of Highways Distributes White Cross Emblems

Toronto, Dec. 28—All the License Issuing Offices of the Motor Vehicles Branch, Ontario Department of Highways, are supplied with White Cross emblems and Safety Pledges, for distribution to motorists who wish to enroll in the White Cross Safe Driving Movement.

Officials' posters are displayed in these offices, inviting the public to co-operate in this Safety Campaign, and announcing that each motorist who wishes to do so, may obtain a White Cross emblem for his motor vehicle by asking the clerk in charge for one. The emblems are not being handed to every person who calls for a 1938 license plate, as the directors of this public movement are in agreement with the officials of the Department of Highways that a promiscuous distribution would tend to defeat the very purpose of this campaign. By displaying the White Cross on his motor vehicle, the licensed operator signifies his intention to observe the simple rules of safe driving contained in the Pledge of the White Cross Driver.

There is actually no pledge sign, but with each emblem is handed to the motorist a booklet containing the Pledge, and by the simple act of affixing the emblem to the car, the motorist obligates himself to its observance.

Already over 150,000 White Cross emblems have been forwarded to individual motorists, business houses and other organizations, for the enrollment of employees or members, and the Committee in charge estimates that well over 100,000 motor vehicles are now displaying the White Cross Emblem in Ontario. A large portion of these emblems have been attached to 1937 markers and at this time of year, when so many owners of cars are changing their old license plates for their 1938 markers, the Committee of the White Cross Safe Driving Movement is anxious that the emblems already distributed will be preserved and placed on the new license plates.

The cost of providing a sufficient number of emblems for the motor vehicles of all motorists in Ontario who wish to join the movement, is very considerable, and if for no other reason the principle of ordinary economy dictates that these emblems should not be destroyed when 1938 license plates are secured. In addition to this consideration, the increasing interest and growing importance of the White Cross Safe Driving Movement will be the better served by the greatest possible use of all the emblems distributed, as well as those not yet issued by the Department of Highways or other distributing agencies. The White Cross emblem is intended to act as a constant reminder, on the streets and highways, of the motorist's individual responsibility when driving a motor car. Therefore, the greater the number of emblems in actual use by motorists on their 1937 and 1938 license markers, the more effective becomes this crusade to help reduce the appalling toll of accidents on streets and highways.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, December 29
By The Canadian Press

Much sturdy progress should be made on this day in the way of solidifying the fortunes and interests, judging by the lunar aspects. Old and lagging projects may receive definite spur, with elders of old established institutions ready to assist in such security of finances and property interests, as well as in putting the social position upon a sounder basis.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which they may be able to feel solid ground under their feet after a period of confusion or inertia.

A child born on this day may be studious, deep, steadfast and industrious, with energy and enterprise for putting over solid propositions and carving out a place of security in business and in his personal life. Elders should be disposed to assist in this.

GREEK GEOGRAPHY

An educated ancient yeoman who knew his Greek geography would feel at home on a fast express in Central and Western New York just reading the names on the railroad depots —Troy, Utica, Rome, Syracuse, Ithaca. In a slower train or an automobile he would see Homer, Ovid, Euclid, names among the villages— Attica, Aurora, Camillus, Fabius, Ilion, Manlius, Marcellus, Ovid, Troy, and Truly, among others. He would be surprised, as a good many modern Americans will be surprised to find such place names in the Empire state as Aurelius, Cato, Cincinnatus, Aristotle and Euclid, Niobe and Medusa, Diana and Minerva. More than 200 classic place names are bestowed in New place nam s the end of the 18th century—New York Times.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

MAN WAS MEANT TO EAT A MIXED DIET

One of the interesting exhibits at the Chicago Century of Progress was that which showed the length of the intestines in a sheep, a man, and a dog. In the case of the sheep the intestines were 24 times the length of its body, in a dog, they were 4 1-2 times the length of its body, and in man 9 1-2 times the length of his body (sitting).

Now why does an animal like the sheep have to have such a long height?

A sheep lives on grass and herbs a bulky food with low heat or fuel value and therefore must eat a great amount of grass to get enough nourishment for the needs of its body. This means that it must have a long intestine so that this low food value grass will not pass out of it intestine until the intestine has absorbed all its food value from it. If the intestine were short the grass would pass through in too short a time to give the sheep's body all the nourishment in it.

In the case of the dog however, the intestine is short because the dog eats meat—a concentrated food. The meat is put into such condition by the stomach (partly digested) that when it reaches the intestine the intestine quickly absorbs (pix rich concentrated easily digested food into the blood. There is thus in the dog no need for a long intestine to absorb the food.

What about man?

Research workers point out that in proportion to the length of his body (sitting), the intestine is about one-third the length of that of the sheep and about twice as long as that of the dog. This means then that man (in proportion to his height) should not eat as much meat as the dog, or eat as much grass (vegetables and fruit) as the sheep.

In other words man was meant to live on the mixed diet—meat, eggs, fish, cereals, vegetables and fruit.

As meat is used to repair worn tissue caused by work or exercise, office workers need only about half as much meat as those engaged in hard physical work, or who indulge a vigorous exercise.

GREAT BRITAIN REJECTS JAPAN'S VERSION

Military Report on Firing Upon British Gunboats Unacceptable to Britain

Japanese Version Differs Greatly From British Version

'MISTAKE' SAYS JAPAN

Japanese Explanation is That Ships Appeared to be Hiding

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

London, Dec. 29 (CP)—The British government rejects the Japanese army's version of the attack on the British gunboat Ladybird. This version is considered here unacceptable as it is not in accordance with the British government's own report of the incident.

1230 West Asiatic Time Japan

The London office today received a 1,200-word note of apologies from the Japanese government. The note is now being distributed to members of the cabinet for consideration. Its text will be made public tonight or tomorrow.

The Japanese army version which was not officially communicated to the British government asserted that H.M.S. Ladybird, with other British vessels on the Yangtze, was fired upon by the Japanese because they appeared to be hiding behind black smoke and barges in junkes.

Message Reaches Tokyo

Tokyo, Dec. 29 (AP)—The British Embassy today informed the Japanese foreign office it could not accept the Japanese military version of attacks on the British gunboats Ladybird and Bee.

The military section of Imperial headquarters yesterday had issued a statement explaining the attacks were a "mistake" and expressing regrets. Text of the main Japanese reply to Great Britain's protest on the attacks was not made public.

One British sailor was killed in the incident, which occurred on the Yangtze River on the same day the United States gunboat Panay was bombed.

CAPT. PALMATEER OLD MAN OF SEA DIES AT PICTON

83 Year Old Mariner Hears "Last Eight Bells"

SAILED 53 YEARS

Leaves Record of Never Having Lost Man or Ship

Prince Edward County's grand old man of the sea, Capt. Levi Palmateer, within the quiet walls of Picton hospital, within sound of the waters he loved so well, and with his national shipmates the gulls flying overhead in a whirling tribute to a great shipmate, Captain Nelson Palmateer, 83-year-old mariner answered the last eight bells.

Tranquilly peacefully, he let go the final rope that bound him to his earthly anchorage and mounted the compass-star by answer to the call of the Great Captain.

A seaman worthy of the great traditions of the sailor of the Great Lakes, the late Captain Palmateer was a living exemplification of those splendid Canadians who "go down to the sea in ships". Nor of the forgot type, but one who had an inherent ability not only to command men but to command their love and respect. His home was the open waters. His cathedral the blue sky, and his anthem the shrill whistling wind. On Page Three)

NEW STATUS IS GIVEN IRELAND

Becomes State of Eire Under New Constitution

By SEAN O'CATHAIN

Dublin, Dec. 29 (CP)—When the new Irish constitution came into operation this morning, the twenty-six counties known since 1921 as the Irish Free State became the State of Eire, or Ireland in the English language.

Introduced by Eamon de Valera in April and approved July 1 by a plebiscite in which 685,105 votes were cast for and 526,945 against, the constitution gives the Free State its entirely new status, though it is not quite clear what it is.

The State came into being amidst belief it shortly will face its second general election inside a year. Ramon de Valera is now becoming Taoiseach (prime minister) instead of the former governing position of president of the Executive Council, controls but 67 seats in the Dail (parliament) against 69 for the combined other parties.

An election for newly created post of President of Ireland also occurs, probably coincident with parliamentary elections. Possible opponents for the new post, which will have many functions of a governor-general, are Sean O'Kelly, vice-president of the executive council, and Lord Mayor Alfred Byrne of Dublin, an independent who most likely would receive support of the Fine Gael, William T. Cosgrave's party.

Japanese Army Claims Right to Enter Territory

Shanghai, Dec. 29 (AP)—Japanese army claimed "in principle" today the right to extend provisions of its military law into Shanghai's International Settlement and French Concession, where thousands of Britons and other foreigners make their homes.

The Japanese army spokesman announced the claim, under which troops could enter foreign areas still outside Japanese control and arrest and try "all persons" suspected of crimes against Nippon's armed forces.

Japanese forces would proceed cautiously in any cases where foreigners holding treaty rights to be tried by courts of their own nations were suspected, the spokesman said.

He said the basis of the Japanese claim was "de facto" military occupation and specified it would be enforced in occupied territory.

Tsingtao, Shantung's main seaport, virtually was cut off by Japanese troops today on the north central city where destruction of some $120,000,000 of Japanese property brought a Japanese threat of punitive action.

Japanese troops pushing southward from Tsinan, conquered Shantung capital, attacked in the thirty-mile from Tsinan on the route to Shanghai.

Minimum Wage Schedules For Ontario Textile Industry May Be Announced Next Week

Labor Minister Watching Action at Quebec Closely

HAS BEEN UNDER STUDY

Wishes to be Sure That Plan is Economically Sound

Brantford, Ont., Dec. 29 (CP)—Hon. M. M. MacBride, Ontario Labor minister, said today he hoped next week to be able to announce the basis on which minimum wage schedules will be established in Ontario's textile industry will be fixed.

Mr. MacBride said Ontario was watching closely Quebec's action in fixing minimum wages for men but would proceed slowly and seek to avoid hasty action.

"The Industry and Labor Board has for years had the matter of working conditions, wage schedules and classifications in the textile industry which is closely inter-related between Ontario and Quebec," he said.

"We have been watching what is transpiring in Quebec and next week we'll have all the data and information to make some announcement in connection with our own findings in the textile industry. We hope to reach something on which to set a minimum wage scale for the industry and that will be a basis for the Board to proceed in other industries.

"We're not doing anything hastily. We want to be sure that what we do is economically sound. We'll study what Quebec is doing and proceed gradually."

Study Best and Base Industry.

The minister said considerable attention was being given by the Board to the boot and shoe and rubber industries and early action might be expected.

In the last two months, the Board had worked quickly to settle difficulties in 21 Ontario industries and agreements had been reached in all, he said.

The Labor Minister, who is Mayor of Brantford, is speaking at a dinner in his mayor's office preparatory to turning it over to his successor next Friday.

Brantford, Dec. 29 (CP) — E. J. Young, chairman of the Ontario Industry and Labor Board, said today minimum wage schedules for men would not affect workers in highly-paid, highly-organized trades.

"From what the newspapers tell me I think Quebec has done a good job," said Mr. Young. "I shall be interested to learn whether their hours of work will be uniformly applied in urban and rural centres. The matter is made difficult by the fact that, broadly, Ontario's scale is much higher than Quebec's. It would take Quebec some time to catch up and there is no intention of reducing wages here."

Gasoline Station Hold-up Interrupted by Policeman Who Fires at Fleeing Car

Fifty Policemen Join in Hunt Over Three Counties

ROBBERS FLEE TWICE

See Station Attendant at Victoria Looking at Bullet Holes

Toronto, Dec. 29 (CP)—Fifty police at noon were engaged in three counties for three robbers in a stolen motor car, the back punctured by police bullets, who fled from a gasoline station here when the appearance of a policeman interrupted a gasoline station hold-up.

Police of seven municipalities have been armed by all available provincial policemen. The hold-up car was last seen at 10.45 a.m., more than four hours after the attempted robbery, when it outspeeded Highway Traffic Officer Hodgson at Brampton.

Bullet Holes Noticed.

An hour and a half earlier a car had driven into Jim Williams' service station at Victoria, seven miles west of Brampton. Two men of the proprietor was about to fill the gasoline tank when he noticed bullet holes. Sensing his suspicions, the car drove away.

Brampton police were notified and authorities at Guelph, Orangeville, Acton, Cheltenham and other places were notified to be on the lookout. The stolen car bore 1937 license plates 234-H-Y and is owned by William Rowarth, Toronto, who is in Cobourg.

Three Men on Tonge Street.

The chase started after three men drove into a Yonge street gasoline station, bought ten gallons of gasoline and then told William Burnett, 21, attendant, to "sit down before you're knocked down". At this moment, Constable Donald Barton appeared at the corner. Two of the men rushed to the car. The third, police say, may have been a girl.

Radio Alarm Sent Out.

Constable Barton shot several times at the car as it pulled away from the station. A radio alarm was sent out. A few minutes later another gasoline station attendant, further north, said three men had appeared agitated and bought two gallons of gasoline. He gave police the number.

A few minutes later a police scout car sighted the stolen vehicle and contain the fugitives. Police lost sight of the car in Toronto traffic. Another scout car caught sight of it just north of the borough of Forest Hill but lost sight of it at Lansing.

Laboratory Keeps Insects Dormant For Future Use

Millions of winged bugs lie dormant within glass tubes and screened cages at the local Dominion Entomological Laboratory, their comatose condition controlled by just above freezing temperatures in the various cold rooms of the institution. They constitute Canada's largest, or perhaps the world's single collection of useful helpers which will be pressed into service next year in the forests of the Maritime Provinces, and in the orchards of the Niagara, the wheat fields of the West and the cornfields of Ontario. They are helpful parasites, deadly foe of even more deadly insect pests which annually cost the Dominion thousand millions of damage. With the awakening of Spring, further propagation work will be carried out by experts at the local laboratory, but all control with winter locking the landscape, only routine departmental work of testing, of clearing and replacing and planning for the year's job ahead is being undertaken, it is explained by Mr. A. B. Baird, in charge.

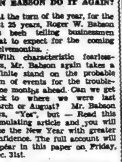
Option Would Cost Five Billion Dollars if Taken Up

WOULD STORE FOOD

London, Dec. 29 (CP)—The Daily Herald (Labor) today stated the British Air Defence Co-ordination Committee has approved in principle the option of the entire Canadian wheat crop, estimated at 400,000,000 bushels, food supply in time of emergency.

The Herald said the option had been engineered by the Board of Trade and Sir Thomas Inskip, Minister for the Coordination. It added that Whitehall experts and Canadian officials "have been in secret negotiation on the matter for some months."



The Herald said that should the option ever have to be taken up, it would cost Great Britain £100,000,000 ($5,000,000,000) together with £5,000,000 ($25,000,000) for the price of the option.

The newspaper's article continued: "This is part of a great scheme for importing and storing emergency supplies.

"Sir Thomas Inskip is working out details with the food (defence plans) department of the Board of Trade and the Air Raids Precautions Department."

OVERHEATED PIPES GAVE DEPT. RUN

WELLINGTON PIER MAY BE REPAIRED

Optimism regarding the consideration of the Federal Government to take action in repairing and constructing additions to the West Pier which juts out in Lake Ontario at the east end of the village is held by canning factory officials, fishermen and farmers of the village of Wellington, it was stated by a prominent resident of the lakeside community this morning.

Aftermath of the thousands of canned and other goods sent to Montreal for overseas shipment via Picton last season and the resulting high cost of haulage to the county seat is seen in the forwarding of a petition to the government for action to be taken in the repair and erection of the piers.

With canned goods numbering well into the hundreds of thousands of cases being packed in that part of the county and shipped to coastal points, cost of haulage could be reduced if a shipping point could be established at Wellington, it was thought by prominent canning factory men of the district. The petition resulted, which has been forwarded to the government.

GLASS BRICKS USED IN NEW LAC ADDITION

When finished it will be hailed as second to perhaps the world's best laboratory devoted to the investigation of food and seed propagation, and will contain many new embellishments in the scheme of building. Notable in the new building will be the scientific adaption of glass bricks which are being used throughout and marking the first use of its kind locally. Work is being carried out under the supervision of J. Arnold Thomson, local architect and designer.

The funeral services were conducted at Milford United Church on Wednesday afternoon, December 29th by Rev. Wm. McCord.

LATE MURCHISON WRIGHT (Madoc Township)

Eldorado, Dec. 29. (Special)—Death came with startling suddenness from a heart attack on Monday afternoon, Dec. 20th, to Mr. Murchison Wright, a very highly esteemed resident of Madoc Township, near Eldorado.

Deceased had been in his usual health and strength and had just come in from doing some work outside and passed suddenly away. He was staying at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. E. Hollands at the time, and his death came as a great shock to his family.

Mr. Murchison Wright who was in his 79th year, was born in Prince Edward Island on July 17th, 1858, and was the son of a local minister the late Peter and Cordelia Wright. His boyhood days were spent in Limerick Township and a great deal of his life up until the time of his passing was spent in Madoc Township.

In 1882 he was united in marriage to Miss Jane Shaw, who predeceased him 14 years ago. To this union were born five children, Mrs. William Henry, who predeceased him at the age of two years; Mrs. Minnie Little, at home; R. Holland (Ann); Mrs. D. E. Jones (Edith) of Edmonton and Mrs. John McAdams (Bertha), of Coppercliff. There are also eight grandchildren, two sisters, Mrs. Fred Vanderwoort, of Newburgh and Mrs. E. V. Smallman of Wyandotte, Michigan, survive to mourn the passing of a kind father and brother. And to these sorrowing friends the loving sympathy of a host of friends and neighbors is extended.

The funeral was held on Thursday, Dec. 23rd, from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. A. E. Hollands to the Methodist Church of which the late Mr. Wright had been a member for many years. A large crowd gathered to pay their last respects.

Rev. Mr. Bell was in charge of the pastor, Rev. R. B. Smith, who spoke words of comfort from the text Luke 24:6. "He is not here, but is risen." Assisting in the service was T. E. Kennedy of Madoc. The choir rendered "When the Roll is Called up Yonder" and "Over the Home Over There," both being special favorites of the deceased.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Ed Blakely, Clarence Farmer, Harold Robbins, Fred Chambers, Stanley Sanford and Albert Harvey.

Interment was made in the family plot in the Eldorado cemetery.

IF YOU DRINK DON'T DRIVE

Provincial Police And Traffic Officers On Patrol Highways

If you must drink on New Year's Eve don't drive a motor car—Warned Inspector Gardiner of the Provincial Police today. All highways and county roads will be thoroughly patrolled throughout this district by Provincial and Motor Vehicle Police on New Year's Eve and any indications of drunken driving will result in the offenders being arrested without extenuating circumstances being considered. Inspector Gardiner stated to the Ontario Intelligencer today.

"We do not wish to kill joys or spoil sports, but orders have been received from Provincial Police Headquarters to limit drunken driving to the minimum on New Year's Eve, when so many are welcoming the New Year. There will be quite a number of dances throughout the district and it is the suggestion of the Department, that persons who persist in drinking at this time, should travel in taxis and thereby eliminate any possible chances of unexpected trouble," further warned Inspector Gardiner, as he lauded the splendid conditions that prevailed on the highways and throughout Central Ontario during the Christmas festive season. "There was not a single major accident nor was any person seriously injured throughout the entire district at Christmas, which is a splendid record. We do not desire to have this record impaired to any degree during New Years," concluded Inspector Gardiner.

All New Year's leaves have been cancelled to Provincial Police officers through the entire District No. 8, comprising that territory from Bowmanville to Gananoque. Provincial Police and Motorcycle Patrolmen will patrol the roads in an effort to alleviate any traffic difficulties that may arise from any source of the New Year. Motorists are warned to govern themselves accordingly.

Coal miners work an average of 218 days out of a possible 306 each year.

Artists Delight Music-Lovers At Rotary Concert-Recital

Fine Performances by Mr. John Deacon, Tenor And Mrs. Deacon, Pianist at Program in Aid of Crippled Children's Fund

The concert recital, given by Rotarian John Deacon, tenor, and his wife, Mary Oconor Deacon, for the Crippled Children's Fund of the Belleville Rotary Club, brought a large company of music lovers and supporters of the Rotary to the Collegiate theatre on Tuesday evening, when the local artists presented a program of outstanding merit. Mr. Deacon who has had metropolitan concert experience and Mrs. Deacon who is an accomplished pianist, presented a great variety of numbers. The audience was warm in its appreciation of the artistry of Mr. and Mrs. Deacon. The artists graciously acknowledged the requests for encores. Mrs. Deacon not only acted as accompanist but also as piano soloist. As accompanist she was adept in creating the proper atmosphere background and understone to the vocal work of Mr. Deacon. She showed a fine interpretative ability and a gift of execution which made her work outstanding. Her technique as accompanist is very pleasing and bears the marks of careful study and mechanical perfection. In the third group of musical numbers, the program in a high rank as an interpreter and a master of the keyboard.

Mr. Deacon, who has been a favorite with Belleville music-lovers, since his debut, is a singer who has to study, opened his program with two fine classic numbers, the well-known "Cantique de Noel" by Adolphe Adam, and "Il Came Upon a Midnight Clear" by Willis. His third number in the group was the recitative and aria, "O Ruddier Than Hearis Ye Truly Seek Me" from Mendelssohn's Elijah. The Christian hymns were with a fervor in keeping with the spirit of the season while the oratorio number displayed Mr. Deacon's fine range of voice and his ability to interpret.

The second group turned to French, Italian and German numbers in sogs and airs, wherein he indicated his gifts for oratorio interpretation and his ability in lyric. The lyric numbers were Brahms' "Wie Melodien zieht es mir" and Schubert's "Der Jungling an der Quelle", which gave Mr. Deacon opportunity to revel in the lyric quality of his voice while his dramatic attainments were shown in the other numbers of this section and in his encores.

The third group of songs was one of the most delightful ever heard on the concert platform in Belleville. These and the other groups were all the favorites of Mr. Deacon and speak well for his sense of beauty and choice of songs. Here were Rubinstein's "Love's Old Sweet Song", Giannini's "Tell Me, Oh Blue, Blue Sky", finding a "Sylvelin" and Neumann's "The Bird of the Wilderness". There is sheer beauty of conception and tone in the compositions and Mr. Deacon was able to pass on to his hearers with the aid of the accomplishments of Mrs. Deacon, the spirit of these supremely lovely numbers.

While the accompanist's work was on a very high range throughout the program in some of these numbers, particularly in "Sylvelin's" many of the audience thought they heard some of the finest of her work. Both artists performed as without effort, ease being revealed in their entire recital.

Another feature was composed of five songs, some of them more recent and in the modern movement than the others, thereby giving the soloist the opportunity of proving his wide range in types of song.

The artists were very gracious in their response to encores and at the close Mr. Deacon sang "Mighty Lak a Rose", a Stephenson passage in which his dramatic power was indicated and a number of other songs, including "Lift Up Your Eyes".

Mr. Fred Douglas, president of Rotary, in a gracious speech after presenting Mrs. Deacon with a beautiful bouquet, and thanking Mr. Deacon and Mrs. Deacon for their artistic entertainment and work in the service of Rotary through this program, told of the cases of treatment to crippled children which had been given in the eighteen years of the club's activities in Belleville, the shortest case being for a month's treatment, and the longest for 1,141 days. He spoke in high terms of Mr. O. J. Symons' work as chairman of the Crippled Children's Fund and its philanthropies and of Mrs. Arthur Hirsten's work in assisting in fitting out children who had to undergo treatment.

CAPT. PALMATEER

chorus of the seagulls. Imperturbably calm, he was as much at home on the bridge of his ship with fourmasted combers sweeping over his vessel as he was in the quiet solitude of his home in Prince Edward County.

A Life At Sea.

For fifty-three years through the storm-swept waters of the Great Lakes; on the sun-drenched narrows of the St. Lawrence River, in the peace of the home harbors and the friendliness of far-away ports, Captain Palmateer guided the sturdy ships and men under his command without the loss of a single life or ship. His is a record that has long been the envy of many a freshwater skipper.

The love of the sea was inherent in this grand Old gentleman. He first saw the light of day at Point Traverse within sight and sound of the breakers that were to be his home for nearly three-score years. He grew up with the seagulls as his playmates, the waters of Lake Ontario near his home were his playgrounds, and as he grew to young manhood the tang of the water, the roar of white-crested breakers, and the lap of soothing waters were not to be denied.

Early Life at Sea

He soon went to sea and it was only a few years before his natural ability as a leader of men asserted itself. Promotion was rapid for this youngster, and only a short time after he first felt the taste of flying spray that he was placed in an executive position on board a lake freighter.

Here his exemplary Christian character soon made itself known. He endeared himself to the men under his command with his splendid traits of character and he soon became known as one of the best loved skippers on the Great Lakes.

Rescue at Bridge

Personal comfort was secondary to him while at the helm of his vessel. The men who served under him were his first consideration and time and time again he sacrificed himself in order that his men would not suffer any undue hardships. A notable instance of this occurred in 1880 when he leaped into a boiling sea to rescue his brother Johnson, who had been swept overboard when the boom of the vessel on which they were sailing suddenly jibed.

But age and the rigors of life aboard ship began to take their toll. At a few years he was retired from active life but he never relinquished his interests in matters of the sea or in the men that assisted in the ships.

Originated Mariners' Service

A few years ago he originated and instituted the Mariners' Service that is held annually at the Cherry Valley United Church. Gradually interest in this novel service grew until at the present time the crowds cannot be accommodated, five captains from all parts of the province together with representatives of the outstanding shipping firms of Ontario attend yearly the service that is usually held just before the opening of navigation. Here impressive tribute is paid to those who went down with their ships, and to those who carried on their perilous work.

The late Captain Palmateer was a devoted member of the United Church and since his retirement has worked faithfully in its interests. He will be widely mourned by a large circle of friends not only in his home county but throughout the province. He leaves to mourn his passing, one brother, Johnson Palmateer, Toronto, and a niece, Mrs. Bertha Head, with whom he resided. The last rites to this famous son of Prince Edward County will be held on Thursday at Cherry Valley United Church.

U. K. ENGINEERS

The paper said that unused ports of the south and west coasts of England, and in Scotland, will become receiving centres; reserves of canned food, big supplies of edible fats are to be built up and "provision for adequate granary accommodation is being worked out also."

"Storage will have to be in areas inaccessible to air attack since apart from direct bomb hits, wheat is easily contaminated by poison gas," the paper concluded.

Report Discounted.

Ottawa, Dec. 29 (CP)—Reports published in London today to the effect the British government had abandoned its option on Canada's entire wheat crop to establish a war emergency food reserve were discounted in Canada.

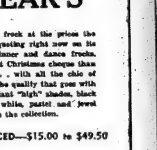
The fact seemed to be that no one in Canada had a monopoly on Canadian wheat production and no one was in a position to give an option on the whole thing.

Agriculture Minister James G. Gardiner, a member of the Canada Wheat Committee, said he knew of no such deal and had heard of no discussions looking towards any such deal.

At Winnipeg R. C. Findlay, Assistant Chief Commissioner of the Canadian Wheat Board, declared the Board had been in negotiation with the British authorities and knew nothing about any deal.

George Robertson, Secretary of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, at Regina said it was exceedingly doubtful if a deal of the sort described in the London report had been completed.

The wheat crop in a large part of Saskatchewan was a failure last year and as a result Canada's exportable surplus up to next July was placed by Mr. Robertson at only 43,000,000.



No individual or group in Canada now controls the bulk of the wheat crop. The three provincial wheat pools handle a good proportion of the crop but they operate for the most part like other elevator companies, selling as they buy from the farmers.

The Canadian Wheat Board which once held some 200,000,000 bushels of wheat has liquidated its large holdings and is now out of the market. It bought no wheat this year except a small amount as the instance of governments for use as seed next spring.

NO TRAFFIC OVER THE BAY ICE YET

Despite the cold weather of the past few weeks, the ice bridge which connects the township of North Prederickshurg with Deseronto circle of the winter season, although formed, is not safe yet for travel. So far this winter there has been no traffic over the bay, though ice has formed to a thickness of approximately twelve inches.

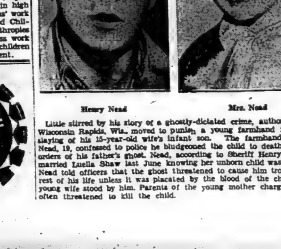
Scissor-by heavily armed kidnappers from the side of brilliantly lighted Christmas tree, little John Bryan, 3 years old, was released a few hours later when not his nurse, Miss Ruth Schroy were released a few hours later when the kidnap plan was foiled by the lad's father. The kidnappers demanded $1,500 ransom, but by the arrival home of the police the bandits drove away in two cars, opened fire on the fleeing cars and they separated. Apparently panicky when the conspiration failed to work him, the abductor guarding Nurse Schroy and the child pushed them from the car and fled. Neither was injured.



This trio of Canadian federal cabinet ministers are caught by the camera in Miami, Fla., far from the cold of Ottawa's winter as they buzz desks of their parliament building officer. They are Hon. W. D. Euler (LEFT), minister of trade and commerce; Hon. C. G. Howe, (CENTRE), minister of transport, and Hon. T. A. Crerar (RIGHT), minister of mines. The occasion was the first meeting of the season for the Canadian Club Hundred, of which the three politicians are members.

Ghost Caused Him to Slay Baby

Henry Nead

Mrs. Nead

Little stirred by his story of a ghostly-dictated crime, authorities at Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., moved to punish a young farmhand for the slaying of his 15-year-old wife's infant son. The farmhand, Henry Nead, in confessed to police he bludgeoned the child to death on the orders of his father's ghost. Nead, according to Sheriff Henry Becker, married Luella Shaw last June knowing her mother child was not his. Nead told officers that the ghost threatened to cause him trouble the rest of his life unless it was placated by the blood of the child. The young wife stood by him. Parents of the young mother charged Nead often threatened to kill the child.

OCEAN AIR SERVICE

Transoceanic air service in two years' time, that is in 1940 is the plan of the Imperial Airways on the route between Great Britain and Canada.

This will be the first of the regular ocean services on the North Atlantic. Success of the clipper service in the South Pacific is fairly well-established. Success of the Atlantic crossings will be much more important because of the greater volume of wealth and trade which exists on both sides of the ocean.

Dreams are at last to come true. Until lately they were not even visions, they were mere bits of imagination, just will o' the wisps which intrigued the mind.

With the Atlantic flight just about a day's cruise, the world will enter upon an era of new luxuries, never before dreamed of.

HOLIDAY ACCIDENTS

Death did not take a day off at Christmastime. It rode the highways and took a toll at that season of the year when tragedy is particularly poignant.

Warnings did not reduce the numbers of accidents in some centres though in the section hereabouts, the record was clear.

But the uncertainty that death may lurk in even innocent looking places on the highways because of some human fault or neglect is distressing, giving the highways a bad name.

Once again it is claimed that liquor had part in some of the accidents over the week-end. If that is true, the heaviest of burdens must fall on any persons found guilty of putting themselves into a state which endangers life and limb of self or others.

So far has this question of accidents proceeded that it has even been suggested that at the Yuletide season it may be necessary to clear the highways of all cars except those whose use is imperative. At the weekend it is clear enough that many persons used the train services rather than take the risk of having to use icy or slippery roads. Still with this reduction in traffic, more accidents occurred at this recent season than a year ago.

WARTIME FIGURE PASSES

Another of the Great War figures has gone, Newton W. Baker of Cleveland, Ohio. War Secretary under President Wilson in the task of organizing the United States on a war basis. A pacifist at heart he saw the duty in the supreme hour in the conflict of the war. Newton Baker was a strong advocate of the League of Nations which the United States did not enter. His work in making it possible for the United States to render a full contribution towards ending the war will not be forgotten in his native country and in the Allied lands.

THE PANAY INCIDENT

The Panay incident which stirred so much anxiety in the people of the western world has practically been closed with the definite assurance of the Japanese Government that there will be no repetition of such an incident in future and with other guarantees. Everyone remembers how much effort was put into the Spanish situation to prevent what looked like a possible explosion which might wreck the peace of the world. Tireless effort in many conferences has brought a sharp reduction in the tension, whether that is due to the fact that the tension in the Orient has eclipsed the tension in Spain or whether there is real success of the efforts at maintenance of non-intervention in Spain, despite the fact that nationals have been fighting in the civil war on both sides. The United States did not desire trouble with Japan but took a firm stand which led to the arrangement which has removed the strain of past weeks.

The bombing incidents may leave much to be desired in the way of explanation but peace has been preserved. Mussolini's newspaper yesterday suggested that the incident has been closed because it was realized that nothing could be done with Japan. Some may have fears that may be the case, but they know that at any rate another nation has not been added to the warring peoples of the earth. Entry of other nations would be a very serious matter for the world and might provoke what it is hoped will never take place if there is sufficient effective diplomatic strategy.

No one doubts that the Japanese military power means business in dealing with China and in gaining trade but how far she can go and will go no one knows. The western world has a great and profitable trade with the Oriental nations and what will become of this has to await the future. Trade however, has a way of finding a route and this may be the case again whatever the final disposition of China is.

TWILIGHT

Born 'mongst the mists and shadows
Sired by the kingly Night,
Heir to the Day's vast treasures,
Spawn of the Dark-and-Light.

A child 'mongst dewy pillows,
Whose laughter, yet unheard,
Is hushed by the night wind's mooning
And the cry of homing birds.

Silently sweet, and alluring,
Clad in your mystic light,
Shadowy child of yonderland,
Harbinger of the night.

You come with velvet footsteps,
As the sun's last slanting ray
Pales at the kiss of the night-cloud
To hasten the passing day.

TWO DOLLAR BILLS ARE NOT POPULAR

—they have been called on occasion "The Gambler's Curse" for some reason or other, it being assumed that professional gamblers like their money to come in ones instead of twos. However, most people find their only serious difficulty with money to be the lack of it and not much time is spent over the likes and dislikes of two-dollar bills. Some people claim that they dislike two-dollar bills because of the tendency to receive change for one dollar instead of two, business people being so accustomed to giving change for a one. In the old bar days short-changing was an art and two-dollar bills generally meant extra earning for the barkeep who no doubt considered reducing the purchasing power of his customers a good deed, especially when it bulged his own pocketbook. New two-dollar bills are causing some controversy and the Hamilton Spectator ruminates upon them in this vein which would indicate that the editor thereof has been pestered with a flood of new two-dollar bills and dislikes them to the point of refusing to accept them—on occasion. We would suggest that the Spec. editor put aside his two-dollar bills, few, or many, and drop them on the collection plate Sundays, a suggestion which we are sure will receive the hearty approbation of his spiritual adviser and all other brave souls who bottle in the pulpit to point the blameless life on earth and the laying up of treasures in heaven, where there are no moths and no taxes, or no expensive operations or other pesky nuisances which teeter up life's pathway. Listen to the plaint of the Hamilton Spectator man upon the subject of two-dollar bills for which most people cannot get enough:

> Hamilton merchants have been puzzled by the unprecedented circulation of the new two-dollar bills. They wonder, indeed, where they are all coming from.
> The new bill with its coloring of the French "deux" on the lower right-hand corner is a highly confusing one. It is frequently mistaken for the five or ten-dollar bill to which we are accustomed. To put it briefly, people do not like it, and there is no reason why they should. The average person prefers familiar and easily recognizable bills as well as coins.
> That has been shown many times in the past.
> In fact, the ancient Greeks were the first to notice that when money was depreciated or chipped, the dubious money whirled into circulation, and the more genuine coins lagged behind and were held. Money is today a much more complicated matter than it was then, but the well-known maxim that "bad money drives out the good" can still apply. In the case of our two-dollar bills their general unpopularity may not be terribly serious, but it is annoying. People want to get rid of them, and thus their circulation.
> There might, too, be in this a pointer for those who toy with fancy money theories, and forget that confidence and easy transferability are essential. The average citizen may not be vitally absorbed with economic intricacies, but he likes to be sure of his money. Merchants have often had striking examples of that.

"The new bill consfitutes a nuisance and there is no reason why it should be maintained in circulation."

"What's wrong?"
"I've been saying such nice things that she's getting conceited. If I quit she'll think I don't care for her any longer, and if I go on she'll think she's too good for me."

50 YEARS AGO

Dec. 29th, 1887.

Belleville has made a mighty forward stride during the year 1887. New buildings and additions that of any year since its incorporation. Following are some of the buildings constructed—Electric Light Power in connection with the gas works, $6,000; St. Thomas' Church, brick Sunday School on Church street, $1800; Bridge Street Methodist Church, extend May 12th, $23,000; John Ferin, brick business block, 2 stores on Front street, $4,000; J. W. Yeomans, brick block, 3 stories on Front Street, $4,500; Kyle House, $14,000; Roman Catholic Church in course of construction, estimated cost of stone masonary, $40,000; Remodelling G.T.R. station, $6,000; Geo. Brown, livery carriage factory, Moira Street, $1,500; Ontario Hall, school improvements, $2,200; Water Works buildings and brick dwelling, $4,000; many residences have been erected or running in cost from $500 to $4,000. The value of improvements by wards is as follows: Victoria Ward $12,250; Dumond Ward $8,600; Ketchenon Ward $40,"0; Baldwin Ward $66,800; Bleecker Ward $17,600; Coleman Ward $9,2"0; Murney Ward $27,-500.—Total $182,250.00. The total estimated cost of Bridge Street Methodist Church and the Roman Catholic Church was included in the improvements in Ketchenon and Baldwin Wards, but this can hardly be accepted as a fair representation of the money spent in improvements this season as much of the work was done last season and much remains to be done on the Roman Catholic Church. About $30,000 less than the total given will be the y per figure. Besides the figures given here $100,000 or more was spent on water works construction.

Holly and Peanuts

Ed. Note—This is the fourth of a series of letters written for The Ontario Intelligencer by Mr. Arthur Jones who is journeying to Florida.

Edenton, N.C.,
Dec. 15, 1937.

Safe Water

Baltimore, Md.—We were parked in the heart of this large American city one night lately. The parking was just a space set amongst tall buildings. Going for a pail of water in the early morning to a filthy building used for washing cars, a youthful negro stood beside the tap. The following took place:

Question—"Is this water safe to use?"

Negro—"Yes, Boss".

Question—"Where do you get the water?

Negro—"From the city. Boss.

Question—"Where does the city get it?"

Negro—"I don't know, Boss".

Question—"Will it give you the fever?"

Negro—"Ain't done nothin' to me."

I have chuckled over the negro's answer for many miles.

Holly For Sale

" Fredericksburg, Va.

From Fredericksburg to Richmond I pass a farm for miles between standing Southern Jack pine. Incidentally this is the wood the American hope to make newsprint from. In my opinion it will never make a clear white paper, but will run through the presses without tearing.

Apparently if this standing timber is penetrated lots of holly is available. Negroes stand along the pavement holding up branches of holly in the hope of a sale to passing cars. We passed many but were not sufficiently interested, until ahead, we saw a young negro with ten or twelve years old with a shawl over her head holding up holly. Behind her on the grass were a number of "bucks" sprawled about. Coming to a stop we got out of the car with great deliberation hoping to impress the darkies on the grass. Approaching the young negress we said:

"Hello, there what are you trying to sell me?"

Negress—"Holly, Suh."

(An intense expression of bewilderment was upon her face and her eyes were rolling about and looked to me like two pure white billiard balls with dark spots in the centre.)

Question—"It sure has lots of berries on it."

Negress—"Yes, Suh".

Question—"What do you charge for a bunch."

Negress—"A dime suh."

Then came the smile showing a beautiful natural set of white teeth as even as they could be. I handed over the money and stood staring. Darkies on the grass were perfectly quiet. Her skin was creamy and as smooth as satin. Her eyes sparkled and she must have been in perfect health.

Peanuts

Edenton, N.C.,
Dec. 17, 1937.

Suffolk some twenty miles north of Edenton, is I am told, the place where the largest market for peas (as they speak of them), is in the State of Virginia. Planters have their large warehouses and factories along with several other concerns. It is a peanut town completely. I interviewed a farmer in the country store a few miles out. He told me peanuts, Irish potatoes and corn were the principal crops. Average size of farm 75 acres. Owned and entirely. A good crop weighed some 1,200 pounds. Peanuts came out of the ground in October and are stacked in the fields around stakes to dry and look like large round bee hives. We had some fine specimens of Irish potatoes in the car grown around Conway soon; cobblers, smooth and free from scabs. We took the farmer over to the car and gave him four large ones.

"How do they look?" We asked. They looked good to him as his face lighted up with delight.

Sincerely,
Arthur Jones.

Christmas came this year, as usual, even to the remote lighthouses that dot the eastern coast of United States from Maine to New York. Capt. Wiggin (above) is seen again at entry of the Merry Saint. He made his ninth annual flight over the coastal outposts dropping Christmas packages which could not be delivered in any other way since most of the lighthouse dwellers are isolated for the greater part of the winter. This picturesque view, taken from an accompanying aeroplane, shows the captain over Boston light.

GENERAL STRIKE

Mobile guardsmen moved into the capital from the provinces. They joined the blue-caped gendarmerie guarding vital centres of the capital while the strike mushroomed.

Troops of "the military government of Paris", the army region surrounding the metropolis, were ordered to remain in readiness at their barracks.

Will Maintain Order.

"Chautemps is determined to maintain order," a government spokesman announced.

The overnight declarations and strikes of transportation, water, gas and electricity workers were backed by waiters, chauffeurs, cleaners and garbagemen and some municipal office employees.

Officials said the population might be requested to reduce water consumption because of the strike continued. Unemptied garbage pails lined the capital's quarrel streets.

Army trucks continued to supply the central food markets and deliver newspapers in connection with the persisting strike of bread drivers.

Employees of other workers were still idle in strikes at the Paris Goodrich Rubber Factory and at grocery warehouses.

Many Traffic Jams.

Fleets of taxicabs and lines of private cars pressed into service to carry Parisians to work over heavy traffic jams on main thoroughfares.

Strike Is Protest.

The public service strike was a protest against a proposal to reduce automatic wage increases for the lower-salaried municipal employees — a 1938 budget economy move.

William Bertrand, Under-Secretary of Public Works and Premier Chautemps' chief assistant, said:

"M. Saint-Geneat, one signer of the strike order and secretary-general of the Chautemps Union, who himself handed me that order—was still in Moscow a few days ago."

Rightist newspapers were quick to link Bertrand's statement with the allegations of Eugene Deloncle, accused leader of the Rightist Cagoule (Cowls) or Secret d'Action Revolutionaire—that a frustrated Communist revolution had been set for early November, with widespread strikes as part of the plan. He said the plot had been nipped by the army.

Premier Chautemps refused to receive representatives of striking public service workers until after work has been resumed. He said that if the strike would spread to the provinces.

Condemnation of the sudden and crippling labor action was general, even leftist papers joining in the criticism.

Common Infections Of Nails

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IN A LARGE series of patients presenting abnormal conditions of the finger or the nails the commonest one were due to fungus infection, the second commonest due to infection of the nail bed with staphylococci or pus germs, and the next commonest due to eczema or psoriasis. So it will probably be most profitable, in a study of nail diseases, to begin by considering commonest manifestations.

The commonest form of fungous infection of the nail is that due to ringworm. This affects the nail slowly and almost never the surrounding skin. It is always dry and rough and low or with no gloss, rarely all the nails of the fingers and toes. The nail is dry and brittle and rough, having shed the greater part of its external layer of cells. It often gets striated and has a worm-eaten appearance.

The nail is thickened, but not often entirely lost, but unless the progress of the condition is stopped it is refused to a dry, striated stump situated near the nail wall at the root.

When he sees nails with such an appearance, the physician should take shavings from the nail and after soaking these shavings in 40 per cent caustic potash solution, look for the threads of the fungus under the microscope.

Treatment of ringworm of the nails must be carried out with great patience because these infections do not yield readily. After having tried wet dressings with iodine, and bathing the nails with sodium hypochlorite and acetic acid, Dr. Pusitello, to my surprise, has gone back to the old-fashioned tincture of iodine combined with fractional doses of X-ray. The tincture should be rubbed into the nails with a stiff brush, and the dressing kept in place with adhesive tape.

Yeast Infection

Another form of infection is due to yeasts, quite different from the ringworm infections, are wet; there is a wet granulation, and also the skin around the nail is likely to be involved. Housewives, dishwashers and washerwomen are particularly likely to be involved by natural means. The diseased patches usually begin at the edge of the nail plate and burrow under it appearing as creamy or oval white patches. The treatment is the same as for ringworm, but the use of sodium perborate, made into a paste with a few drops of water and thoroughly worked under the nail fold with a cotton tipped toothpick, can be used as a variant.

Simple pus infection of the skin around the nail—paronychia—is the second commonest form of nail infection. It can be seen on examination of such a nail that the skin is involved first and the nail only secondarily. There is redness of the skin, and on pressure it is almost always possible to squeeze out a little pus from around and under the skin edges. Many nails with splinters, is usually the real origin.

Treatment with various antiseptic is the best. Wet saturated boric acid dressings in the acute stage, usually clear these diagnoses while alkalys up and prevent unsightly deformities.

During 1937, more than 10,000,000 acres of small grain, such as barley, oats, rye, and wheat, were planted in the United States.

CHEST COLDS

Relieve Their Misery This Proved Way

WHEN there's a cold to treat—especially if it's a chest cold—that's no time to experiment. Rely on the mixture with the treatment that has been doubly proved—Vicks VapoRub.

Here's What To Do: It's best to stay in bed at the first sign of cold. Rub briskly, drink plenty of water, and keep warm. Then, regular, apply your dependable Vicks VapoRub without delay.

VapoRub has been proved by millions for its more than 3 times than any other medication of its kind—either proved by the largest clinical tests ever made on colds. (Full facts in every 2 VapoRub package.) Only Vicks gives you proof like this.

VapoRub is direct—no stomach upsets. Just massage it on throat, chest, and back. Then—to make its 4-fold action internal—take just even teaspoonful—spread a thick layer on the chest as directed, and cover with a warmed cloth.

Its Long Waiting for Relief to Begin—

Almost before you finish rubbing, you begin to feel warm and comfortable as VapoRub gets to work direct through the skin like a poultice. At the same time its medicated vapors, released by the body heat, are carried direct to the irritated air-passages with every breath.

This double action loosens phlegm, relieves irritation and coughing —helps break local congestion. And long after Ronald Colman and Madeleine Carroll in "The Prisoner of Zenda" at the Bells today only.

Sandra said, "Do you remember when I was on The Flash I talked to you on the phone about you and a contemplated divorce?"

"I remember something of the kind tentatively," he believe you said Marsha Ancell planned to divorce Anthony."

"Yes. And I told you I had been asked to keep who was listed as co-respondent.... I had no choice of course, but to give up my job—or not. I did not accept the assignment. But before I could do anything about it, I went out with Bryant on the Water Bug, and I haven't been back to The Flash since."

Enid frowned. "Must we go through these preliminaries, Sandra? If you have something to say——"

"I've just had a call from the man I worked for on The Flash, Enid. The man who knew the name of the correspondent and that they are going to get it. Sorry, if you know anything about The Flash you know they will spread that name in banner headlines across the front page in screaming headlines."

In the little silence Enid's face revealed nothing at all. She stared at Sandra with cold, critical eyes and said, "Why have you felt it necessary to tell me this?"

Sandra thought. She's hard. She's not in the least like the woman she always known as my mother." She said, finally, "Because I felt I owed it to you to tell you." Enid's eyes narrowed in speculation. Then it vanished and she said, "I think I should be the one to owe me, Sandra, is confidence in my moral integrity. I am sorry you could not bring yourself to those who compose my family. You owe me that confidence. I am sorry sense of duty could owe a parent who has always lived in strict conformance to the narrow codes or conventional society. You've made it very clear these last months that you are not or your love nor your respect. You're assuming responsibility for my conduct and you've left me in doubt as to your disapproval."

She thrust a hand out for the brass door-handle. "I can't see that you're managing your life so well that you can afford to tell me how to live mine, and I think I might benefit if you gave up trying."

For a prolonged moment there was no perceptible movement in that small room, no sound but that of Enid's quickened breathing.... Then Enid turned her back on Sandra, opened the door and went out.

Sandra stared at the empty doorway, hearing Enid's voice echoing through her consciousness. "What you owe me is confidence in my moral integrity, in my sense of decency and loyalty to those who compose my family."... Her mother could not have meant them put directly to Martha Ancell who was preparing to divorce her husband so that he could marry Enid. And then another voice came back to her. Matt Stanley's. "Why don't you run over to see Fannie? She's in a spot and she needs somebody. And she could give you all the details...."

Matt had said Fannie would be home tomorrow, but suddenly she knew she would not wait until tomorrow. She must see Fannie at once, tonight!

She went to her room, pulled on a light coat matched up a hat and moved quietly along the hall. Chet was where she had left him in the living room, one open newspaper hiding all save his long legs and his hands. Poor Chet—always the one who would say that of Chet and feel the very real compassion for him that prompted it. He was fine and good and lovable, but in some way she couldn't explain she was so helpless, so like a little boy who, trying to extricate himself from a difficulty entangles himself in another. He had been so pleased to think he had found a way to repudiate his obligation to Ancell—not realizing that he had, in effecting that escape, committed her to an obligation hardly less exacting. Perhaps if she told him, now, at once, that she did not love Stephen, he would be able to find another solution. But with the first step toward the living room door, she knew she could not do it. Abruptly she turned back and hurried toward the elevator.

The lieutenant was locked in a traffic jam in the narrow street. Enid picked up the phone and talked to the chauffeur. He said he was afraid they would be held up for some time. He thought perhaps he should walk ahead and investigate. "Very well," Enid said, "and hurry."

Five minutes later the chauffeur came back. He had walked ahead and had turned into a one-way street of parked cars with only a few taxicabs moving about to turn into the avenue. Two of the cars were double parked and there was no chance of moving until a wrecker arrived.

The chauffeur had opened the door as he spoke. Enid stepped out. "I'll walk," she said. "It's only a few blocks. I'll call the garage when I want you to come for me."

Presently Enid was on Fifth Avenue. Selecting a taxicab, she was to remember she had not told the chauffeur where she was going. She hailed a cruising cab with herself for letting "the child" irritate her so, she had felt that the echo was inevitable and she had said, abruptly, "Take me to a store and get me a box of aspirins." And when the chauffeur had come out of the drug store and handed her the small tin and package, she had accepted them and snapped in answer to his very natural question "Fifth Avenue, please." As he must know she was going to call on Mrs. Anthony Ancell. Which he did know, of course, and he was still wondering why the lady should want to be taken supposed to do after they reached the avenue. when Enid decided to walk and let him follow—and why she could get back—and then get directly to Martha Ancell who was preparing to divorce her husband so that he could marry Enid. And then another voice came back to her. Matt Stanley's. "Why don't you run over to see Fannie? She's in a spot and she needs somebody. And she could give you all the details...."

Matt had said Fannie would be home tomorrow, but suddenly she had said on the phone, I've arranged a little informal program, Enid. You'll be thrilled. Come up between eight-thirty and nine. I promise not to keep you long." And though Enid knew Martha had never forgiven her for Anthony's persistent attentions to his partner's wife, she had not found it in her heart to reject this friendly gesture.

That Martha knew of her recent meetings with Anthony did not occur to Enid. And if she had thought of this, she would have attached no importance to it since those meetings had been of a strictly business nature.

She was walking slowly now.... Seeing Martha over those difficult months since Chet had come to her room one evening and told her, haltingly, that he loved everything Enid—including my credit. It isn't easy to tell you this, but I can't possibly open the Miami place." It isn't ours any longer. We don't own an inch or a foot of property, and I can't borrow enough to pull us out of it."

What had troubled her that night and through the weeks that followed was not so much that they had been comfortably rich and were now pitifully poor, but that Chet seemed to have lost his grip. He had been so sure of his ever-while he talked and paced the floor his hands shook and his voice carried a note of hysteria that was so unlike the Charles Brooke she had married that she had felt refused to admit even the possibility of failure.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Gangway"

For sheer joyousness, bright humor, and unadulterated gaiety, seems it's pretty hard to beat Jessie Matthews in her newest musical vehicle "Gangway" now playing at the Capitol until Thursday nite with Sonnie Hale. Love Again" has Jessie Matthews been so advantageously cast, but in a picture made to order for her, and she takes advantage of every opportunity to display to the full her "dancing divinity."

The story of "Gangway" is more ingenious than one expects from musicals, is almost always the case, well away from the beaten track of the "show within the show" idea concept so as to give every opportunity to Jessie for the songs and dances for which she is famous.

Jessie of course has a natural flair for the night club type, and remember for a long time her takeoff on American gang "moulls." Her Pandemian, as a crook with a sentimental streak and a yearning for the stars, went off with the comedy burden with his usual ease and assurance. He is one of the most trustworthy performers on the screen today, and it's always a pleasure to see him.

The story of "Gangway" deals with Sir Seymour Hicks—Scott Matthews, who is mistaken by Scotland Yard for Fred Conway, a mobsters for the Internationally notorious Jewel-thief, Sparky Barry Mackay, is the English aristocrat who turns "flatfoot," loses her to Conway, and falls in love with her in the process. Nat Pendleton, Kinnon Nash, in order to get the Big Apple into Madison, and then saves her from the clutches of Conway to the tune of machine-guns, and to the accompaniment of a thunderous ocean-liner. And from the beginning to end, the customers get their money's worth.

Penrod and Sam

Booth Tarkington's classic young adventure-seekers "Penrod and Sam" are in town this week-end, again the immortality achieved by Mark Twain's lads, Huckleberry Finn and Tom Sawyer—this time on the same program as smash hit "Stella Dallas."

Now, just because this movie is about kids, don't be grownup think it is intended for juvenile audiences only.

It has plenty of thrills as well as laughs, and Pa and Ma as well as the youngsters will get a kick out of it.

Billy Mauch, astonishing new boy actor, is responsible for a tremendous as the drummer boy in "Stella Dallas Angel," and again as young Andy Hardy in "Judge Hardy's Children" starred as Penrod. Henry Wadsworth, Jr., and juvenile films, is excellent as Sam.

New Year Eve

Tickets are now on sale at the box office for our gala New Year's Eve Party at the Belle. There will be balloons, hats, novelties and noisemakers. Dancing will be held to capacity. On the screen meet the man behind the voice that thrills the nation, Kenny Baker and hear your favourite radio star Now Year's Eve. Secure your tickets early.

AT THE BELLE

"The Barrier" and "Beg, Borrow or Steal"

"The Barrier," romance of the North Woods based on the famous novel by Rex Beach, is announced for Friday and Saturday. It will be presented at the Belle tomorrow and Friday, matinee daily.

"The Barrier," one of the most thrilling stories ever written by the master of outdoor fiction, Rex Beach, has been made into a motion picture by producer Harry Sherman.

It took seven long years of negotiations before Sherman could get the screen rights to the book, which he considers the best material for his outdoor film that Beach has ever turned out.

"The Barrier," is the story of a romance between a West Point graduate on duty in Alaska (James Ellison) and a young Alaskan girl (Jean Parker), who is believed to be half Indian. An absorbing photo-play los in the way the two overcome the handicap of mixed blood and work out their happiness together.

In the cast of "The Barrier" are Leo Carrillo, Otto Kruger, Robert Barrat, Andy Clyde and Sara Haden.

"Beg, Borrow or Steal"

Chalk up an "A" in comedy for "Beg, Borrow or Steal" the second feature attraction on the same program. It is one of the laugh hits of the season.

With a cast running over with comedians, the picture offers Frank Morgan an excellent vehicle for his first big-part under the banner of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Florence Rice and John Beal are featured with him.

"Beg, Borrow or Steal" is the story of an American bunk-steerer in Paris who promotes a cheaun artist's daughter into a duchess, and bluff with his family in America and in the end gets her disinherited in the manner to which she is not accustomed.

Surrounded by crooks posing as nobility, Morgan gets into one difficulty after another, but finally all is reached when the girl, being a daughter of a duke, finds the type applecart completely and marries the wrong man.

"Beg, Borrow or Steal" is mad and merry fun, with Morgan, Reginald Denny, Geores Givot, E. E. Clive, Herman Bing, Cora Witherspoon, Eric Blinden, Janet Beecher, Tom Rutherford and Harlan Briggs.

"Prisoner of Zenda"

Roland Colman, lovely Madeleine Carroll and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., are featured in the most exciting romance story ever told, "The Prisoner of Zenda," now in its fourth and final day at the Belle. Next day of the day, and a funny Popeye cartoon precede the feature.

New Year's Eve Show

Plan now to attend the Belle New Year's Eve Frolic, that commences Friday evening at 11:30 p.m. The doors opening at 11 p. m.

It will be the gayest show of the year, crammed with surprises, novelties and souvenirs for everyone.

Probably the finest screen attraction ever announced for a New Year's Eve Frolic is announced for presentation. Sparkling from start to finish with a merrily romantic story, a group of spectacular dances and captivating Gershwin tunes. Fred Astaire, George Burns and Gracie Allen's new starring vehicle "A Damsel in Distress" will be a strong contender for top popularity honors this year. A grand array of short treats will also be presented on the same program.

One of crime in the United States is approximately $10,000,000 annually.

PRINCESS MARGARET ROSE

PRINCESS LOUIS

The former ruling houses of Germany and Russia will be united by the marriage of Prince Louis Ferdinand, son of the former crown prince of Germany, and grandson of the ex-Kaiser, and Princess Kyra, 18-year-old daughter of Grand Duke Kyrill, of Russia, (both shown) ABOVE. The engagement was scheduled for announcement subject to consent of former Kaiser Wilhelm. It is understood that Prince Louis would not, by Doorn, Holland, to confer with the exiled monarch. Princess Kyra is a great granddaughter of Queen Victoria of England, and a cousin of King George VI, whose permission also was necessary for the marriage.

Boy Friend Supports His Family

By VIRGINIA LEE

I CONFESS I am completely puzzled by the problems of some of my young friends.

A while ago a girl I have known since she was a small child came to me, telling me of her engagement. The only blemish on her happiness is the fact that with the father dead and her fiance the oldest in a family of children, he has been practically supporting his mother and the younger ones, and does not know how he can withdraw his financial help to make a home of his own.

The youngest of the family now is old enough to graduate from high school, the others are working. The mother is quite frail and so could hardly support herself. The youngest ones should, it seems, take their turn at supporting the mother, and release the older brother, but they also are engaged and want to wed, and that leaves the youngest, who must find work soon. And the youngest so often gets "stuck" with the parental support—which hardly seems fair.

I don't know how this young couple will work things out. The logical thing would be either for the two to marry and go to live with the mother and the youngest, leaving the others free. Or for them to wed and set up their own home, leaving the others to do likewise in turn, and then all help when the youngest—who is a girl—ends to marry.

This young couple hasn't asked my advice, but I have been trying to figure a way out in my own mind.

WONDERING DOT'S problem is that her boy friend works for his dad and never gets a salary but just "charges" what he needs. She wonders how it will work out, providing they marry.

I don't believe it would be a very satisfactory arrangement. Even a small salary would be better, if you don't have some regular income, you will always be subject to criticism from in-laws that you are extravagant, or something. I am afraid, also, of some misunderstanding of the amount you are allowed. Or there is bargaining. It seems to me, to plan an intelligent budget, Money is a serious source of discord in any family, and unless your fiancee's people are unusually intelligent and broad-minded, it may create a very unhappy problem.

If both families — you and he, and his parents—are very tolerant and co-operative, it might work out—but I have my doubts of the arrangement. It leaves too much room for argument.

Relish Tray Is Important

ASSORTMENT OF DAINTIES SERVED AT MEALS

Spiced apple balls center relish plate, with celery curls, red in roses, olives, pickles, jelly.

By MARY MORTON

FOR THE New Year's dinner of the buffet supper during the holidays, the relish tray is an important part of the menu. It can be varied to suit your household budget or your circumstance and combining the foods available.

The relish tray shown contains spiced crab apples, radish roses, olives, pickles, cranberry jelly and spiced apples. Their attractive arrangement on the tray adds spice as well as color to any meal.

Little balls about the size of crab apples, cut from large, firm, tart apples with a French ball cutter, stuck with cloves and cooked until tender and clear in a syrup of fruit juices and sugar spiced with stick cinnamon, supply something new for this relish platter. They are easily prepared by the following brief recipe:

SPICED APPLE BALLS — Pour firm tart apples into balls with French ball cutter; three-fourths cup orange juice, one-fourth cup lemon juice, one cup granulated sugar, one cup water, whole cloves, two sticks cinnamon. Stick each ball with three whole cloves. Make a syrup of the fruit juices, sugar and water, add the stick cinnamon and boil gently for five minutes. Add the apple balls and simmer gently, turning balls frequently, until apples are clear and tender. Skim out balls, place in a bowl, add the syrup and chill before serving.

Canapes are very popular served before the formal dinner. A plate of them is an always welcome addition to any buffet Sunday evening supper too. Following are some suggestions for canapes:

Pork sausages broiled with salted almonds at each end served as garnish to canape platter. Roquefort cheese creamed with butter spread on bread-rolled and toasted. Potato chips spread with anchovy paste. Sardines creamed with mayonnaise grated onion and lemon juice spread on melba toast. Ground chicken and almonds seasoned with new onions and moistened with mayonnaise. Spread on toasted toast strips. Small circles of white bread with chopped watercress and slice of cucumber.

Dishes for Sunday Night Supper

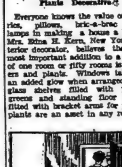
Corn, tomato and macaroni casserole is one answer to the problem of what to serve for Sunday night for supper guests. Top it off with chocolate fruit pudding, and you can't go wrong. Following are the recipes:

CORN, TOMATO AND MACARONI CASSEROLE — Two cups corn, canned or fresh; one onion, minced; two eggs, two tablespoons butter, four sliced tomatoes, one pound ground beef, one-half cup tomato juice, one teaspoon minced one-half teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, macaroni (or mashed potato). Add eggs, crumbled onion, green pepper, butter, salt and pepper to meat and mix well. Pack meat on bottom of well-greased casserole. Put one-half of the corn over the meat. Place sliced tomatoes over the corn and then more corn on top of the tomatoes. Top with mashed potatoes or cooked macaroni. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees F. 45 minutes to one hour. Strips of bacon may be placed over the top if desired. This may be prepared in advance and stored in refrigerator food compartment until ready to bake.

CHOCOLATE FRUIT PUDDING—Two tablespoons gelatin, one cup cold water, one pint milk, one cup one-half squared chocolate, one-half teaspoon vanilla, one cup raisins, one-half cup currants, three egg whites, one cup sugar, three-fourths cup dates, one-half cup nuts, salt. Soak gelatin in cold water about five minutes. Put nuts with fruit in same pan. When hot, add chocolate which has been melted with part of the milk and a little of the milk added to make a smooth paste. Add soaked gelatin and cook slowly. When mixture begins to thicken, add vanilla and nut meats. Fold in beaten whites of eggs. Turn into a wet mold decorated with nut meats and raisins. Chill in food compartment of refrigerator. Unmold and garnish with whipped cream or currant jelly sauce.

SALLY'S SALLIES

To possess chaos women must have a graceful carriage, but a man must have a new automobile.



ON THE LIFE OF A MAN

Like to the falling of a star,
Or as the flights of eagles are,
Or like the fresh spring's gaudy hue,
Or silver drops of morning dew,
Or like a wind that chafes the flood,
Or bubbles which on water stood:
Even such is man, whose borrowed light
Is straight called in and paid to night.
The wind blows out, the bubble dies,
The spring entombed in autumn lies,
The dew dries up, the star is shot,
The flight is past,—and man forgot.

Plants Decorative

Everyone knows the value of palms, pillows, bric-a-brac and lamps in making a house a home, but Miss H. Kern, New York interior decorator, believes that the most important addition to a home is color and an artistic grouping of flowers and plants. Windows take on an added glow when arranged with glass shelves filled with potted greens and standing floor lamps with bracket arms for potted plants are an asset in any room.

Many items from are started by leaving the tender tops on vegetables when the housewife has finished trusting or is interrupted. It is merely like this, to warn women to put into the habit of discriminating, for the at the slightest hesitation such as someone coming to the door, the phone ringing, setting children's questions, etc.

New Prints Are Lovely In Designs and Colors

USED FOR RESORT FROCKS

Twin peasant print frocks for resort wear, with narrow ribbon sashes, straw bonnets, velvet ribbon ties.

By LISBETH

WEEE EVER prints were lovely! I don't care what the material used as a base for the design—silk, linen or cotton—I never remember more beautiful colors or more delightful designs.

This refers to the prints used for house coats, dresses and little inexpensive house dresses, as well as the more formal frocks for afternoon and evening. The gayest of floral designs are shown on red brown, blue and black backgrounds. While doing my Christmas shopping recently, I came across so many, they fairly dragged the coins from my pocketbook.

These quaint little peasant frocks for southern wear were modeled recently in a showing of southern resort fashions given by a group of New York shops for a philanthropic purpose, the benefit of the Goddard Neighborhood Center, it was, and sponsored by Col. Henry L. Doherty, president of the Florida Year Round clubs.

Peasant Types for Ice

They are made of embroidered cotton in Wedgwood design. Narrow black velvet ribbon is tied about the waist, the ribbon also being used as a trimming for the poke bonnets of rough straw the models are wearing. These prints are also to be had in various pastel tones.

The undoubted peasant theme of these twin cotton frocks is repeated wherever one looks—even to the beach and ice enclosure. For skating and snowplaying use this peasant theme in their smartest costumes, especially the skaters from across the water. And as a novelty, let me mention that peasant aprons that tie on around the waist, were favorites with recent Christmas shoppers.

Frocks Button Down Front

The most popular type of house dress done in gay print is the coat frock, that buttons down the front. Some of them have pleated skirts—not very wide, but giving a new look to the dress, especially when the same dress has tiny puffed sleeves, and standing collar cut down to a V in the front.

"Bright prints" are featured in the cotton crepe in the slightly higher priced group, and some inexpensive ones in the cotton flannel. For fall festivities. Guaranteed to add charm that will not only delight you, but others about you. The third perfume is a glorious, heady scent that is a wonderful complement to your luxurious furs and elegant gowns this season.

In most of the shops, of course, I found all of your old favorites in the perfume line. But they are newly packaged and all dressed up.

New Odeo Intrigue

NEW CONTAINERS FOR PERFUME ARE EYE-FILLING, SAYS BEAUTICIAN

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty"

ONE OF THE loveliest of the new perfumes that I encountered in my tour of the shops before the holidays comes in an intriguing flat, slightly-oval, bottle which, the box is smart and modern in design, and the kind of perfume within, with its tall, cut glass stopper, is pretty enough to grace even a queen's vanity table.

As to the perfume itself, it comes in three odors. There is a very light scent for morning and street wear. Then for formal sports, too, for your perfume should be right on such occasions. Then there is a delightful heavy scent to match your afternoon frock for tea, bridge and frothy light talk at social festivities. Guaranteed to add charm that will not only delight you, but others about you. The third perfume is a glorious, heady scent that is a wonderful complement to your luxurious furs and elegant gowns this season.

gold, contains a tiny vial of exquisite perfume. It is called the "royal scent" and is of royal blue silk, complete with pull cord and gold ring to hold the perfume bottle firmly in place.

Because of its petiteness and its eye-allure a money bag of this type is liked to tuck into your evening bag. As to the perfume itself, it is a fresh, spicy odor that, because of its ingredients, reacts differently on each skin to which it is applied. As a result, it does not smell the same on any two individuals.

If Santa failed to bring you some perfume and your stock is low, look at some of these skin to beauty and charm.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Hand Lotion

Jeanette: An effective hand lotion can be made of three parts of rosewater and one part of glycerine. Equal parts of rosewater and glycerine also form an excellent hand lotion to correct the dry condition of the skin so prevalent these cold days.

Buttermilk

Marcia: Buttermilk is not the least bit fattening. In fact, you may consume as much as two quarts of it a day, if you so desire.

Mouth Wash

Babs: An excellent mouth wash can be made by dissolving one-fourth teaspoon of borax, one-fourth teaspoon of powdered orris and one-fourth teaspoon of salt in a glass of tepid water.

Cultivate Sympathy In Child

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

IN THIS cold, hard, mechanical world, our children may not get much cultivation of their finer emotions of tenderness, pity, sympathy. But there are ways to help children to learn to take it and be stoical, we may fail to help them to acquire sufficient sympathy for the suffering and sorrow of others.

Although we might properly frown upon the rather primitive expressions of sympathy of the groups in remote places of our country such as the mourners weeping for one another at funerals, we should also realize that these same folk do have a feeling of sympathy for one another as expressed in their habit of going to the assistance of one another in times of sickness, death or other disasters.

Without too great stress upon the feelings of the young child, he ought, perhaps, to come into touch with some of the sufferings and sorrows of other people. When our children were very young we tried to shield them from such. We think now that we probably did wrong.

Commendably, some teachers at school have their children write letters to classmates who are ill at home or in the hospital; even to make some small sacrifice and to giving a penny or two each to buy flowers to be taken to some other child in the hospital.

In a certain school the third grade children worked out a program whereby one of them, taking turns, would read about every day to a blind old man in the neighborhood. Such might be done for any adult bed-ridden, aged or local, pecialized in some other way, yet safe and able to enjoy the ministry from children. See how the finer feelings of these children will be nurtured—good moral education. We parents also might work along these lines with our growing children.

Teacher May Help

Suppose you are a teacher of a fourth grade in a school or Sunday school. Ida Brooks is absent. Her mother is being buried today. Would it not be well for your children, if you would talk to them about what they can do when Ida returns to help her forget her sorrow? You can lead the children to see that their mere no remarks to Ida about the loss of her mother, but should strive hard to help her have a good time on the playground and feel that every one is her friend there and in the classroom.

Pets have value for cultivating sympathy and, especially, mechanical when the child learns to take responsibility for their proper care and feeding. Then their control certain excellent stories which may help children to express their feelings in children. Most of all, we parents should help our little and older feelings in ourselves and exercise them toward other people.

Poems That Live

GOOD-NIGHT

Good-night. Good-night. Ah, good night
That wraps thee in its silver light.
Good-night. No night is good for me
That does not hold a thought of thee.
Good-night.

Good-night. Be every night as sweet
As that which made our love complete.
Till that last night when death shall be
One brief "Good-night" for thee and me.
Good-night.

Satin Pyjamas Intriguing

By Central Press

MOST WOMEN have been inspired by some motive whether they have worn them for sleeping garments, for lounging, for house dresses—a fad that has somewhere gone out, thank goodness—or what not, one usually feels quite smart in this fashion which so long was man's alone.

Since these have also swung definitely to the "womanly woman" theme, however, we do not hear quite so much about pajamas. Negligees, house coats, boudoir gowns, soft and drippy, have achieved the centre of the stage. And nightgowns have grown more and more like evening gowns, and we have almost eclipsed their more mannish sisters.

However, when and if is said and done, pajamas still have a large place in women's fashions, and those worn by pretty Olivia de Havilland would intrigue any woman." They are in white satin, with wide trousers, and the knee-length coat has spaghetti trim at each side of the collar.

Style Whimsies

Rhinestone clip brooches in dragonfly shapes continue to be very popular.

The peasant influence still is very popular with the younger set. For instance, a scarf crossed shawl fashion over the breast and tucked into the sash-belt, or a scarf worn over the head and tied under the chin.

White millinery is being shown for immediate wear with black. Small shapes with black veils are effective in quilted crepe or pleated fabric.

Leafs, Bruins, Canadiens Score Victories While Shore and Watson Tangle in Boston

Bad Man of Bruins Flattens Ranger Forward With Cross-Check

BRODA BRILLIANT

Jackson, Apps And Thoms Fire Goals in Shutout Over Americs

Time has failed to subdue Eddie Shore. Scientists tell you the cells of the past few years lurked the bruising Bruin of old—a hero in Boston and a thoroughly hated hockey player in half a dozen other cities.

Under the taunts and blows of young Phil Watson of New York Rangers the old Shore said: "I can't restrain last night before an admiring crowd of 11,000 Rockne fans. His heavy stick flashed and Watson went down—out as cold as the ice on which he sprawled.

For the information of any youngster who may think Shore has softened up Watson stayed out five minutes. Shore's stick crashed against his forehead, opening a long cut.

The bitterly hoot victors of the National League season, broke out in the second period of a game which Boston won, 4 to 0, to halt their American division lead over the New Yorkers at five points.

Leafs Beat Americs.

In other words what the Toronto Maple Leafs beat Americans 3-0 in New York and Canadiens won a goalfrender battle 2-0 from Montreal. That left Habitants eight points behind Leafs in the goldgerlor lop apex in the Canadian division.

Watson and Shore carried their battle from the New York net to centre ice while Referee Bobby Campbell tagging after them and warning them to stop. Finally, after a lot of stick waving and jostling, Watson swung at Shore's head with his stick.

Shore ducked the blow and followed through with a swing of his own that was more accurately aimed than the Rangers' When Watson went down for the count Shore drew a malgy and threatening look on him. Referee Campbell explaining the Ranger had provoked Shore.

Schmidt Knocks Jaw.

Watson was not the only casualty of the game. Milt Schmidt, Boston centre, will be out of the game for some time with a broken jaw he suffered in a crash with Art Coulville of Ranger.

A free hand piled up by Cooney Weiland and Bill Cowley for Boston disappeared in the second period when Clapper was penalized and Clint Smith and Cecil Dillon scored for the New Yorkers.

There was less than five minutes of the third period when Cowley, Hollett, Boston defenceman, won the game for Art Ross' team. Hollett stared a shot from the centre of the zone and swung through the Ranger defence alone to flip a feeler shot that trickled through Dave Kerr's padded legs from the left side.

Manitou's largest crowd of the season—8,000 persons—saw a real game at the Arena with WIH Canadiens taking the honors in a meteoriding little Will Hill Americ-ides of Maroona. The Welch-Canadian scored a goal and assisted on a set deedle in the fact he suffered a two-stitch cut on the forehead from a flying puck in the first period.

Veterans Carry Canadiens.

Two Canadiens veterans—George Mantha and Babe Siebert — took care of the scoring for Canadiens in the first goal in the opening period and one of Siebert's long drives found a goal for Canadiens in the final session.

Turk Broda, Leaf netminder who was under fire recently from Toronto fans, performed brilliantly to win his shutout over Americans. While Red Dutton's forwards were marched around the ice, Broda broke through his armor Leafs scored through the breakaway play.

With a crowd of 13,258 looking on Harvey Jackson's Maple Leafs set in front late in the second period. Syl Apps got Toronto's second goal in the third and Jackson's brother Bill Charlie Conacher pasted to Bill Thoms for the third.

The New Yorkers played without Art Chapman, out with a cold, and Tommy Anderson, nursing a shoulder injury. Old Hooley Smith took on double duty, centering two lines, and performed capably.

SECOND VICTORY FOR GLEN ROSS IN RURAL LOOP

Canal Boys Defeat Coryville While 4th Sidney Take Zions

J. WILSON HONORED

Popular President of Loop Given Smoking Set

Stirling, Dec. 29 (Special)—The second double bill of the Central Hastings Rural Hockey League took place in the Stirling Arena on Tuesday night. All teams displayed a marked improvement over their first appearance of the season a week ago as Glen Ross went further into the lead with a clean cut victory over the flashy Corbyville aggregation while the Canal boys defeated Don Lee and Johnny Rousley who entered in the line up late seven minutes of play.

The game was all top speed with the Riverside boys having a decided edge in speed. Only the excellent work of Goalie Jack Ellis in the nets saved the southerners from a much worse trimming. Fraser, Rodgers and Miller were hitting a high rate of speed and had the visitors in terror of several excellent chances by poor marksmanship. The speed of play was remarked by all present and the crowd which was larger than that of the opening game.

Clancy Sure Maroons Not Washed Up and Will Be in Playoffs

Montreal, Dec. 29 (CP)—Amid the shouting and cursing of his defeated Maroons, The Little King sat dejectedly on the edge of a dressing room bench and pondered. He paid no heed to the vocal din. For there was much to ponder.

Maroons had just come in last night from losing their tenth game in seventeen of their National Hockey League schedule—And a downhill they had lost 5 to Canadiens at their old futra-city rivals, everybody's pretty bitter about it all, Clancy was some harsh panning of Maroons ground. The players.

"But listen here," to quote King Clancy, "if you think Maroons are washed up, you're crazy."

And if you're watching to see Clancy throw in the towel or shout "uncle" in his first crack at coaching and managing a big league club, you'll yourself a comfortable watching place, because you'll be there a long time.

Not Downhearted.

"Sure we're down now," said the King as he tugged at a piece of adhesive tape. Jimmy Ward had torn his ankle. "But don't get the idea I'm downhearted. I'm not. I'll admit before back on his head, raised his tenor voice to a higher key and became more excited enough to hurt the tape to the floor.

"Why, I'm going to get the services of this period Fraser got the puck and skated down the ice, left corner on a pass from Rodgers to make it 1-1. Speed increased in this frame, and Dollard was fined when Dalinard banged in two more counters in a speedy Glen Ross thrust. Two belated players of the Corbyville crew were added to the lineup with only seven minutes left and in that seven minutes Rousley got his assist in a goal that seemed to put new life into the southerners who pressed for the equalizer. Corbyville were shattered when Dalnard scored again and shortly after McGowan made it 4-2 on a lovely pass from Miller. Lee taking a pass from Rousley scored Corbyville's last period while Dalnard banged in two more counters, the other going to Rousley.

Glen Ross (4) — Goal, Donald; defence, Brown and Kindley; centre, Rodgers; wings, Fraser and Dalnard; subs, Brooks, McDonnell and Miller.

Corbyville (2)—Goal, Sharpe; defence, Lee and Rousley; centre, Mc-Kelosh; wings, Simpson and Guay; subs, Guay, Dinkly, Lee and Guay.

Referee—Wallace, Stirling.

Second Game.

In the second fixture Zions went down to the second loss of the season, 4-2 to the fast Canal Boys team which have disregarded the championship aspirations of the Fourth of Sidney.

Although the speed of the first game, this game was no less colorful and vigorous thrusts by both teams, Canal Boys showing a great possibilities for future development. Zions were the way of a hard game to show you at the end of this season. I'll, I'll—but I will, and you can quote me on that."

MASON SCORES CONVINCING WIN

Jimmy Chapman of Vancouver Feels Force of Welshman's Dukes

Toronto, Dec. 29 (CP)—Mog Mason, the boy Tommy Farr hopes to see the world's bantamweight boxing champion, will get a chance to avenge the licking Trevelon Eddy Yack handed him in his first fight in this country.

With Farr in his corner last night, Mason scored a technical knockout at 1:45 of the sixth round of a scheduled eight rounder over Jimmy Chapman of Vancouver. Mason knocked the westerner down four times before Referee Ray Smillie awarded the bout to the Welsh champion.

Mason's impressive showing, far superior to that he displayed against Yack, earned him another bout with 11 with the Canadian bantam champion.

JOHNNY SORRELL HAS GOOD YEAR

Demotion From Detroit to Pittsburg Not Getting Him Down

By The Canadian Press

Give a big cheer for Johnny Sorrell, the man who refused to let it get him down when shunted out of the big league into a minor loop.

For a good many years Johnny starred with Detroit Red Wings in the National Hockey League, but last season when Wings hit a bad slump he was sent to Pittsburgh in the International-American League Hockey League when Coach Jack Adams shook up the team.

That was nearly a month ago and many players probably would have been affected by the change. But not Sorrell, who has been starring steadily with Hornets ever since. He had one of his good nights last night when he scored both goals in a 2-2 tie Hornets played with Springfield Indians in the only scheduled game.

The point gained by the tie sent Hornets into first place ahead of Syracuse Stars in the western division by a single point. It marked the 11th game in a row without defeat for Hornets and the 12th in succession for Indians without victory.

Hockey's Big Seven

Gordon Drillon, dashing Toronto Maroons ace has led the National Hockey League in scoring since the opening start, added two assists to his total last night in Leafs' 3-0 win over Americans to lift his point sum to 22. Harvey Jackson, 4 team mate, held second place with 21 and an assist while Cecil Dillon continued to lead the American division by assisting Rangers' 1-1 tie at Boston. Lynn Patrick of the Rangers, is tied with Dillon, Boston ace, a four-way tie for seventh place with Sweeney Schriner and Buzz Stewart of Americans and Marty Barry, Detroit.

JUNIORS BATTLE WITH HAVELOCK

Kids Open The O.H.A. Season in This City Thursday

With nearly forty candidates to choose his starting 1938 junior O. H. A. squad from, Manager Hobbs Thomas selected an even dozen kids as the starting team for the opening junior O.H.A. game at the Belleville Arena versus the Havelock juniors on Thursday night. For over an hour last night the aspiring junior pucksters battled terrific for positions on the Belleville team and despite the fact some were not selected the calibre of material available was remarkably outstanding.

Manager Thomas made it known to the lads, however, that the initial choice of the team selected last night did not altogether mean those chosen would compose the regular team throughout the season as subsequent practices will be held at which time changes in the present squad will be made.

Nearly all of the dozen players selected to start in Thursday night's game versus Havelock have seen junior O.H.A. service in the past on occasion previously which should relish in Belleville's chances for the leading junior squad for the current season. "Lum" Carson who has guarded the nets for the past few seasons will be back with a lad named Cook as his capable relief keeper. Three veteran junior defencemen remain with the club in McCarthy, Frank O'Neill and Dick Logie. The forward lines will are Peregrine Thomas, Blair Gale, Art Rowbotham, Bob Mulv, Johnny Ronsley, Bill Hamilton and Bruce Jackson. All except McGuire and Rowbotham are at least second year men.

The relative strength of the Havelock squad is unknown, but Manager Hastings and Campbellford are not impressed with Havelock this season, the Havelock management having changed hands the entire management and to the effect the "Flyers" and Belleville clubs are setting their sun sights for third and fourth place. Such rumors at an absolutely groundless base are not only untrue, but in no way assist hockey generally. There may be logical objections to the district setup, regarding the first half of the league playoffs in the senior 'B' series and the third and fourth playing off to enter into the intermediate "A" playdowns, but it surely stands to reason no club will commence throwing games.

Once a hockey team, or any other sporting organization, start putting things over on the public they lose the confidence of the fans and no club can afford to throw games and take chances nowadays. We personally contacted the management of both Peterboro and Belleville clubs relative to this matter during hockey night and were not impressed with not only surprise but indignation. "How dare you think we could get away with such stuff" was the burning query fired back Harley Weir, secretary of the Peies, for which we added a sincere amen.

To make a long story longer it seems some of the fans just cannot garner in the idea of the local senior O.H.A. playoff system. Clement Alvin Schlegel and Secretary Little Revell distinctly outlined the conditions which were to prevail some weeks ago. All four clubs, Peterboro, Belleville, R.C.A.F., and Peterboro will play out their schedule on an even basis. The two clubs, the two first placed clubs, at the end of the season will play off. The winner to go out into the Senior "B" playdowns, while the third and fourth placed teams will play-off, the winner to go out into the intermediate "A" playdowns" explained President Schlegel. All clubs agreed to this set-up, Belleville's boys, every club in the circuit was assured of a group playoff at least.

The grouping is originally drafted on four clubs, but there's a catch to it," offered Secretary Ben Thomas of the Redmen today, however.

"On Monday Peterboro beat us 4 to 3. Let us suppose we should defeat the Peies in their first two meetings and convince the Peterboro management that the Air Force is a better club and would undoubtedly beat them in a senior "B" play-off, if the Peies finish second. Peterboro, by right, what's to stop the Peies from losing games by the odd goal in as many thereafter as a play-off in the intermediate section and leaving either Queen's or Belleville in the second slot, providing the Flyers finished first?" asked Secretary Thomas today. "We must admit you've got something there, pal!

The latest suggestion brought forward by a local fan is to have the Flyers and Peies called as sen-

The continued rumors that are circulating about the city relative to the senior O.H.A. set-up in this district are without foundation and insofar as we can ascertain, absolutely groundless. Some of the local "croupon" have even gone so far as to commence a rumour centred around the Air Force and Belleville management and to the effect the "Flyers" and Belleville clubs are setting their sun sights for third and fourth place. Such rumors at an absolutely groundless base are not only untrue, but in no way assist hockey generally. With Squadron Leader Tommy Lawrence out on the ice with them, the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" went through a full hour of practice at the Arena yesterday morning. The entire squad was on hand, with the exception of Louis Lecompte and "Buck" Lalonde, both of whom are holidaying at home in Ottawa. Stan Partridge was back at his accustomed post on the defence and teamed with George Elliott. Former Winnipeg lad, who is being retained by the Airmen, after the Redmen tried to talk to like him. The Mc-Neeley twins, Dan Cowley, Legrow, Edwards, Baldwin and a couple of new faces went through their paces and seemed to have taken on a new lease of life. Incidentally Tommy Lawrence who guided the destinies of the Flyers last winter is back at the helm of the Airmen's ship once again.

Although little is known of their strength the Havelock juniors will be the next foreign attraction at the Arena, meeting the Belleville kids here on Thursday night. Manager Thomas had a large contingent of prospects out last night. They will practice again this evening before the squad is placed for Thursday night's game versus Havelock.

No doubt a large delegation of local sport fans will crowd around the home plate when Dave Hay and listen to the annual Rose Bowl broadcasts between Alabama and University of California. The Alabama "eviction pickers" will enter in the classic the underdogs and as the short end of the betting, but like Knute Rockney, the Tide of a decade ago or so, there may be Alabama sports. Little Herky Hayden is another first alternate for the great Joe Kilgrew, seems to have taken to the Golden Linda sunshine like a duck to water and is leading from start to finish with shannon whenever in action. The Rose Bowl game is one of sportdom's most colorful contests of the year.

Dr. Cochrane, to be Ordained at Tillsonburg, Was Born Here

Son of Late William Cochrane And of Mrs. Cochrane Will be First Minister Ordained in Tillsonburg in Over a Century

Tillsonburg, Dec. 28.— Church history will be made here on Thursday afternoon, Dec. 30, when for the first time in 100 years in this centre, a Presbyterian minister is to be ordained, and later inducted into the charge of St. Andrew's congregation, Tillsonburg, and St. Andrew's congregation, Windham Centre.

Dr. Arthur C. Cochrane is the young man to be so honored. He has recently returned to Canada from the Orient, and that is one reason for the special interest.

Dr. Cochrane's grandfather, Rev. William Cochrane, D.D., was minister of Knox Presbyterian Church, Brantford, for over thirty years, and was a moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Rev. R. B. Cochrane, D.D., Secretary of the Home Missions of the United Church of Canada, is an uncle, and Dr. Cochrane's brother has a brother studying for the ministry.

Born in Belleville, Sept. 22, 1909, his parents, being Mrs. Cochrane, now of Orillia, and the late William Cochrane, who was former at the O.S.D., Belleville, for some years. He received his early education in Orillia and public, graduating in Arts from the University of Toronto in 1932. He completed his theological studies at Knox College in 1936.

For the past two years he had been studying in Scotland and Germany, taking the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in theology from Edinburgh University. While in Germany, he studied the life and teachings of the Confessional Church, and had the privilege of living for six months in the home of Dr. Hermann Hesse, moderator of the Reformed Church in Germany.

When the German delegates to the World Alliance of Reformed Churches holding the Presbyterian System were prevented from attending the conference which met in Montreal in June of this year, Dr. Cochrane, upon invitation, represented the Church in their stead.

He will commence his new pastorate on Sunday, January second.

Industrial Employment Drops by 34,444 in Nov.

Construction And Maintenance Showed Largest Seasonal Recession

RETAIL TRADE BETTER

Ottawa, Dec. 28.—(CP)—Industrial employment in Canada dropped by 34,444 persons during November, exceeding the average for the period in the last 10 years all though smaller than in 1936 or 1936, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The Bureau reported "a large seasonal contraction" at Dec. 1 over 1,194,171 the preceding month to 1,159,727.

The crude index, based on the 1926 average as 100, fell from 125.2 at Nov. 1 to 101.4 at Dec. 1, while the seasonally-adjusted index declined from 107.1 to 104.6.

"This corrected index" the Bureau said, "was then higher than in any other month since the Autumn of 1929, with the exception of Oct. 1 and Nov. 1, 1937, despite the curtailment at the beginning of December, industrial activity there continues at a high level."

"In the years since 1926, the crude index at Dec. 1 has been as follows: 1927, 121.6; 1928, 110.1; 1929, 104.6; 1934, 86.9; 1935, 91.4; 1936, 82.2; 1937, 90.1; 1930, 108.5; 1929, 119.1; 1938, 114.7; 1927, 121.6; 1928, 102.3; 1925, 94.5; 1924 91.9; 1923, 96.9; 1922, 94.3 and 1921, 83.3," the report stated.

"Manufacturing probably of food and beverages, lumber products, construction, transportation and construction showed seasonal recessions at Dec. 1, 1937, those in construction and maintenance being especially pronounced. On the other hand, logging, coal-mining and retail trade reported substantial improvement, also of a seasonal character.

"The staffs of the 10,108 firms making returns for December 1, 238, had aggregated 1,944,969, a decline of 8,579 from the preceding month; the loss in employment then recorded had been exceptionally small for the time of year.

Index 17.1 P.C. Higher

"A brief survey of the situation at the end of 1937 shows that the normal index of 121.4 at Dec. 1, is 17.1 per cent higher than at the opening of the year; since the average advance between January 1 and December 1, in the last 18 years has been just over eight per cent, the improvement effected during the last 12 months has considerably exceeded the normal.

"Outstanding features of the 1937 situation have been the continued activity in manufacturing, mining and logging, together with further advances in communications, trade, loss and trade.

Construction was also decidedly brisker than in 1936, while transportation showed little general change. Employment in the Maritime Provinces, Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia continued at a high level, while in the Prairie area no general change from 1936 was recorded".

R. yard engine crashed into a milk delivery car early yesterday, Colonel Reid, Byron Street, the driver and a passenger Douglas Muldrew 15 of Meaford, Bruce, Smiley Falls narrowly escaped death. The operator of the gasoline driven car and Muldrew was taken to the Belleville General Hospital in Corbett's ambulance. The youth, who was accompanying Reid on his morning route suffered bruises and shock and loss, but his condition—did not require hospital treatment. The Reid vehicle was proceeding north on Front St. and the locomotive was backing along the tracks south it was reported. The machine in which the two were riding was practically demolished. Dr. J. W. Farley and Dr. F. L. Reid attended the injured pair. Reid was ordered to the police cell car as X-Ray to ascertain if any bones had been broken in his body.

$1,000 Fire

Late Monday evening a fire broke out in the chimney of Herbert Oliver's home on Dominion Street, and spread so rapidly before firemen could get the flames under control, that the damage was estimated a nearly $1,000. Once the blaze was extinguished, Overhead pipes was given as the cause of the fire, which worked its way into the upstairs partitions of the dwelling and made the firefighters battle stubbornly of get the flames under submission. A portion of the interior of the house, furniture and other household effects were destroyed by the fire and water. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver were in the house, when the fire broke out and got to safety, without suffering injuries.

At a recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association it was decided that the experiment of maintaining an office in the United Kingdom for the sale of cheese should be discontinued. This to become effective immediately.

Although this step has been taken by the Executive Committee it is understood that the Association will continue to purchase cheese for sale in the old country during the season of 1938. Theis plan for the disposal of the same will be presented at the annual meeting to be held in Peterboro on February 16th and 17th.

Tests For Tuberculosis Are Becoming More Accurate

About twenty years ago in company with a big surgeon specialist I examined the chest of a young man 23 years of age. He had a persistent cough which brought up considerable mucous, a very slight rise in temperature, a loss in weight, X-ray showed no "recognizable" but tubercle bacillus could not be found in the sputum, there were just a few rales—rough sounds —in one spot in his chest.

I did not think that, in the absence of the sputum, no real loss in weight, no striking X-ray signs, the case should be called tuberculosis, which meant sending the patient to a sanatorium for at least a year. I thought that telling him he had "consumption" by sending him to the sanatorium might so shock him that it would further undermine his health.

The tuberculosis specialist admitted that more evidence of tuberculosis was desirable, but considered that even if I were right, the fresh air, rest, and good food of the sanatorium was the best treatment anyway, whereas if I were wrong and did not send him there he would be in needed treatment for early tuberculosis, when he finally did get sanatorium treatment, it might be too late.

I thought his argument so wise that I consented to let the patient go to the sanatorium, where he remained for a year and came out in good health. He immediately went to work and remained in good condition for about twenty years until worries and anxieties put him down; his cough returned, he lost weight, and the X-ray showed fresh trouble. He had been in a sanatorium for about a year.

The question of whether a "suspected" case of tuberculosis should be called tuberculosis and hurried off to a sanatorium is not now as hard to answer because of the improved tests for positive particularly the improvement in X-ray equipment. This is fortunate because a patient who has been in a tuberculosis sanatorium often has difficulty in obtaining a position renting a house or apartment, and avoiding the usual social invitations.

Today, for the peace of mind of the patient and the safety of his family, a very careful examination is made before the definite test is made before calling the condition an active tuberculosis. The presence of the organism—tubercle bacillus—in the sputum shows definitely that tuberculosis is present.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Most people never seem to get a good night's rest. They toss and turn—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and complications, backache, headaches often follow. To get them well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 29 (CP)—After registering point declines in all leading groups the market on Toronto Exchange was showing more firmness at early afternoon, led by Mond and National Nickel. Nickel sold around 43 in the early action and was showing a net gain of a half point or better around 45 in the afternoon. Mirandas continued heavy and the cheaper base metals recorded light losses.

Although Dome recovered part of the early loss, Dome was still showing a point this afternoon. Other senior golds were firmer and the cheaper issues closing up moderately or more. Except for a decline of a point or more for Preston, the Western list held steady.

Quite a few new lows for the year, four of them in the paper group, were recorded in the industrial section. Engineering steels, utilities and senior oils were heavy and the beverages were exchanged to slightly lower.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 29 (AP) — Socalled armament stocks rallied a little in the stock market today but selling pressure in other quarters took best gains.

Near the final hour the rest of the picture was mixed with losses and advances about evenly divided. Basically distributed through the list.

Ahead most of the time, with profit realizing encountered increasing it to the minus side, was U. S. Steel. Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler and others to improve included Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Anaconda Copper, American Smelting, Westinghouse Electric, General Electric, International Harvester, Pennsylvania Railroad, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, North American and Du Pont.

Sales were at the rate of about 2,200,000 shares.

Produce Prices On Montreal Market

Montreal, Dec. 29—Butter futures turned stronger on the Canadian Commodity Exchange today. Trading was quiet and closed at the close 30-30 1-4c for December, 30-30 3-4c for January and 30 1-2c to 30 3-4c for February. One February contract was reported sold at the close. Cash butter was stronger, with 200 boxes at Quebec grass regraded sold at 30 1-4c. Another twenty-five boxes was quoted at the close, with Quebec specials at 30 3-4c and 31c to 29 3-4c. Small lots to the retail trade were quoted by jobbers at 31c for solids and 31 1-2c for prints.

The egg market was again lower, being quoted on graded shipments just arriving mainly at 37c for A-A large, 34c for A-medium, 22-23c for A-pullets, and 20-21c for original A-large out of storage. Offerings at the Commercial Exchange were 36c, 34c, 22c, and 20c respectively.

Board Room Gossip

PIONEER GOLD

Current accumulation Pioneer Gold due to indications that the company will soon have control of a number of the important claims in the New Zealand gold field on the Trail Creek of Vancouver Island.

Market Comment

It appears as if the market will close the present year at approximately the level of the high which was set in 1936 being wiped out. This is particularly true of the pessimistic views there were current at the beginning of the year. Nothing has marked the severest. The optimism prevailing in financial circles in the market has overcome itself on the downside and that a recovery should ensue in the spring after the end of 1938.

In the United States steel operations have declined, to under 20 per cent of capacity, indicating that about the low point has reached for that industry. Any change from prevailing conditions is likely to be upward which lends encouragement for a better market. It should be remembered that the conditions surrounding the steel industry in Canada are entirely different from those prevailing across the line, although the market has not recognized this fact.

DOME MINES

A considerable amount of Dome is being bought for American account, it is stated, on the theory that this is that the return is satisfactory. Dome Mines has declared dividends amounting to $4.50 a share. This year $3.50 has been declared. The directors of this company have recently announced the regular quarterly dividend of $1.00 a share, payable on January 20th, 1938. When this is added the total disbursements to shareholders since 1915 will be $33,312,960.

Stirling NO ELECTION IN STIRLING

Thomas Cranston Will Continue as Reeve For Coming Year

Stirling, Dec. 29. — (Special) — Nearly one hundred taxpayers and other citizens were in attendance at the annual nominations meeting held in the Stirling Community Theatre on Monday evening and the retiring council headed by Reeve Thos. Cranston gave their interesting report of the year's efforts by these stepping down from the various municipal offices after a completed years service. Many nominations were made but resignation of a vast number resulted in an election for the forthcoming year being unnecessary. Thos. Cranston and W. C. West were both nominated for the reeveship with the former being elected by acclamation when W. C. West withdrew from the contest. Twelve citizens were nominated for the village council and among those nominated for the council were: D. A. Reid, Patrick; C. B. Rollins, Frank Stapley, Jos. Whitehead, Thos. Thompson, Roy Fluhle, W. L. Anderson, W. C. West, R. H. Williams, Wm. Pitcher, H. Ellis, Herbert Thompson. Withdrawals from the contests resulted in the following gentlemen being elected to the governing body by acclamation: D. A. Reid, Frank Stapley, W. L. Anderson, Roy Fluhle, Herbert Eggleton and Mr. T. W. Holmes were nominated for the Public School trustees with the latter being elected by acclamation when Mr. Eggleton withdrew.

Nominees for the office of school trustees included Messrs. H. O. Martin, John Morton, Walter Wright and Jas. Strickland with the first three being elected by acclamation by virtue of the withdrawal of Mr. Strickland from the field.

Mayor Thomas Cranston at the close of the past year in leading the Stirling Council has made for himself a host of friends.

Being a keen business man he has exercised splendid judgement in all affairs of the village with the welfare of every citizen uppermost in his mind at all times. The resignation of Mr. Jos. Whitehead from active service on the village council after several successful years, was met with bitter disappointment by many. Mr. Whitehead has proven on many occasions that he has sacrificed leisure of office to be an excellent servant to the people of the district. At all times he has firmly stood for the things which in his belief have been for the best interest of the community.

QUALIFICATIONS

In one of the most hectic nomination meetings held in the village in a decade, Reeve Arthur Good Murphy and Councillor James Rutter survived the avalanche of reeveship nominations for the position on Monday night and will contest the seat on January 3rd.

Villagers packed the Town Hall to the rafters as candidates for council and reeveship were pounded upon their platforms. Ten names were proposed for reeve's chair, but withdrawn as rapidly as submitted.

Verbal crossfire added to the general din with much amusement being created as candidates endeavored to make themselves heard.

Messrs. Arthur Archard, Carl Bryan, Fred Flint, Stanley Hooper and Dr. Hugh McCullough will contest the two councillorships, seven other nominees withdrawing their names before the close of the meeting.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was sewing on her sewing machine and said, Say ma, do you think it's wrong for fellows to play ray games?

I do, I certainly do and I've told you so, ma said, as the task in hand the tree will be inclined, and I does want to see you inclined to run down bombs on innocent women and children.

O, neither do I, ma, I said. I guess I wont even play hand grenades with combines, either. The I was just doing down in the front room, I said, and had an idea I should hope not, for the combine sake as well as your own, the idea.

It didn't hurt the combine, ma, I mean only one came apart a little. I guess it wasn't screwed together very good, I mean I didn't throw it any harder than what I did the others, said, and ma said, I want you to keep your hands off them combines and I want you to keep out of that front room and I want you to forget about hand grenades.

Yes mam, ma, war games are liked to be more dangerous than you think, anyways, I said. I was trying to see how close I could come to the target without actually hitting it, and the target was that vase my lodge flower set, at, it must be a better shot than I thought, ma, because hit it after all, I said.

My good Japanese vase, ma said, and I said, Well O wisdom, ma, it couldn't of been so good, because it broke itself as easy as anything by just bumping against the wall. It only went in 3 big pieces, ma. do you want me to try to fix it for you? I said.

Being the beginning of the sad part.

SWEEPING PLANS MADE TO ENSURE FOOD SUPPLY

Plans Call for Bases Of Canned Food Depots In Wartime, Says Express

Sales at Regular Times to Prevent Deterioration Expected

DOMINIONS IN PLAN

United Kingdom Has Been Divided Into Districts

London, Dec. 30 (CP-Havas)—The political editor of Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express wrote today that sweeping plans to ensure Great Britain's food supply in wartime and its rapid distribution will be submitted to the cabinet.

The Dominions will figure in these plans by filling some of the important supply orders, the article said.

The Express said the plans call for establishment of large canned food depots at various points in the United Kingdom. To prevent this food deteriorating qualities, it all will be sold at regular periods and immediately replaced.

Little frequented ports on the western and southwestern coasts with fewer than normal peace-time traffic and thus relieve congestion at big harbors. Construction of a major road network linking various ports with industrialized regions also is included in the plans, the paper said.

It was recalled that the government already has approved plans dividing the country into districts under the control of food commissioners. These officials already have been designated.

Speaking of Japan's plans in Asia, Sun warned of other ambitious colonizing into the Pacific sphere, and added that "America will be wise to keep its navy in readiness for any emergency."

Why the Weather?

By MAJOR A. E. THIESEN

Science Service Meteorologist

Condensation formed from water vapor condenses into a great variety of forms in winter. The fine fog or cloud particles. These are very small: it would take 1,000 to 2,000 of them placed in a row to make an inch. In the North at this time of year the cloud particles form themselves into beautiful snow crystals, no two alike. These are only about a twentieth of an inch wide, and many of them are required to make up a snowflake. The other forms of precipitation are rain, hail and sleet or frozen raindrop. Condensation also forms dew and hoarfrost. Both are deposits on cold earth or other objects. Rime is a deposit of white, rough ice formed upon to windward on exposed objects when frost and wet fog cover together.

Premier of France Threatened to Call All Strikers to Colors

SCORES TRIUMPH

Strikers Secure $2.31 More a Month for Living Allowance

Paris, Dec. 30 (AP) — Striking public service workers, faced with Premier Chautemps' threat to punish their general walkout by calling them to the colors, accepted a compromise settlement today and returned to work.

Agreement was reached after labor delegates had shuttled back and forth between their own meetings and government offices.

The strikers, 130,000 strong, were notified to return to their jobs soon after daybreak. Labor leaders said, however, that all the privileged services probably would not be restored for a week until noon.

The city's two subway lines and all bus lines started carrying passengers again at the busiest clock cars and rubbish and garbage collectors started hurried rounds of the capital to catch up with the neglected work.

Overflow Cans Line Street.

Overflowing cans lined the streets and there were heaped rubbish containers even in front of the residence of President Lebrun.

Electric, gas and water plant workers went to their posts, swelling the skeleton crews which had sustained the city of at least some supplies during the strike.

Settlement of the strike was hailed by Premier Blum as a triumph for the Radical-Socialist Premier of the Popular Front regime, whose threat to mobilize the strikers as members of the French army was credited with breaking the workers' resistance.

Under the government's threat the strikers themselves would have become strike breakers—called out as army reserves, sent back to the same municipal jobs from which they had struck, and ordered to maintain transportation, water, gas and light supplies as well as other services they had crippled or halted. Most of the strikers are reservists.

Order Ready For Signing.

Shortly before the compromise was announced Ministries of Interior and War put the finishing touches to preparations for the draftee mobilization.

Foundation Stone of All Matter May Change with Discovery

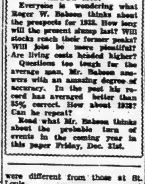
Scientist Finds there Are Hundreds of Different Kinds of Electrons

PHOTOS SHOWN

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

Indianapolis, Dec. 30 (AP)—Washington University of St. Louis sent to the American Association for the Advancement of Science today the evidence for a startling discovery—that instead of one kind of electron, there are hundreds.

The electron, a bit of negative electricity, has been considered the smallest building block of matter, a simple foundation stone of all matter. If the St. Louis discovery is verified by other scientists, it means the foundations of matter as now known are upset, that even at the very bottom rung there is not only a structure as complicated as the Tower of Babel.



The new evidence is some photographs taken in the last two weeks showing electrons apparently ranging in weight from the ordinary kind, all the way up to that of protons, which are heavy positive charges of electricity.

One proton is 18,000 times heavier than the heretofore known electron.

Decision Reversed.

The pictures were taken by C. M. Jasmoy, physics professor. So revolutionary was his report considered theoretical that he reversed a decision to withhold it pending verification by other scientists, it was announced by Washington University officials.

The formal hearing also was delayed to allow word to come from the University of Michigan, where—independently of Dr. Jasmoy and without his knowledge—similar experiments have been performed. It was said here the Michigan results dium E.

WHAT DOES RABSON THINK ABOUT 1938?

Everyone is wondering what Roger W. Babson thinks about the prospects for 1938. How busy will the present slump last? Will jobs be more plentiful? Are living costs headed higher? Investment ideas for the average man, Mr. Babson answers with an unusual degree of accuracy. In the past his record has averaged better than 90 per cent. How good is yours? Can he repeat?

were different from those at St Louis.

Dr. Arthur Compton of the University of Chicago, cosmic ray expert, looked at Dr. Jamoy's pictures and said they appeared to be well done scientifically. He did not commit himself on the new experiments, except to say that if verified they are of great importance.

BOMBING MISTAKE STATES JAP NOTE IN EXPLANATION

By GEORGE HAMMELTON

London, Dec. 30 (CP) — Japan claims that the bombing of British gunboats on the Yangtze was "entirely due to a mistake."

A Japanese note 1,300 words long, the text of which was made public today, expresses the emphatic British protest, saying the incidents in each case were due to the fact that the Japanese naval command had taken it for granted that under such circumstances as prevailed at the time all foreign warships and merchant vessels had usually withdrawn from the scene of fighting, that there could be no vessels left in those localities other than those of enemy character, and also to the fact that owing to thick fog and haze visibility was poor.

No Intentional Attacks.

"There is no room for doubt that they did not intentionally attack the vessels, knowing them to be British," the note declared.

COMMISSIONER CHANGES TITLE

J. W. Dulanty Becomes High Commissioner for Ireland

By GEORGE HAMMELTON

London, Dec. 30 (CP)—J. W. Dulanty, High Commissioner for the Irish Free State in London, today became high commissioner for Ireland. But back at the recent street offices of the former Irish Free State and among the constitutional experts at Downing St. it is generally recognized that "Eire", or Ireland, by the latest bills passed by Premier De Valera Northern Ireland nor affects the new powers of Britain's crown.

The new constitution lays down a law by which the unity of the Nation (Eire) and secession of the North is ignored. It does not unite that territory.

Indeed the old name still clings to the Irish Free State's diplomatic quarters. When the writer telephoned this morning a brisk reply came: "Office of the High Commissioner for the Irish Free State speaking". Then, on request for information: "Offices of the High Commissioner for Ireland."

In actual fact, it is asserted here, the new constitution itself makes little, if any, change. Before the new constitution was given effect, members of the king already had been wiped out in the internal affairs of the Irish Free State. The External Affairs Relations Act, recognizing the king as the "symbol of co-operation" in external affairs and passed by the Dublin Parliament a year ago, is not affected by the constitution.

Ballot - Minded Women Winning Fight in Quebec

Mme. Pierre Casgrain Carries on Battle for Franchise for Women At Present have Vote in Federal Field—Carry on Propaganda for Franchise Over Radio.

Montreal, Dec. 30 (CP)—Quebec Province, last stronghold in Canada of the votes-for-men-only tradition, and last to fall before the onslaughts of ballot-minded women. Mme. Pierre F. Casgrain, slim, vivacious leader of the feminist cause, sees ground for hope that Quebec women are in the midst of the "last attack", which will win them in provincial elections the vote they exercise in the federal field.

Mme. Casgrain was a bit mystified today about plans for bringing the question before the legislature which opens Jan. 25. "Quebec women are so full of surprises these days anything may happen," she said.

The Women's Franchise Bill has come before the legislature in November, 1936. Following its defeat, "Femina" (the League for Women's Rights) planned an educational campaign designed particularly to reach women outside Montreal, "where we always have had plenty of support."

Visit All Centres.

A series of sketches based on phases of Quebec law relating to women, presented in weekly French broadcasts, have brought what Mme. Casgrain considers a very encouraging response and will be followed by a number of broadcasts in English. Letters from interested listeners and requests for speakers have poured in from many parts of the province.

Mme. Casgrain has addressed meetings at St. Hyacinthe and Sherbrooke and is considering visits to other centres.

One woman wrote that she had always opposed the franchise until the sketches made her realize what the vote implied. Now she would like to "do something to help".

A "straw vote" on the women's franchise question, taken at the "Femina" booth at the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition here in early November, ran overwhelmingly in favor, 8,149 to 394, "a splendid answer to those opponents who say that Quebec women do not want the vote."

No Authority Without Vote.

"I believe women are realizing more and more that without the vote they have no authority" by which they can change conditions they consider unfair, Mme. Casgrain said. Demands of women for representation on such bodies as the Fair Wage Board, which is constantly dealing with labor troubles involving women workers, and the Council of Public Instruction are ignored, even to have a man as head of Domestic Science teaching in Quebec."

Mme. Casgrain admits she sometimes finds the constant demands on her time and energy tiring and she will be glad when the vote is won and she can rest a while, but "I suppose the real work will be only beginning."

BANDIT CAR IS FOUND IN TORONTO

Bullet Marks Seen in Back of Machine Located

Toronto, Dec. 30 (CP)—A bullet-marked automobile was checked closely today by police who sought the bandits who last night attempted holdup of a service station.

The automobile, said to have been the one which police pursued for several hours after the would-be robbers fled the station in the face of a constable's revolver fire, was found in a North Toronto park last night. The bullets from a policeman's revolver had penetrated the back of the machine.

Eleven cruiser cars were engaged in the 80-mile-an-hour chase that took the pursuers to the Ontario district, 45 miles northwest of Toronto. For a time it was thought the two men known to have been in the machine were trapped in that area. The third man was seen to flee from the car shortly after the attempted holdup.

It was apparent the bandits had eluded their pursuers and had doubled back over sideroads in Toronto. The car, stolen early in the day from Bloor street west, was found parked in the driveway of a stable in North Toronto.

Fifty policemen scoured three counties north of Toronto during the search in which were engaged officers from a dozen municipalities and the provincial police force.

Oil wells have been drilled as deep as two miles, but engineers say they could go a mile deeper, with present equipment.

Buying of Silver from Canada Continued by United States

Agreement to Buy From China Extended to July 1

MONTHLY BUYING

Washington, Dec. 30 (AP)—Treasury Secretary Morgenthau announced today the United States Treasury had agreed to continue buying silver from China under the Silver Purchase Act at least through January.

The American agreement for January had been disclosed earlier this week. Morgenthau said today the same treatment would be extended to Canada.

He also announced that the long-standing agreement by which the United States promised to buy silver from China with that nation holding gold from the United States has been extended until July 1, 1938.

The Secretary said the Mexican and Canadian agreements merely provide that the United States will buy up to fixed amounts of newly-mined silver from those countries at prices to be determined each month.

In the last year, the price has been 45 cents an ounce, compared with 77.57 cents an ounce in China. Imports for new silver mined in the United States Treasury will continue to buy silver from Canada.

So far as Canada is concerned the agreement means that Canadian silver producers will be able to sell their silver through the Bank of Canada to the United States Treasury at the prevailing price, probably 45 cents an ounce, as in the past, for the month of January.

The arrangement is to run from month to month and must be renewed before the end of each month. Definite official announcement of the action is expected from Washington soon.

Fascism of Nazi Brand Making Rapid Progress With King Carol Leader

Trend Will have Influence On Affairs in South Eastern Europe

NEWSPAPERS BANNED

New Pro-German Cabinet Opens Anti-Semitic Program

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York, Dec. 30 (AP) — The cabinet crisis in Rumania has reaffirmed tendencies in that Balkan State which, unless they are checked can easily fall to have an influence on the trend of affairs in eastern and southeastern Europe. They are:

King Carol is reaching for further dictatorial powers;

Anti-Semitic, pro-German Fascism has received another pat on the head from Carol.

Rumania has rallied still more towards her membership in the Little Entente which France constructed after the Great War with Czechoslovakia, Yukoslavia and Rumania as a bulwark against Germany.

All of which means the star of Chancellor Hitler has moved a few degrees higher in the heavens.

Premier Georges Tatarescu lost control of the cabinet and didn't approach control in the Chamber of Deputies.

Maybe it wasn't despite this fact, but because of it, that Carol pulled this move. Whether such an illfavored cabinet can long survive is hardly a matter of speculation. It is a certainty that it can't—unless Carol takes up the duke of dictatorship. This may be what his majesty has in mind.

Rumania has been headed toward Fascism of the Nazi brand for a long time, and Carol has been held by the fight between the Fascists and the supporters of democracy.

Newspapers Suppressed

Bucharest, Dec. 30 (CP-Havas)—The new government today suppressed three important Jewish-owned newspapers today in line with its Anti-Semitic program.

Thirty counterstrokes spread among the 1,000,000-odd Jews in Rumania, Premier Octavian Goga announced yesterday as the cabinet's administration by order-ing the suspension of the five papers Lupta, Adevarul, and Dimineata. Yesterday's orders were commanded to suspend publication.

A government spokesman said the latest step was taken because the newspapers were largely "edited by foreigners and always have maintained an attitude contrary to the interests of the country."

Measures Mooted

Among the other Anti-Semitic measures reportedly envisaged by the cabinet are:

A ban on State transactions with concerns backed by Jewish capital or run by Jewish management.

NOVEL CHRISTMAS CARD RECEIVED

A beautiful and novel Christmas card was received from relatives in New York last week by Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Donovan, 219 Charlotte Street. Inset in a lovely reproduction of the visit of the Shepherds to the Infant Saviour is a number of blossoms. The inscription is a Christmas lesson in Bethlehem and the folder of the card explains that this bouquet of flowers contained in the box like basket of the picture are real flowers picked from sacred Bethlehem fields (the very fields from which the shepherds brought flowers to our Lord on the night of His birth) and blessed at an altar of the manger in the Holy Land where Jesus was born.

LACK OF FROST IN SWAMPS HINDERS THE CUTTING OF FIREWOOD

Farmers in the northern part of Prince Edward County are casting anxious looks at the rapidly disappearing of the district from which comes their annual supply of stove and firewood.

Lack of frost in the ground failed to supply a hard surface on which provisions the farmer stated today, while the heavy snowfall of a few weeks ago put the final handicap of securing an early entrance to the woods. Even at this late date bottom of the swamps is still open and covered with a treacherous depth of water, it was stated. The possibility of this soon rage due to the heavy snowfalls prevents the natural departure of the snow, and also prevents the frost from reaching water covered bottoms which when frozen form the natural method of egress from the swamplands.

COUNTY JAIL INMATES EXPRESS APPRECIATION TO MRS. G. FRENCH

"If ever appreciation and gratitude were shown, it was shown by the inmates of the County Jail following their Christmas dinner," stated Mrs. G. French after this morning. "Their faces lit up with beaming smiles and the soundness of the meal" the governor added. "Perhaps the highlight of the whole evening was when they asked that Mrs. French and I attend the entertainment," she remarked. One of the lads rose to his feet and in a splendidly worded address spoke for personal appreciation as well as that of his fellows for the fine dinner. They particularly commended Mrs. French who superintended the cooking of the dinner for them.

CHRISTMAS LIGHTING USES EXTRA POWER

Resplendent Christmas trees are still glowing brightly in the corners of the living room. Mother is trying out the new toaster, the new grill on the new electric refrigerator, or perhaps the curling iron found in the Christmas morning stocking. All Belleville and district has turned to the use of electricity in lieu of the holiday season, and over the power lines supplying the homes is flowing a current to feed the new acquisitions, to heat the filaments of the toasters and grills, and speed the motors of the refrigerators, estimated at from 15 to 20 per cent above normal, every-day use, it was conjectured by Mr. O. Shaw, manager of the local Public Utilities Commission.

"We haven't the exact estimate of course, and won't have until the end of the month, but the Christmas trees and other appliances do consume an extra load of power through the holidays, each year", it was stated.

MOVING OF BARRIERS DANGEROUS PRACTICE

Several hills through the city are still blocked off after nightfall the on which children may sleighride with some assurance of safety from traffic. This considerable difficulty in keeping barricades in place is being experienced by the police department. In many instances, the barricades placed at the top and bottom of the hills, sufficiently lighted, have been removed and thrown to the ground. Prosecution of offenders in the future will be instituted if further trouble is experienced, it was intimated.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 30—(CP)— While the market displayed moderate improvement in prices from the opening trading stripped off to only 600,000 shares for the first three hours All three leaders were up .36 to .37 at noon. In the early afternoon the Western list turned a bit heavy and set-backs were marked by Calgary-Edmonton, Okalta, Vulcan and Canada Malting.

Supported by stronger metal prices in London the base metal leaders, including Nickel, Noranda, and Hudson Bay, registered narrow gains. Steel of Canada held a feature of the Golds, trading heavily at a moderate advance. McIntyre firmed about a point.

Steels, Foods, Beverages, Senior Oils and Papers all displayed strength.

CITIZENS ARE URGED TO CALL FOR SAND

In an effort to make the city accident free over the week-end holidays, officials of the public works department today requested the co-operation of the public in general to assist in sanding slide walks in residential areas which are ice covered in many sections.

"We've lots of clean, sharp sand and we will be glad to deliver it to any householder who puts on the sidewalk in front of his property, providing suitable containers are set out in which to, receive it. All they need to do is telephone the office at the city hall and say 'I'm all', informed city engineer Chas. Mod.

Board Room Gossip

MARKET COMMENT

The group that has been most adversely affected has been the "penny" financial Service has made a number of enquiries in Information centers in the Street, and has spoken to people close to the industry and the opinion prevails that the selling in the newsprint stocks has been overdone. The main reason why many of these issues have declined so drastically is that their technical position earlier in the year was very poor. Although the properties are undoubtedly cheap, many investors and traders are waiting until liquidation in this group has been completed.

About the only heartening feature of recent markets has been the broadened strength in the senior gold stocks. The question is being asked whether this is a foreshadowing of mine mining market in the early part of 1938? Influential investors here and in the United States have decided that our Canadian gold stocks of the better calibre are good investments for income, as a hedge against deflation and for capital appreciation. A continuation of strength in the senior golds is bound in time to be reflected in the junior golds and finally into the more promising prospects and coal producers.

Paper

Recent strength in the shares of Provincial is no doubt in anticipation of the splendid outlook for this property in 1938. The year 1937 has been one of tremendous activity in ore reserves which, it is said, more than doubled the tonnage in production from 800 to 1,500 tons daily, which is scheduled to take place in February. When the mill is increased grade will probably come down somewhat, from recent grades of 68.00 as Panmour can make plenty of tonnage at a balanced operation at 1,500 tons daily with recovery running at $7.00 per ton. In the first nine months of 1937 operating costs averaged under $4 per ton which should be substantially improved next year. A profit of $3.00 per ton appears reasonable. This would mean $1,500,000 a year or over 30 cents per share on the issued capital. The property is being explored and developed with the thought of much greater production looking many years ahead.

Stirling, Dec. 30.—(Special)—well over two hundred young people from all parts of Hastings County gathered in the Stirling Community Service Building on a farewell party given in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Wilson. The party was sponsored by the township junior farmers' club which during the nine years of Mr. Wilson's service in the county have established many records. Mr. Wilson has also taken keen interest in the activities of young people's work and the entire district was well represented to wish them both the greatest success in their new field at Welland County, where Mr. Wilson will act as representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The early part of the evening was spent in dancing with excellent music being provided by a three-piece orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Chas. E. Allan of Campbellford. At twelve o'clock the dancing came to a close and shortly after the supper dance and Mr. Jos. Wilson, the guest of honour, was presented with a gift from the township Junior Farmers' Club by Miss Gladys Hall, who explained the purpose of the gathering was to bid farewell to the above mentioned couple, who had worked as faithfully during the past years in the interests of Hastings County youthful agriculturists. Short and appropriate addresses were delivered by Mr. Wilson on the various clubs represented each expressing their regret at farewell to the above honored couple. Speakers included C.O. Longwell, Wm. Heath, Mr. Shortt, E. Holland and T. B. Carter.

Presented With Lamp

At this time the following address was read by Mr. Longwell on behalf of the gathering and the honored couple were presented with a floor lamp and a modernistic floor lamp and a decorative clock-radio, by Miss Hall and Longwell.

In replying to the address and accepting the lovely gifts Mr. Wilson thanked the young people for all their kindnesses shown to them and extended a hearty invitation for all to visit them at their new home in Welland County. Mrs. Wilson also replied in a most fitting manner.

Mr. Wilson left the county for his successor to this district is the person of Mr. Lynn Pilly, who expressed the hope that he would be able to rapidly make the acquaintance of all the young people present.

The Address

Stirling, Ont.
December, 30, 1937

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Wilson:

We your farm girls and boys are here tonight to show in some tangible way our appreciation of the good work you have done for us. We are grateful for Hastings County to have you leave us but may our loss be gain for you in the splendid work with girls and boys.

Your splendid work with us we have grown to regard you as one of us. We are ready and willing to work and advance all interests under your conditions.

Now you'll both make good in Welland County thereby making your friends here all the more proud of you.

We hope that Mrs. Wilson will have a book that she can make as many friends as you have made here.

A list of the can for pardon, the song of the birds for mirth.

You are nearer to God in the garden than anywhere else on earth.

We ask you to accept these gifts as tokens of our deep regard for you both.

Signed by Wilmot Shortt, R. Holland, Burton Coulter and Bill Heath.

United States Public Sees Extraordinary and Dramatic Film

New York, Dec. 30 (AP) — The photographic story of the sinking of the U.S. gunboat Panay by Japanese in the slow waters of the Yangtze—the first seen before the United States public today.

It had a preview last night before a group of movie critics, newspaper and reporters, in a rough little projection room on the second floor of N.J. laboratory.

Then a melodramatic monotone Newsreel Cameraman Norman Alley explained his extraordinary pictorial record of the Japanese bombing which threatened grave rupture between Washington and Tokyo when Japanese apologies were accepted by the United States government.

Swift Movement of Events

The Panay, her flag folding out starkly, was shown in the Yangtze River with her load of refugees. Nanking, Chinese capital, was in flames. The Panay would never tie up in Nanking again.

Two Japanese airplanes are seen far aloft; one seems to be diving toward the ship.

"There it is; here's the business," Alley explained.

There is a quick cutback to the deck; sailors leap out one by one from the hold and dive overboard.

Emergency Alarm

"That's when the emergency alarm was heard," says Alley).

Men of the Panay, in emergency skiffs, machine gun, strimming, scramble for the shore. Alley's voice, the leaped to station so quickly that he left his trouser behind. The machine gun fire is heard.

Over sisters—it looked less than 50 yards—are seen on the Yangtze throws up a great burst of water.

Panay Keels

Next, fatally hit, the Panay keels, one of her decks partly awash. Some lifeboats go over the side; the men crowd on the deck, others leap.

WORLD PARLIAMENT OF SCIENCE

Scientists are looking for a World Parliament of Science to unite the scientists of the world's democratic countries into an articulate body of organized knowledge. Its aim is to serve as a world lens to focus the scattered light of man's collective wisdom into a mighty intellect beam illuminating the ways men and nations travel.

It is felt that this world court of knowledge would exert a moral force on the political and social spheres similar to the force exerted by the medieval universities.

This step is an outgrowth of the Harvard Tercentenary of last year and of a meeting of British scientists. It was urged at Harvard by one of the world's leaders on medieval thought that "universities, scientists, artists and philosophers have the responsibility of teaching that there is a spiritual order of realities whose obsolute right it is to judge even the State and eventually to free us from its oppression."

Dictatorship of science is intolerable and destructive of its very spirit says Dr. A. F. Moulton, who claims that it is not a mere fiction of the imagination that freedom of science is in danger and he points out that in some countries arbitrary control of science pronouncements is already in effect. Science, he says, is the first line of defence of the freedom of the mind.

AS THE NEW YEAR NEARS

The new year approaches with its unknown experiences of toil, pleasure, joy and sorrow, and the old book of 1937 is about to be closed; by most with a sort of regret for while 1937 has been hoped for time not come to pass, the year has shown an improvement in many fields. 1937 has been, of course, as 1938 is likely to be, a year not without its grave anxieties of what is happening and what may happen in the world at large.

Yet it has brought its blessings to many despite untoward world events. In the scientific field the year 1937 has yielded progress which has widely increased the field of knowledge and brought discoveries which cannot but prove a boon to humanity, in the health of nations and of individuals through medicine and surgery, in the comforts which inventions may give men in the home and in travel, even in airplanes and also in the fond which the people eat. The present mess in the Orient shows where science has been dragged in the mire for the sake of destruction with bullet, bomb and bayonet, when it should bring blessings. Some spirit of evil has got into men or men have not been spiritually educated enough not to make such use of inventions to their ultimate destruction.

In the field of labor more men and women have been employed than in the previous year and while some conditions are distressing conditions are generally improved.

But it is difficult to sum up a year's progress in so many words. What may even seem a retrograde step may afterward prove to be a hidden advancement. Some events of the year unresentful and direst events good may come for it is the quality of Providence and humanity so to develop events.

Looking on the New Year, one can see continued scientific progress in invention, in medicine and surgery and in the unification of the world despite war, just as the many races and lands have been steadily brought more and more closely together in recent years. In the labor sphere more men look for intimately more employment for no one believes that the swing upward has ended despite any minor recessions which may periodically come to check a too rapid advance.

In the municipal arena people naturally hope for any improvement and lightening of burdens, and hope for substantial general improvement of the nation and the world at large for they know it will be reflected upon every community and every individual.

Then in the personal and social life there is the question of amendment by way of good resolutions as New Year's custom dictates, these seem made only to be broken for probably the maker attempts too much and does not attack the things needing amendment in a way to strengthen himself so that he may have the ability to carry them out in actual life exercise and to make the amendment part of himself.

LOOKING FORWARD

Up to Christmas time the people look forward to Yuletide and the holidays but with the coming of the New Year they inevitably look over the months ahead for the coming of spring, the new birth in nature.

Preparation for the holidays has been an absorbing affair and now with them at end, new preparations to meet the new conditions of the new year and to plan for next season's work are needed. To the student these days ahead are the days of most intense study, in the home there is greater devotion to the reading and culture by adults and in society there is a great social swing at this season of the year.

WORK TRAIN

The Passenger's a loldly train
And passes like a streak,
The Speed-freight's also rather vain
And doesn't stop and speak.
The Dead-freight isn't quite so grand,
It's classified fourth-class,
But all old-timers have a hand
To see the Work train pass.

It hasn't any class at all,
It doesn't look for praise;
At everybody's back and call
It keeps its devious ways.
When blizzards fill the cuts with snow
Or washouts wreck the track,
Away the faithful work train goes,
Clear up and then come back.

It often happens for a week
The Work train's out of sight,
But 1st and 2nd class don't speak,
They take it as their right.
And isn't this like life today,
When all is done and said?
The "no-class" people pave the way
For plutocrats to get ahead.

ALL TRUE REFORMS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN have generally been a considerable distance ahead of the great mass of the people, who, as a rule, change slowly from older "crudder methods, and cling close, by to the policy that what was good enough for our fathers and grandfathers should be good enough for us. However, the world do move, and advanced thought moves with it—the moving finger writes and PROGRESS is the word it writes. Progressive thought in the Belleville Council of 1936 gave the voters a chance to declare themselves on the question of a change of municipal government methods to the city manager system. A majority of the voters declared in favor of the change. An executive committee consisting, apparently, of dyed-in-the-wool politicians, who considered the City Hall an indispensable adjunct to the local party system, denied the right of Belleville citizens to institute the most modern and efficient business administration possible. However, the campaign, originating in Belleville City Council of 1934 after long and careful study of the system as practised in Canada, has had far-reaching results in stirring up thought upon the question in many municipalities and turning the spotlight upon the weakness-es of old-time municipal management. The address of Controller Hiltz, of the Aldermen of Toronto, which appeared recently in the Toronto Globe and Mail, will be found interesting by all those of our readers interested in the subject:

To the Editor of The Globe and Mail:

Sir: I commend your leading editorial in last Friday's Globe and Mail, entitled "A Lesson from Buffalo," and may I say that Buffalo's years' experience as an Alderman of Toronto I saw no indication of graft such as is now being exposed in Buffalo.

Why is an Alderman in order to learn whether cities were doing, I visited Rochester, Cleveland, and Cincinnati. Toronto can learn a great deal from them, and especially from Cincinnati.

A dozen years ago Cincinnati was a by-word as the city with the most corrupt administration in the United States. It was dominated by politics, and where that occurs the politicians make the city and the interest of those in their organization, with corruption following inevitably.

Cincinnati's success in effecting a change, so that it is now the outstanding example of good municipal government, was achieved first by electing a good council, and secondly, by appointing a business manager to co-ordinate all civic servicing departments.

Now a business manager is not a politician, but is the business manager of a large business or manufactory or financial institution. He would not be over the City Solicitor, nor Finance Commissioner, nor City Clerk, nor the Police or Fire Departments, but only over the servicing departments, the cost of which in 1936 in Toronto was as follows:

Dept. of Public Welfare	$3,965,529
Dept. of Public Health	900,578
Street Cleaning Dept. (including garbage collection)	1,650,560
Works Department	884,233
Water Purification and Maintenance	2,084,016
Parks Department	1,260,744
Municipal Abattoir	103,806
Property Department	1,134,025
Total	$11,584,180

Cincinnati's tax rate this year is 18.95 mills, made up as follows:

City Services	9.45
Education	2.50
County Rate	7.00
Total	18.95

Toronto's tax rate is almost exactly double. Cincinnati has a population of 450,000, with 130,000 additional population in its immediate suburbs.

Would not The Globe and Mail send a first-class reporter to Cincinnati and tell the people of Toronto all about it. If you did, in my opinion, you would be rendering our citizens a great public service.
JOHN B. LAIDLAW.

As the collection plate was being passed along a seat filled with students at Bridge Street Methodist Church last Sunday morning one of the boys "muffled" the plate and with its contents of silver, and then gave the floor with a clatter. After considerable scrambling the cash was recovered and the plate passed on its way again.

There is now a fine sheet of ice on the curling rink and play will be commenced next Monday.

A Watch Night Service will be held in Bridge Street Methodist Church New Year's Eve.

Drolleries of Writing

The author who takes It's typewriter in hand is apparently still the exception to the old pen and pencil rule according to the New York Times. Of the twenty authors who dictate their books to their trade in Elmer Adler's "Breaking Into Print" Booklet, Mr. Robert Benchley, Mack play Kanter, H. L. Mencken, and Carl Van Vechten compose directly on the typewriter. All the others, including that master-craftsman, Ring Lardner, first march down the page in longhand and then hand the typewriter for a second draft. Although the typewriter is an invaluable craft tool, the pen and pencil are the instruments of style. They complete the circuit from writer to writing; they are the wires down which the electric impulses of thought are discharged from the person of the writer to the mass paper. In spite of its compact ingenuity the typewriter is a formidable barrier to when a writer is searching for the sky-blue dome of Olympus.

There is a typewriter style, and it is a good one—spinal hearty, elastic. Endeavor can set its keys to clattering merrily; drollseries like to dominate the yearbar and impudence can jump back and forth across the double shift. But the typewriter style is neither parsimonious nor finicky. A super-fluous word for two is no calamity; a loose construction will not confound the dictionaries and the grammar books out of business. There are verbose writers who love the typewriter was invented. Style 'a not a matter of craft mechanics but of personality.

Leisurely Writing

The pen and pencil are more patient with the fastidious writer. Leaning them as his temperament be close to his work, like a cabinetmaker, and he can choose his words more deliberately and listen to the sound of his sentences as they come down the page. Writing McFee professes to derive "some obscure physical satisfaction from the mere handling of a pen." Christopher Morley uses "a fountain pen, never as a fountain pen. I use it as a dipping pen, because dips go faster. In this give you time to think and not so much time that you know that you are thinking." In fact, Mr. Morley puts into Hal's the emphatic declaration that he never uses the typewriter to com-pose. He is well-advised: the illegibility beauty of his writing is worthy the extra pains of longhand composition. For the fabricated author-ship—the manufacture of the novel or words, the cadence of sentence structure, requires the finest art of writing, and longhand is gracious to it.

But the typewriter, which is a democratic machine, has the wholesome influence to bear on the second draft from hand-written copy. It is far more audacious to work on it than on longhand manuscript. It will also loosen inhibitions that are connected with the act of creation that is too lofty. Equipped with carbon sets it takes the unprinted page, which is good discipline. What a writer may be ashamed of in his own scrawl on ruled paper he may be ashamed of when he sees it reproduced in the impersonal blackness of type. The typewritten draft gives him a little margin before his vanity becomes a public scandal. The use of the typewriter keys sounds like the rude noise a scowling reader can make across a scowling page of printed

ANNOUNCING THE 1938

LINCOLN-ZEPHYR V-12

The modern "twelve" at medium price

IN THE ANNUAL, fashionable parade of model after model, improvements, changes, refinements are to be observed on every hand. But how seldom the whole car departs from traditional ways.

The LINCOLN-ZEPHYR V-12 during 1936 and 1937 did — and still does. The new LINCOLN-ZEPHYR for 1938 does even more. Truly it can be said: It breaks with tradition again!

Graceful streamlines that gave the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR a distinction of its own in two years previous are even more pronounced this year. If the bold front of this new car reminds you of the nose of some great air-liner, it is made that way for the same basic reason. Principles of functional design, rather than mere style, dictate the car's modern form. Thus the low and horizontal radiator grille, aside from its beauty, increases cooling efficiency.

This new car breaks with the usual, too, in its modern power-plant. The V-type 12-cylinder engine, used and approved by more than 45,000 enthusiastic LINCOLN-ZEPHYR owners during 1936 and 1937, has been refined to give an even smoother performance. And new-type valve lifters, with oil cushions, bring even quieter operation. . . . Developing 110 horsepower, it gives 16 to 20 miles to the gallon — twelve thrifty cylinders!

The basic construction of this car is a definite break with tradition. In closed types, body and frame are not two separate units, but one unit, a steel framework, all members welded together. To this rigid framework, steel top, sides and flooring are welded. You ride surrounded by steel — and view road and landscape through wide windshield and windows of safety glass.

The new LINCOLN-ZEPHYR is bigger inside, bigger outside. The wheelbase is lengthened to 125 inches. Great comfort results from the placing of car weight and passenger weight toward the middle. Prove this on your favorite back road!

This year, a new Convertible Sedan and a new Convertible Coupe bring to six the number of LINCOLN-ZEPHYR body types.

This modern "twelve" at medium price is still the only car of its kind at any price!

INSTALMENT 26

Threading her way through the heavy evening traffic at a speed that left an almost unbroken line of startled and frequently audible protesting pedestrians and drivers in her wake, Sandra came at last to Anthony's flat, cut the wheel sharply to the right, and tricked and cajoled the car over and over the accelerator. Over and over again, and still she had telephoned Anthony and at luncheon next day had told him frankly what she wanted and why her husband must not know what she was doing. And though Anthony seemed to be in complete sympathy with her point-of-view, he managed to continue the discussion to a second luncheon engagement and a third—without giving his definite promise to help. He had said at that last meeting, "I'll get in touch with you Enid." And there the matter had rested until that afternoon when she had hurriedly accused her of "running around" with Ancell and—although the memory of this would fill her with a deep loathing for herself—she had slapped Anthony's face instead of Sandra and David, who at the moment were in the room.

That night she had gone to Anthony's home, ostensibly to apologize for her attack upon him, actually to remind him by her presence that she was waiting for his answer. "And Anthony had said, quickly, when Martha had left the room, "I've assumed that little matter for Charles, Enid. He can have a position in the office. I'll see him tonight."

She did not trust Anthony and was not surprised, not shocked when Chet phoned her the confidence Anthony Donovan had inspired hadn't mattered, Chet might agree to give her a divorce but he couldn't make her divorce him. And some day she would tell him.....

x x x

The very few old and intimate friends who had known Martha Ancell as a bride remembered her as a shy, quiet girl and bookworish cheerful person who had been completely and foolishly in love with Chet Ancell. But years of disheartening had worked a marked change in Martha. Disillusioned by the loss of Anthony's love, her good humor had long since given place to bitterness and uselessness. She lived in a swelter of self-contemplation and self-pity along the sidewalk of hatred which any competent alienist would describe as dangerously near to a high-ly dangerous aberration.

Once, a year or two ago, Anthony had called on her and offered something. "You murder me with your kindness," she had said to him once. Martha. Why not put poison in my coffee and get it out of your system?" And Martha had replied in her deep monotone, "There's poison in that coffee you've drunk for a thirty-two times over—but why should I? Besides, I'm afraid you can hold you over the fire as I'm doing now? You can't divorce me and you can't get rid of me—not as your youngster friends put me out of the way for your crime and catch up with you and spoil your fun. Oh, no, my beloved. We go on like this till—till—"

(To Be Continued)

Sandra stood glued to the floor, gripping for one lucid thought. Then she was in motion again, intent on reaching Anthony Ancell's home as quickly as possible.

FIFTY YEARS OF WEDDED LIFE IS CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. E. Spencer Are Honored by Centre Friends

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Spencer Centre was the scene of a delightful celebration on Monday evening when friends from the Centre and neighboring communities gathered to pay tribute to that couple on the occasion of the fiftieth golden anniversary of their wedding.

Fifty years ago on December 28 1887 Elwood Spencer and Sophia Ann Ketcheson were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. For their wedding they started out in a buggy drawn by a spirited team in which they went to the bay shore, there was no bridge then, and found they had missed the ferry and had to cross the bay in an old punt.

Arriving on the opposite side they hurried to the station (on foot of course) when they realized that their fears of missing the train were without foundation as it was two hours late. The young couple spent their honeymoon in Tilbury busy with the groom's brother the late Philip Spencer.

To this alliance was born three children, Dora, Mrs. Herbert Kemp of Toronto, the occasion of the Golden Wedding, and Douglas all of whom were present on Monday evening.

Mrs. Rose Burn then presented a beautiful bouquet of golden flowers from the nephews and nieces to Mr. and Mrs. Spencer.

After a beautifully rendered solo by Mrs. Lorne Mallory of Belleville Mr. D. E. Redner was called to the floor to read the following address:—

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Spencer,

This is one of those rare occasions when we gather to celebrate the fiftieth wedding anniversary and which has become known as a golden wedding.

It is indeed remarkable day fifty years ago when you took those vows in this little old church that our Heavenly Father would grant the privilege of meeting you all to observe this very happy occasion. Very few who were present then have had the opportunity of being here tonight but many are those who have come to express appreciation of you from the days of childhood onward.

While no doubt you have been receiving congratulations from your many friends throughout the years we who are here desire to express our esteem in a special way and ask you to accept these gifts together with our best wishes for the future in the good grant to you not only health and happiness for many years to come but the strength to associate with us in many future gatherings.

"Perhaps your hair is silver
And your step a bit more slow
There is the same old twinkle
In the eyes we used to know.

In the days of long ago.

But the deeds you've left behind you

Will be cherishing in many a heart,

When the call to come up yonder
Bids the truest friends to part.

Signed on behalf of the following family Frank Townsend, Helen Campbell, Emma, C. Fuller, Douglas E. Redner.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer were presented with a pair of chesterfield chairs on behalf of the community, a gift from Mrs. Spencer's friends Donald and Arthur, gold bed spread from Mrs. J. H. Morse and Morley, cut glass water set from Freeman and family and many others including cards and gifts received in U. S. Both replied and thanked everyone for their kind and pleasant evening. The Christmas Spirit Is Where You Find It

By Alan Edgar Haw

Edith Foster hummed the latest tune as she neared the final school-house on her coiffure, then stood back and surveyed herself in the mirror, laughing with satisfaction. Edith was undoubtedly good-looking—and knew it. Her dark hair was nice, set wide apart. The nose was slightly retroussé, the mouth firm—by outlined. Her copper curls framed like the fires rays of sunrise through Autumn leaves.

Hearing her kid brother come out of his room at that stage of proceedings, she called out: "Junior! Howard is coming early to help you with your games for the party. Will you please move that big chair, if he arrives before I get down? It's in my way."

An application of lipstick that transformed the firm set of her lips to a comparable cupid's bow and a judicious dab of rouge to her cheeks, completed her toilette.

"Right o'clock." She frowned as she fastened on her wrist-watch. And Howard had promised to be early to help with her party preparations. Edith's mouth settled firmly to arrive in half an hour. She would tell him a thing or two.

The telephone shrilled in the hall below and broke her fine thoughts. Edith listened as the voice of Howard drifted up the stair-well.

"Edith? Can you hear me? I'm a minute." Then loudly: "Oh, Sis! —Howard."

Edith was already half-way down the stairs, but waiting the hall she skipped to the telephone table.

"Yes, Howard?" sitting down.

"Listen, darling: I'm going to be delayed awhile." His voice was apologetic and Edith answered, a little brown knitted in annoyance. "Can you possibly get along without my help? I'll be over later—soon as I can."

"Why—Howard, I was counting on you. What's happened?"

"Bad luck, some last-minute shopping to do—important."

"Well, you boasted that you had all your shopping done—down to the last detail, you said."

A forced laugh came over the wires.

"This is something special, dearest —very important."

Edith bit her lip—her and she could hold it no longer, as evinced by the color increase in her cheeks and her snapping retort.

"Well—I'd love to know what could be more important tonight than my party. It's a pity you can't be a man of your word."

"Listen honey. I'll explain. I feel fearfully mean about this, but there's an unfortunate family across the bay whose father passed away now or other by the Santa Claus stunt and won't have any Christmas unless somebody comes to the rescue. Mother and three kiddies. Youngest boy's my godson. I'm a bachelor and glad just a week ago; had been out of town all the time. Got home only I—I've just got to do something for them. Sending a basket of pudding, candies, toys and things."

"But why should it be up to you to look after them?"

"Why not? I've no right to ask anyone else to. It is my own selection of duty and I think it's up to me."

"And how about my party? Don't I count? Haven't you a duty to me before anyone else?"

"But—dear, this is something —something different. I just can't enjoy myself, thinking of those poor children and their lonely mother."

Edith was thoroughly angry by this time and how had been used having her own way; practically bossed her own family and liked to have Howard waiting at her beck and hand. Because her furious to be crossed little.

"You're just being stubborn and mean. If you cared enough about me you wouldn't have time to be concerned with other people's affairs. I'll bet when—I come—if we get married, you'd be running off at all hours and leaving me with a second fiddle. Well I won't stand it!"

"Be reasonable, dear." Howard said soothingly. "I'll be there in an hour or two and you can explain—"

"I don't care if you come or not!" Edith almost shouted. Angry tears started as she realized what she had received. To think that he could be so mean, after all the days she had worked and worn herself out preparing food and favours for the party! How could man be such brutes? A good thing she had found him out in time, she told herself.

Heard Daley slowly replaced the telephone receiver on the hook. The corners of his mouth drawn down in a grimace of satisfaction. He left the house, climbed into his coupe, slammed the door with unnecessary violence and kicked at the starter.

So that's the way she fell about it, eh! Selfish, pitiful, by gosh! Spoiled her; he wouldn't go to the party at all. By gosh—and he'd looked forward to it, when aroused, Howard could be stubborn.

His plan to play Santa Claus to the unfortunate Bradley's had originated in the soul and a type conception of the Christmas spirit; a surge of compassion that forced action and left no mind about it. He thought if everyone could do their duty by their neighbor, like the Good Samaritan, what a different, better place the world would be in which to dwell.

The reaction, induced by Edith's selfish and unreasonable attitude, backwashed into his soul and sought to choke him. He fought it off: "Little spitfire! Good thing I found her out before it was too late," he muttered.

Howard visited the butcher shops, the grocers, the candy shops and the toy departments in turn. By the time he was ready to deliver the load of his car towards home he had to squeeze himself behind the wheel, so crowded was the single seat with parcels of various sizes and shapes.

The bookstore was almost deplenished, but he had bought the last one there, he had at first intended. The fact that Edith made such a rude reason as he had spent with a grim satisfaction. He'll show the little boy a Christmas they'd never imagined could be true!

And such food! There was a big turkey, a pudding, cranberries, sweet potatoes, mince pies, canned fruits and vegetables of various kinds, and big plum cake. Howard had the Bradleys seen anything like it.

"God bless you—God bless who-ever's responsible for all this," and tears of joy this time dimmed the poor woman's eyes.

"Why, you sit and find some more sticks down by the shore so we can have a fire and cook the rest of the turkey." And turning to Howard and Mrs. Foster returned home at twelve they had a wonderful time, find the party over and Edith repentant.

"Merry Christmas!" greeted Mr. Foster, at Edith appeared for breakfast table next morning. "He never got to bed—Santa Claus, that is."

Edith frowned on his daughter's face. "What's the trouble now?"

"Hey friend, you're a fine old-fashioned Junior, tearfully.

"Why, what's it to you? mind your own business!"

"Come, come—no squabbling you two," cautioned their father. "I—"

"Dearest," said Howard softly, "I've something to tell you."

"Howard—you? Oh my head, it's all coming back."

"Take it easy, old girl. You've had a touch of sun." Thank goodness you've come around. It's lucky young Billy saw you or you might have been there yet."

Edith struggled to a sitting position. "Billy? Who's Billy? Howard—I'm so glad you're here. Take me home at the place you told me about?"

Howard nodded.

"Dearest, I'm so sorry about last night. I was mean, please forgive me."

"Nonsense, honey. I was pretty thoughtless myself. Should have run over and helped you first and then slipped away to the Bradleys' in a night time; we worked it that way and saved you worry."

"Oh, I wouldn't have had time."

"Forget it, dearest; it's all over now—and I want to give you the Christmas present I was hoping you'd accept."

He fished in his pocket and brought out a small box. Edith opened it and gasped with delight when she saw the pearl and diamond ring flashing in the light.

"Howard, I accept it! Oh—you old darling!"

She threw her arms around his neck. The happy young couple had completely forgotten there were others in the room, but Mrs. Foster coughed once or twice and then suggested: "Will you—er—would you care to stay for dinner?"

Edith looked at Howard. He nodded.

"Let me help you, Mrs. Bradley," urged Edith as the two rose from the table.

"Why didn't Santa Claus come to us?" sobbed little Grace Bradley, as Edith left the room with the dishes.

Mrs. Bradley, rocking a whimpering baby, looked up with a start. But the effort nearly choked her. She would have very near been herself but she tried hard not to cry in front of the children. Her eyes were red from weeping when they were asleep, or away to school.

"Why don't know, Gracie dear," the pale mother murmured. "He knows best, perhaps. But I guess we've had a breakdown—maybe—maybe he'll have a present for Billy!"

Suddenly a loud knock shook the door. Mrs. Bradley started and rose. Billy, her eldest, was fearfully shy and ran behind his mother's skirts.

Her trevire-year-old son nodded, but said nothing. He knew Santa Claus was a myth, and that there was no Santa—not for them anyhow. The little chap had learned a great comfort to his mother. She was always depend on Billy.

Suddenly a loud knock shook the door. Mrs. Bradley started and rose. Billy, seeing an looked at Billy, her eyebrow raised enquiringly. Grace stopped sobbing and held her breath in surprise wide.

"Better see who it is, son," said Mrs. Bradley, quietly.

The lad hastened to the door and opened it. Howard Daley pushed his way in, his arms full of parcels.

"Mrs. Bradley? Well—Santa Claus has arrived, and I'm sorry I'm late and couldn't make it around the bay here; but he left these things in Lakeview and Billy could hardly have them delivered."

Gracie jumped up and down: "Oh mother—Santa Claus—and no—you said Good old Santa Claus; he wouldn't forget—of course he wouldn't—"

"You're sure there's no mistake?" Mrs. Bradley could hardly believe she was not dreaming.

"No mistake at all, Madam," laughed Howard. "It's all yours, and there's more in the car—if the kids can help me in."

Soon every parcel was opened up and the "wrapping paper" littered the room in every direction. Bradley, Gracie and Billy were in ecstasies, as the children examined their toys. There was a big doll, dolly's bed and dolly's clothes; a train, made to run on sleigh, leather mitts and pullover for Billy and a complete set of clothing, tying and toy dogsled for baby Grace.

And such food! There was a big turkey, a pudding, cranberries, sweet potatoes, mince pies, canned fruits and vegetables of various kinds, and big plum cake. Howard had the Bradleys seen anything like it.

"God bless you—God bless whoever's responsible for all this," and tears of joy this time dimmed the poor woman's eyes.

"Why, you sit and find some more sticks down by the shore so we can have a fire and cook the rest of the turkey." And turning to Howard and Mrs. Foster returned home at twelve they had a wonderful time, find the party over and Edith repentant.

Mrs. Bradley, rocking a whimpering baby, looked up with a start. But the effort nearly choked her. She would have very near been herself but she tried hard not to cry in front of the children. Her eyes were red from weeping when they were asleep, or away to school.

"Why don't know, Gracie dear," the pale mother murmured. "He knows best, perhaps. But I guess we've had a breakdown—maybe—maybe he'll have a present for Billy!"

Suddenly a loud knock shook the door. Mrs. Bradley started and rose. Billy, seeing an looked at Billy, her eyebrow raised enquiringly. Grace stopped sobbing and held her breath in surprise wide.

"Better see who it is, son," said Mrs. Bradley, quietly.

The lad hastened to the door and opened it. Howard Daley pushed his way in, his arms full of parcels.

"Mrs. Bradley? Well—Santa Claus has arrived, and I'm sorry I'm late and couldn't make it around the bay

Kingston Garrison and Flyers Victors in VanHorne Series Over Redmen, Kingston City

Flyers Make Top Rung in Standing by Win

ICE IS TERRIBLE

Belleville Have to Beat Perth to be Sure of Playoff Berth

Local district teams won and lost in the Van Horne Memorial series at Kingston last evening, when the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" won over Kingston City by the score of 6-2 and to have the Belleville Redmen fall before the Kingston Garrison by the tune of 2 to 1.

The Airmen's victory elevated the Flyers into the group leadership while they regained from the scrappy Kingston City team, while the defeat for the Redmen sent the Thomas-led sextette hurtled into the cellar position. Garrison's vaulting over the Red men and now leaching the local squad in fifth point.

Following Junior fixtures the R.C.A.F. Flyers tangled with the Kingston City aggression in a game, that at times, was fast and artistic, outbreaks result. Lecompte of the Air Force and Hall of the home team were given major penalties in the initial period following case of fisticuffs. Limestone City scorette scored one each in the first session while they were leading by the count of two to one as the final stanza opened.

The "Flyers" then started attack and played splendid combination to garner four counters before them and outscore the homesters three to nil in the concluding stanza however. Redmen Showing Poor

Displaying their poorest form of the season the Belleville Redmen failed to clinch a play-off berth in the Van Horne series last evening when they dropped a 3 to 1 decision to the Kingston Garrison in the third game of the evening, that saw the game played on rather poor ice, following very previously played fixture in the loop. The Garrison "soldier boys" scored one goal to each respective period while Belleville's lone counter did not materialize until late in the game, as a matter of fact, only a few seconds before full time, when Bill Gordon found home brother Clayton's well-timed pass.

The game was indicative of anything but good hockey as the ice was in badly, making proper combination difficult throughout. Carr-Harris with two and Thurlby with a single were accounted for the Garrison goals. The Redmen's lone counter to the credit of Em Murphy, their ace defenceman, who sustained a two inch gash in his scalp when Peterboro at Belleville O.H.A. fixture on Monday night. CHIPS from the SPORT BLOCK

By Geo. H. Carver

Speaking of endurance contests, the gendarmes and femmes around Paree had a real annual attraction contest that makes the Boston Marathon look like a Sunday afternoon jaunt, a six day bicycle race like a kindergarten event, and a football game like a pink tea. . . . In a way this little event resembles a six-day bike-pushing marathon race contest, the only difference being it is held in the open and it takes thirty days to complete. . . . This Tour de France, for it is what it is called, is the Frenchies what the Derby is to the Briton, the World Series to the Yanks, and the Stanley Cup finals to the Canucks. . . .

Every July pickled bike riders take off from the Parc des Princes, that's their wigwam in the City of Chapeaux. . . . Thirty days later they finish up and parade the final round Bravos of the gaweens and the whistles. . . . That is . . . some of them finish. . . . The grind is a tough one taking thirty-two days to cover a total of Flanders, through snow-swept Pyrenees and Alpian mountains. . . . Only a few days should see the finishers progress with interest, by golly. . . .

The Tour covers three thousand miles . . . usually about eighty contestants start with anywhere from thirty to fifty crossing the finish line. . . . Spain, Germany, France, Switzerland and the Italians usually enter national teams but the rest are mere individual riders. . . .

And the winner? . . . To the local gendarmerie and the maidens and mesdames he is the French Babe Ruth, Don Budge, Man-o-War, all rolled into one. . . . And he makes more dough than the National Banks at their annual convention. . . . Bike makers sign him on the dotted line . . . and then limp, lamp, pedal and other two-wheel pushbuggy manufacturers. . . . He travels all over Yurrop making personal appearances; he's exhibited in Paris wax figure palaces while his articles are eagerly sought by the Parisian dollies. . . . He becomes the idol of the French kids and sits pretty for the rest of his life. . . .

Whether or not the lads from other countries will let the gang out it takes we don't know but to date the Frenchies have never been won by a foreigner. . . .

At the end of a day's run each team is quartered at a different hotel so that they won't get them to bed. . . . Dinner is served while in bed, with the wives, sweethearts, wives, others their searchers and pals. . . . Then after dinner, one rider is known to have received seven sacks of mail daily. . . . Then at last they are exhausted to sleep and stay up all night playing pitch to keep their minds off the long grind ahead of them. . . .

Near the end of the race things begin to happen. . . . Everyone's out for the honors of the grind. . . . Tempers begin to fray, nerves become jangled and minor things cause major trouble. . . .

In one occasion a French rider and a German pedalist were peacefully cruising along when they got in a fight over nothing. . . . They dispatched and wrangled. . . . Then leaving their bikes they peeled their coats and went at each other with flying fists. . . . A radio car passed, the observer giving his listeners a blow by blow description of the roadside scrap. . . . Realizing what they were doing and that they were eliminating their lesser opponents they suddenly stopped the fisticuffs, shook hands, hurriedly mounted and rode away. . . .

Riders average about 125 miles per day for twenty-seven days without much bad fire fighting. . . . Yet despite all this the French publicity complains that changes to the rules are making the Tour easier each year. . . . They now claim that the boys are nothing but a bunch of sissies. . . . Possibly that is due to the fact that the Frenchman loves endurance in his athletics. . . . However they are still in love with their annual Tour which yet holds the honor of being the longest race in the world.

Association to Distribute Hockey Sticks Among Juniors

Toronto, Dec. 30 (CP)—The Ontario Hockey Association executive granted playing transfers to twenty-four players at a meeting which concluded early today after lengthy discussions of problems that had arisen among Ontario clubs recently.

The meeting also decided to hold a complimentary banquet Jan. 8 in honor of Bill Hewitt, Toronto, former O.H.A. president and recently appointed member of the Ontario Athletic Commission, and W. A. Hewitt, for 18 years secretary-treasurer of the association.

Proposal of Ray Reynolds, Sarnia, to have Sarnia district considered a metropolitan area in facilitate distribution of players between Sarnia and Point Edward was approved and the meeting decided to allot $500 for distribution of hockey sticks among junior players in Ontario.

The O.H.A. agreed to sponsor a resolution to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association for a district representation at annual and special meetings of the Dominion body be increased from two to three so as to provide direct representation to the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, an affiliate of the O.H.A.

Secretary Hewitt was instructed to write Ottawa Senators and Montreal Maroons asking that the suspended players had failed to play in accordance with the residence clause of the C.A.H.A. constitution brought forth the declaration from representatives of the club it might not be able to continue after this year in the O.H.A. intermediate loop.

The club's playing lists had been reduced from thirteen to eight since Oct. 15, last on which players could be suspended, and the team was unable to replace the losses from an industrial league in the city because of the industrial league rules.

A large number of transfer applications were favorably dealt with.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

By Ken J. Calling

In the near future.

Oddities in the local realm of sport, a la Walter Winchell . . . Opening hockey match of the season was thrilling over a thousand fans at the Belleville arena, when between periods the stratus of "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" emanated out of the loudspeakers. They were playing a friendly game of cribbage. Sergeant Harry Thompson and Constable William McRiem of the Provincial Police were battling it out in a friendly game the other night. Harry dealt, the boys thought, and Harry, a little, Mac played a deuce. Sergt. Harry duplicated in sequence for two points. Mac played a third deuce for six points and Harry came back with the fourth deuce for 12 holes. This oddity was about a million to one shot, but strange as it may seem the identical same four cards were played the very next hand with the reverse. . . . Personally we saw the cards shuffled and dealt twice. It may seem that lady bowlers have precdominated at alleys at the Y.M.C.A., this season but not so another oddity. Leading all bowlers on the season's average is Mrs. Ken Johnston, Mrs. Ken V. Smith, Mrs. A. Newman, Mrs. R. Mitchell, Mrs. H. Ellis, Mrs. Lorne Mrs. Beale, Mrs. M. Moon and Mrs. G. Shaw. The ex-Cat's meow of the local circle of interest being taken locally in organizing a senior basebal club in Belleville for the season of 1938, however.

Trenton and Campbellford drew first blood in the opening game of the two newspapers Trent Valley League fast night, the former defeating Stirling 4-1 while the Campbellford boys went on a scoring bee to pounce Tweed and Belleville entry to the tune of 10-4 in Campbellford. The Belleville entry however, clinched with interest throughout Hastings County.

It's a case of in-again, out-again, Finnegan insofar as the Ice Hockey fate of the Van Horne series is concerned. The C.A.H.A. "Flyers" finished one behind to defeat Kingston and push them out of the group top notch but now they are tied with the same themselves, while the Belleville Redmen stayed their previous game of the year and dropped into the cellar position. Left for the Red Men's last night would have practically assured them of a play-off berth in the league but now have the task of having to beat Perth in by a four point game next week.

COURIER SQUAD WINS OPENER 4-1

Trenton Defeats Stirling with Both Teams Showing Improvement

Stirling, Dec. 30 (Special)—The 1937-38 schedule of the Trent Valley Hockey League got under way last night with the first of the contending teams having their first game. Trenton Courier squad took Stirling into camp to the tune of 4-1 in a game that gave a good crowd of fans plenty of real thrills. Judging from the performance of both teams for their first try-out of the season local hockey enthusiasts are in for a real treat in the schedule progresses.

The official opening ceremonies were carried out in the usual custom with Dr. W. Findley and C. A. Wells and T. W. Solmes taking the ice for the opening. Two minutes after the period began Robinson gave the Stirling crowd their first thrill when he scored plenty to cheer about when he broke through the blue-line on a lone rush. Trenton came back strong and Fox scored the equal game for the Stirlingites with only three minutes left in the period. Johnson got the tying goal, when he took a pass from Davis to beat Fox.

Shortly after the start of the second period Trenton scored again, this time Anderson getting the goal on one of the best passing plays of the evening. The crowd groaned when Butler's lone tally was called back for an off-side. Lemoire scored Trenton's third counter on a lone rush. Hefty body checking began to appear as Stirling pressed the speed increased but the period ended 3-1 for Trenton. The same fast and furious hockey held final period and the cleanness of the conflict is exemplified in the fact that only three penalties were served during the entire game, two to Stirling and two to Trenton. Johnson and Miller combined for the best play of the game, the former making the shot, final score 4-1.

Davis, Johnson and Miller looked the best for the Courier squad with second line of Johnson, Ingles and Hobbs a promising group of youngsters. Fox and Fry starred for Stirling in defence.

Robinson, Fraser and Rodgers did a fine job on the front line for Stirling but could not click with the combination the kid line of Butler, Dalnard and Morton were sent out in the last period. Perth, Perth wins round 6-3.

TORONTO ARGOS ARE OUTSTANDING TEAM IN CANADIAN SPORT

By ELMER DULMAGE

Toronto, Dec. 30 (CP)—By the slim margin of one point Toronto Argonauts, national football champions, were the outstanding team in Canadian sport this year. The nation's sports writers have no doubts about it.

Voting in the year-end Canadian Press poll, the Blue and White lads all the way with Winnipeg Monarchs, Dominion hocking champs and Montreal Cup winners, second. In third place was the Canadian hockey team, Sudbury Tigers.

Across the country the palm was handed to Harry Hayman's football associates, beaten only twice in 19 games and Winnipeg Monarchs, Dominion stands against Sarnia Imperials, the 1936 eastern champions, and Vancouver Meralomas, 1935 Canadian titlists. Other outfits ran far behind in the voting.

Big Vote For Monarchs

Winnipeg's great amateur hockey team, which startled Toronto by the methodical perfection of its passing attack in capturing the Memorial Cup finals against Copper Cliff, won a huge total. Duke Keats' junior team had collected in previous years.

Monarchs, coached by Harry Neil, finished their season's play over Copper cliff with a 7-0 triumph. Perhaps no other team in 1937 established such a brilliant and consistent a Dominion final.

Canada's senior hockey champions in the polling ran New Westminster Salmonbellies, Mimico Intermediate champions; Winnipeg's football Bombers and Montreal Canadiens, who made a great stand against Detroit Red Wings in the National Hockey League playoffs before going down in five games.

Montreal Most Disappointing

Football also contributed the most disappointing factor of the sports year. The writers were almost unanimous that Montreal Indians, annual title holders of Johnny Pe-raro, were the most disappointing team in the country. Scarcely another team or individual were mentioned.

Indians won only two games in the Big Four—one, incidentally, was at the expense of Argos. There was tremendous power in the Montreal wingline, speed and all - round strength in the backfield. But nothing happened. Touted as potential champions, the Indians never threatened.

Victory Sweep

In successive games the Falcons annexed the City Basketball championship, when they defeated the Hawks 42 to 32 in the fast, thrilling evening, eliminating the latter quintette in two successive games and thereby annexing the basketball finals. Headed by Captain Bill Quinnette the Falcons displayed triumphantly through the entire "Y" loop league cage schedule without sustaining a single loss and continued their undefeated record through the entire city play-offs and winning the city basketball championship.

Paced by Captain Bill Bateman, the Falcons displayed a torrid initial period onslaught and were leading by the score of 26 to 14 at the half time. In this matter Falcons were exactly reversed over last week, when the Falcons were forced to four players against five, however, Bateman and Cole led the Falcons with 18 and 10 points respectively. Jack Dickens was the chief scorer for the losers, while Hawks staged a remarkable comeback in the second half, as they bettered the Falcons by four points in the last stanza. Wickerson, Dickens and Martin teamed scientific in the second half as the Hawks threatened, but the team's march had piled up in the initial half by the now-champions proved too large to overcome.

H. C. Hatch Quitting on Account of Illness of His Trainer

Toronto, Dec. 30 (CP)—Death and sickness have disrupted two of Canada's most powerful racing stables known wherever thoroughbreds are raced as the starters left North America.

The famed black and yellow silks of the Seagram stable of Waterloo, Ont., were seldom seen this year in turf battles in Canada and the United States. After the death last February 1 of Eddie Seagram, the establishment was taken over by a son, J. K. Prowse, lease on which virtually retired the colors. At a public auction the thoroughbreds went under an auctioneer's hammer.

So the colors would not fall by the wayside entirely, friends bought back three or four horses. They did nothing to uphold the honor of the former great stable.

Next year the double has been of H. C. Hatch of Agincourt, Ont., will be seen less regularly than in other years. Head of the star handicap performers of the Hatch stable are including Mousseye, the 1936 King's Plate winner — will be auctioned next month in California. Herbert Jack Hatch, brother of the owner, announced here the major reason for the breaking up of the stable, veteran trainer who joined the stable two years ago, has been ill nearly every major event, including twenty-four hours in the King's Plate, Canadian turf classic.

After the death of James, the stable was disbanded only to reach great heights again under the ownership of Seagram's sons. Later E. P. Seagram carried on alone.

Hatch's horse, Jean Bart, won nearly every major Canadian race. He furthered east-west feeling by winning a combination of thoroughbreds west each year.

For years the addition of all turfmen—to win the King's Plate—studded the group. It was successful finally in 1935 when the ebony-coated pedaling. Monaseep, aged horse on his, Goldtree won for him again in 1937.

Another year passes into Canadian history and though 1937 has not been productive of spectacular events in the Dominion far-reaching developments which may supply headlines of the future, have taken place. The personalities and events making the year's nation-wide news are reviewed here. Not unprecedented, but highly dramatic was the action of Lieut.-Governor J. C. Bowen, of Alberta, in reserving signature to legislation passed by the Social Credit government of that province and placing the bill in the hands of the governor-general for direction. Politically dramatic too was the enforcement of the Padlock law, passed by Premier Duplessis' government in Quebec assertedly as a curb upon Communism, and suddenly utilized against certain publications in that province. Similarly bitter opposition voiced by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, of Ontario, against inroads by the U. S.-sponsored Committee for Industrial Organization among the workers of Ontario, which was carried into negotiations following the first strike in the automobile factory centre of the province, drew lengthy comment. Mr. Hepburn is pictured with officials of the company and of the union studying the agreement which eventually ended the strike. Lord Tweedsmuir, Canada's governor-general became the first holder of the vice-regal office in the Dominion's history to personally visit the Canadian Arctic and subArtic when he travelled by railway aeroplane and boat westward and northward in a summer expedition. The year also saw informal but actual inauguration of the transCanada airway still under construction, when Hon. C. D. Howe, federal minister of transport, flew from Montreal to Vancouver over the proposed route in approximately 19 hours. The federal prime minister, Rt. Hon. W. L. M. King, officially visited Washington during the year as did Lord Tweedsmuir. Mr. King's visit was formally returned by U. S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull in appearances at Ottawa and Toronto, and unofficially by President Roosevelt in a brief call to Victoria, B. C.

POPE PIUS XI . . . whose serious illness turned the eyes of millions of devout Roman Catholics toward the Vatican and whose recovery astounded most newspaper readers.

GETULIO VARGAS . . . copied from Italy and Germany the principles or fascism and in a sudden coup introduced them to Brazil with himself as dictator.

Who They Are— What They Did

By Central Press Canadian

Here is the array of men and women, automobiles and boats, who contributed to the sports history of the past year with new records, new titles and new thrills for the fans. An imposing array to reign for a year perchance be replaced by others as 1938 slips into eternity.

WALTER YOUNG, of Verdun Que., who not only won the Boston marathon but through his victory landed himself a job.

TEDDY MORRIS, of Toronto Argonauts, who was chosen for the Jeff Russel memorial trophy, awarded yearly to the most valuable player to his team. Morris also played a big part in Argo's winning of the Dominion rugby title, defeating Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

HARRY COOPER, of Chicago, who won the Canadian open golf title played at Toronto. The "Lightborse" played consistent golf on a wind and rain-swept course to take Canada's biggest money tournament.

HENRY COTTON, of England, for his brilliant showing on the links winning the British Open title. He also defeated Denny Shute U. S., P.G.A. winner, in a special match.

ROSS "SANDY" SOMERVILLE, of London, Ont., who retained his Canadian amateur golf title.

JACK ADAMS, manager of the champion Detroit Red Wings, who captured the Stanley Cup for the second consecutive year under his genial coaching.

CAPT. GEORGE EYSTON, of England, and the powerful automobile which he drove over the Salt Flats, at Bonneville, Utah, to set a new world land speed record of 311.42 miles per hour.

DON BUDGE, of Los Angeles, Calif., who came into his own as a net star by winning the United States men's singles tennis championship and the Wimbledon title. These two titles followed his great showing in leading the U.S. Davis Cup team to victory and the retiring of the old tennis mug.

WAR ADMIRAL, three-year-old son of Man O' War, owned by Samuel D. Riddle, winner of the Kentucky derby, the Preakness stakes and many other stake races, to be stamped as the outstanding thoroughbred of the year.

SIR MALCOLM CAMPBELL, of England, who burned from car to boat racing, and broke the former record held by Gar Wood of the United States. He drove his racing boat, Bluebird, over the waters of Lake Maggiore, Switzerland, at a speed of 125.5 miles per hour.

DOROTHY ROUND, of England, who caused quite an upset when she captured the women's singles title at Wimbledon this year.

JOE LOUIS, of Detroit and Chicago, the Alabama negro, who knocked out James J. Braddock to win the heavyweight championship of his world. His became the first colored fighter to capture the crown since Jack Johnson's time.

RANGER, owned and skippered by Commodore Harold Vanderbilt, which repelled another "attack" by T. O. M. Sopwith, of England, on the America's Cup. Sopwith's Endeavour II was soundly trounced in four straight races off the New England coast.

MLLE. ANITA LIZANA, of Chile, winner of the United States women's singles tennis title, in a batting and fielding contributed to the winning ways of his team for the second straight year. He is called as the second most valuable player in the American league.

JOE DI MAGGIO, of San Francisco, outfielder and outstanding player of the New York Yankees, winners of the world's series. His

CAMPBELLFORD DEFEATS "DUKES"

Condition Takes Toll as Locals Lose by 10-4 Count

TRENT VALLEY LOOP

Showing the decided absence of condition due to adequate pre-season training, the Campbellford "Dukes" dropped their opening scheduled game in the Trent Valley League to the Campbellford sextette by the score of 10 to 4. Conditioning proved the difference between the squads as they battled in a free-scoring contest at Campbellford last evening.

Icing a squad that did not have an opportunity to provide themselves with a single practice, the Belleville "Dukes", defending their 1937 championship laurels, contested the game contrarywise, but before the final gong sounded, Jimmie Semark scored all four Belleville goals while Reddick, Phillips, Coach and Keating were the chief marksmen for the home team. The "Dukes" play an exhibition game in Picton this evening during which Coach Frank Keating will endeavor to introduce some new faces and add strength to his squad for the future.

Team of Veterans

The Hyndman management intended a team of veterans, interspersed with youthful assistants, to battle with the Campbellford "Dukes", while for the greater part Manager Smith depended upon his veteran players who carried his squad to a league championship last spring. The lack of practice on their part due to inclement weather and doubtless accounted for the two registered against the locals. The better team won on the night's play, however, as the homesters were more seasoned and ran wild in the final stanza, when the "Dukes" were leg-weary and tired. The game was keenly contested throughout, but was initial two frames with the lack of condition taking its toll in the last stanza. The Dukes meet the Tweed entry at Tweed next Monday night.

The lineups:

Belleville "Dukes"—Goal, Hinkley; defence, Ashler and Sunderland; centre, Fred McGuire; wings, Hatley and St. Louis; alternates, Semark, Runna and Day.

Campbellford Locals — Hepenstall, defence. Lambert, Wilkes; centre, Coach; wings, Reddick and Phillips; alternates, Ktree, Blake and Keating.

Referee: Eddie Bush of Campbellford.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

"The Barrier"

and "Beg, Borrow or Steal"

Spread across a background of the breath-taking scenic splendor of the great North Woods, the love story of a dashing army officer and a beautiful girl, is the theme of the Belle screen in "The Barrier", picturization of the famous novel by Rex Beach, with a cast of film favorites headed by Jean Parker, Jean Parker, Leo Carrillo, Otto Kruger, Robert Barrat, Andy Clyde and Sara Haden.

Leo Carrillo creates one of the most striking characterizations of his long list of successful roles on the part of Poleon, the French-Canadian trapper, whose scenic vitality make the Canuck seem a living person. Jean Parker, who was so successful in another great outdoors picture "Sequoia", tops all her previous performances in "The Barrier".

The Barrier" offers the most important role James Ellison has had on the screen. He has played in the "Hopalong Cassidy" pictures, but this film offers him a far richer role than any other he has had . . . and the results would indicate that there will be more featured parts for the young actor, as Ellison is. He has one of the most pleasing personalities seen on the screen players in the pictures today, and a solid background of acting experience that shows in his work.

Director Lee Selander and photographer George Barnes have made the fullest possible use of the gorgeous natural settings in the North Woods and the outdoor shots in the picture rank with the finest scenic spectacles ever filmed.

A Barrel of Laughs

Frank Morgan, of the nervous eyebrow Morgans, heads an all-comedy cast in "Beg, Borrow or Steal", which brings a barrel of laughs, as the second feature attraction on the same program, featured are Florence Rice and John Beal.

"Beg, Borrow or Steal" presents more comedians to the square foot than any recent picture coming out of Hollywood and is hailed as a fast, nonsensical laugh feast of entertainment. Among the comics male and female are Frank Morgan, Dennis, George Givot, Cora Witherspoon, Herman Bing, E. E. Clive, Billy Rhodes and Vladimir Sokoloff, to name but a few of the funsters. All is capped by a story that is different, and doubtless will be found to be highly entertaining.

AT THE CAPITOL

"End of the Trail"

Zane Grey's heroic novel of those brave pages in American history when the Indian braves and his redoubtable Rough Riders nailed the Stars and Stripes to San Juan Hill and named the United States a world empire in a baptism of fire and blood, intelligently pictured in "End of the Trail", at the Capitol as the stellar holiday program feature on Friday and Saturday.

The film cites Jeffrey Holt in the type of role that first endeared him to audiences everywhere. He is seen as an adventurous, life-loving cowboy who enlists as a Rough Rider for the founder Teddy Roosevelt's army and finds instead a love for a beautiful young nurse, admirably played by lovely Louise Henry. His friendly rival for the girl's affections is Stanley Andrews, Dr. Jim Williams, who in the aftermath of the war is forced to battle Holt on opposite sides of the law.

The dramatic circumstances surrounding these three is vividly articulated against the virile, action-packed scenes of war and strife. Particularly outstanding as a scene of heart-pounding power and excitement is the thrilling charge of the Rough Riders up San Juan Hill gallantly led by Colonel Roosevelt.

Added Features

In addition to this splendid western thriller, a select program of short features is also offered. A novelty reel "Stranger than Fiction"; a wonderful reel "Vaudeville is Back", the latest News Events and a Willie Howard comedy "Playboy No. 1" complete the grand show.

TWEED DEFEATS MADOC 4 TO 3

Last Year's Trent Valley Champs Start Season with Win

Madoc, Dec. 30—(Special)—The local hockey season got under way here Tuesday night when Madoc won a hard-fought game at the Arena on Wednesday night by a score of 4-3. The local boys are all juniors and the experience of the visitors proved too much for them. The home boys have the makings of a good team and as the season goes on will become a better balanced team. Many old faces are gone from the Madoc line-up and in their place are some youngsters who had their first taste of real hockey in this game.

Madoc by virtue of two penalties secured a three goal lead in the first period. Tweed scored one in the second but with only two minutes to play in the third period scored the winning goal. Marvin Hicken also paid tribute to the visitors and outlined new plans and activities to interest and develop all those participating.

Three rousing cheers given the visitors and a hearty dinner tucked away closed another of the happy events where friendship is welded and sees the road along the road to manhood and good citizenship.

In a 12-month period, England had only 115 murders, as compared to 2,440 in the United States during the same time.

A clock which ticks every second would have to run for almost 32 years in order to tick one billion times.

PREP. JUNIOR GROUPS ENJOY INDOOR PICNIC

Hilarity and enthusiasm reigned supreme at the local Y.M.C.A. Wednesday as members of the "Prep" and "Junior" groups assembled for a unique event in their holiday programme, the Indoor Picnic.

Games and contests on the gym. floor, swimming in the large pool, dinner and programme in the auditorium were high lights of the afternoon.

Two teams having won highest and standing from the fall term were guests of honor at dinner. These were Preps, "Live Wires" George Wannacott, Jack Learoyd, Earl Woodley, Doug. Ashley, Hedley Barragar, Gordon Watkins and Jim Jackson.

Juniors, "Gas House Gang", Art Griffin, Blake Kerr, Doug Diamond, Norm Cunningham, Doug Soule, Bruce McBride, Albert Sedgwick, Murray Jones, Geo. Cooper, Kid Campbell and Bruce Hepenstall.

Mr. Shortt welcomed the boys and new members, congratulated the successful teams and dwelt upon important features of the winter and spring programme. Mr. Hicken also paid tribute to the winners and outlined new plans and activities to interest and develop all those participating.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTEBOOK

I was laying on the living room floor thinking and pop was smoking in himself in his private chair, saying, What's on your mind, young fellow, something icky or has a pleasant klank?

I been making up riddles, I said, and I ask Professor Einstein started that way, believe and now he can tell you the distance between a 40 watt bulb and 40 light years, if he's in the mood.

Do you want to hear some of my riddles, pop? I said and he said, Well, one or 2 mils not be habit forming.

Well, here's one, what grow up and never comes down? I said, and pop said, Quick service when you're wailing in a hurry on the ground floor.

No sir, a kite that gets cawt in the telefone wires, I said, and pop said, Doesn't it ever come down?

No sir, it just gradually disappears, I said.

With it does, and I said, Here's another one, pop, what goes down and never comes up?

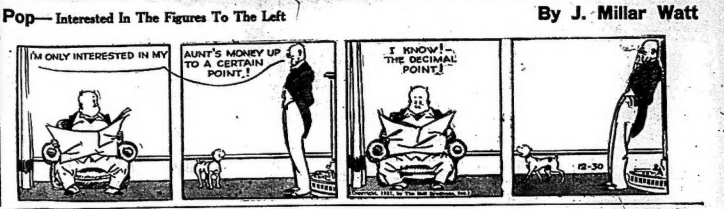
An elevator when you're wailing in a hurry on an upper floor, pop said, and I said, No sir, a pearl diver with his feet caught between 2 big rocks.

How true, and yet how morbid, pop said, and I said, What stays still forever and neither ups or downs?

A cheese sarwitch gulped by a mad worrying over the depression, pop said, and I said, O, pop, that's rite.

The dooce it is, pop said, and I said, Sure it is, pop, how did you guess it?

Pure intuition, pop said. Now here's one for you. Who goes to bed immeedtly after a test riddle? he said, and I said, Me.



Rite, pop said.

Being the end of the riddles.
